From the Boston Eve'g Transcript, May 7, '91.

— The Epictetus saying, as given by Walt Whitman in his own quite utterly dilapidated physical case, is, a "little spark of soul dragging a great lum-mux of corpse-body clumsily to and fro around."

Camden N.J May 12 '91

Could it remember distinctly enough to authenticate the desk (the pict: herby returned as your note seems to involve) — but I know I had a good time in the Times — & heartily send my best respects & love to the boys one & all now there — I send my last photo: Tack it up if you like on the wall you all must congregate.
