

Marilyn Zurmuehlen Working Papers in Art Education

ISSN: 2326-7070 (Print)
ISSN: 2326-7062 (Online)

---

Volume 14 | Issue 1 (1997)

pps. 150-150
DOI: 10.17077/2326-7070.1324

---

Mentor's Introduction

Graeme Chalmers

Copyright © 1997 Working Papers in Art Education.

---

Recommended Citation

Chalmers, Graeme. "Mentor's Introduction." Marilyn Zurmuehlin Working Papers in Art Education 14 (1997): 150-150.

Hosted by Iowa Research Online

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in Marilyn Zurmuehlen Working Papers in Art Education by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.

mentor's introduction

GRAEME CHALMERS

The University of British Columbia

Karen Knutson comes to doctoral studies in art education with a background in art history. Rather than focus specifically on the museum educator, Knutson's cutting edge work focuses on museum exhibitions. Museology itself is seen as having to do with methods and approaches to education. Knutson shows that curatorial concerns are educational concerns. Exhibition designers are educators and "auteurs" with subjective voices. As she states, "the exhibition itself, as the systematic and persuasive articulation of ideas ... needs to be more critically examined."

As a site for such critical examination, Knutson consider the hanging, and possible re-hanging of the works of Canadian artist Emily Carr. As Knutson points out, as an artist and as a woman Carr is something of a Canadian "legend:" the subject of a growing critical literature. Americans more familiar with the works of and literature surrounding Georgia O'Keeffe will be able to apply the questions that Karen Knutson asks of Emily Carr: How has she been "constructed" by curators and authors? How has her work been "hung?" "In what ways does "display" = "education?" If one was to re-hang Georgia (or Emily) what would the (educational) issues be around the use of text?