

1970

The Success

Donald Justice

Follow this and additional works at: <https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview>

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation

Justice, Donald. "The Success." The Iowa Review 1.1 (1970): 7-7. Web.
Available at: <https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.1004>

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.

THE SUCCESS

He asks for directions, but the street
Is swaying before him drunkenly.
The buildings lean together. There is some
Conspiracy of drawn curtains against him.

And all around him he can sense the beauty
Of unseen arms, of eyes that slide off elsewhere.
Someone is living his life here, someone
Is turning back sheets meant to receive his body.

This is the address if not the destination.
The moonlight dies along his wrist. His hand
Slips off in the darkness on its stubborn mission,
Roving the row of mailboxes for the name it dreams.

He enters. The doorman nods and vanishes.
The elevator ascends smoothly to his desire.
The light in the hall, the door against his cheek . . .
He has arrived. He recognizes the laughter.