History and technique of traditional European hand papermaking and related aesthetics; students gain confidence in pursuing independent production of handmade papers or undertaking related research in their own particular areas of interest; fiber preparation, sheet forming, and drying/finishing methods; concurrent readings and discussions of related history and aesthetics; special projects selected by student with instructor approval. Same as 01Z:133.

108:142 History of Western Letterforms
History of Western letterforms, with focus on tools, materials, techniques; the major hands, their place in history, their influence on modern times; creation of letterforms using appropriate tools; hands-on approach with emphasis on understanding rather than mastery. Same as 01Z:142.
108:143 Calligraphy: Foundational Hands 3 s.h.
Fundamental calligraphic skills using Roman majuscule, Humanistic minuscule, Italic; basic layout and color theory incorporated into letter practice. Same as 01Z:143.

108:144 Calligraphy: Italic and Script Hands 3 s.h.
Hands-on instruction in italic and pressure pen scripts; historical relationships, effects on modern letterforms. Same as 01Z:144.

108:145 Calligraphy: Blackletter Hands 3 s.h.
Development of proficiency in various hands, from vertical Textura to floridly gothic cursive; blackletter's historical connections with other disciplines.

108:146 Studies in Letter Arts 3 s.h.
Special topics and advanced projects in calligraphy and letter arts. Prerequisites: 108:140 or 108:141 or 108:142 or 108:143. Same as 01Z:146.

108:150 Bookbinding I: Materials and Techniques 3 s.h.
Hands-on introduction to materials and techniques commonly used in bookbinding. Same as 01Y:150.

108:151 Bookbinding II 3 s.h.
Build on skills acquired in 108:150; projects to complete six bindings based on historical and contemporary models; sewing styles, board attachments, endband types; nonadhesive and case-bound structures, varied materials and binding styles, their effects on structure, aesthetic considerations, further development of solid binding skills; historical development of particular binding practices. Prerequisites: 108:150. Same as 01Y:151.

108:152 Bookbinding III 3 s.h.
Bookbinding structures based on historical and contemporary models; differences in various binding practices, how these differences affect function, why the styles developed; experience choosing appropriate structures for particular uses; emphasis on fine tuning skills and techniques required for advanced binding practices; sewn endbands, rounding and backing, sewing on varied supports, board attachments, and covering methods. Requirements: (for 108:152) 108:150 and 108:151; (for 01Y:152) 01Y:150 or 01Y:151 or 01Y:150 or 108:150 or 108:151. Same as 01Y:152.

108:153 Studies in Bookbinding 3 s.h.
Topics related to hand bookbinding. Same as 01Y:153.

108:154 Artists’ Books 3 s.h.
Exploration of the book as a form for artistic expression; emphasis on conceptual development; relationship between content, form, and structure; how a book's structure and design can enhance and integrate part of the work’s meaning. Prerequisites: 01Y:150 or 108:150. Same as 01Y:156.

108:155 Historical Book Structures 3 s.h.
Historical development of book structures examined through surviving examples, construction of historical models. Prerequisites: 01Y:150 or 108:150.

108:156 Boxes and Enclosures 3 s.h.
Hands-on techniques for a variety of book enclosures; appropriateness, aesthetic issues concerning box design; Japanese wraparound case, drop-spine box, hinged and lidded boxes, slipcase; technical skill development. Prerequisites: 108:150. Same as 01Y:156.

108:157 Moveable/Sculptural Books 3 s.h.
Varied formats for moveable and/or sculptural books; history; readings, hands-on model making. Same as 01Y:157.
108:158 Pop-Up Book Structures 3 s.h.
Hands-on exploration of varied aspects of paper engineering for bookmaking; historical and modern models studied and executed. Prerequisites: 108:150. Same as 01Y:158.

108:160 Letterpress I 3 s.h.
Mechanics of letterpress printing, typography, and design as applied to hand set metal type and edition printing; printing on a Vandercook proof press; introduction to photopolymer plates and methods of illustration related to edition printing, historical aspects of printing technology, typecasting, type classification; role of letterpress in modern private press and contemporary artist books. Same as 01P:160.

108:161 Handprinted Book: Design and Production 3 s.h.
Exploration of problems in hand-printing books--choice of manuscript, editing, design, typesetting, proofreading, printing and binding; histories of printing and of the book, emphasis on 20th- and 21st-century book design and literature. Same as 01P:161.

108:162 Book and Publication Design 3 s.h.
Students plan, design, and produce a book using Adobe Creative Suite; page layout software, typography, page layout and design, book formatting, handling of image files, preparation of materials for print and other contemporary book media; history of book design, book design in contemporary publishing; visit to University of Iowa Libraries Special Collections. Prerequisites: 01D:100 or 108:160. Same as 01P:162.

108:163 Digital to Letterpress Book Design 3 s.h.
Digital typesetting and book design; chapbook production using photopolymer plates and Vandercook presses; text and content, book typography, practical and aesthetic considerations. Same as 01P:163.

108:164 Digital Design for Artists’ Books 3 s.h.
Introduction to concepts, techniques, and technologies used to design and produce artists’ books with personal computers and graphic design software. Same as 01P:164.

108:165 Innovative Letterpress 3 s.h.
Creation of the visual book using letterpress printing; narrative, serialization, type as graphic, physical structure of the book; traditional letterpress printing, monoprinting, nontraditional letterpress techniques using technology ranging from metal to digital. Same as 01P:165.

108:166 Studies in Printing 3 s.h.
Special topics and advanced projects in printing.

Printmaking possibilities of the Vandercook Proof Press; print type, printing of relief blocks, line drawings, non-traditional print processes; completion of small projects to acquaint students with techniques and equipment, a print series, and an artist’s book; discussion focuses on creating a visual narrative, sequence and series, structures for artist’s books, use of type as a graphic element. Prerequisites: 108:160, 108:163, or 108:165. Same as 01P:167.

108:168 Computer Graphics for Book Arts 3 s.h.
Introduction to Adobe Creative Suite graphic design software (InDesign, Illustrator, Photoshop); emphasis on using software for book arts applications; typesetting and pagination of multipage documents; methods for combining text and image; tools and techniques for digital illustration; creation and manipulation of digital images; preparations of digital files for desktop or letterpress printing and services bureau output.
108:169 Letterpress II  3 s.h.
Builds on skills acquired in 108:160; issues of book design and production related to letterpress printing; exploration of hand-set metal, digital typesetting, printing from photopolymer plates, and imagemaking; press mechanics and operation; students produce a letterpress printed chapbook or artist book; publication philosophies, manuscript acquisition, and topics specific to literary fine press and artist books; historical and contemporary context for literary fine press publications and artist book work. Prerequisites: 108:160.

Topics such as book design, printing, paper arts, letterforms, typography.

108:181 Literature and the Book  3 s.h.
English majors may apply this course to the following area and/or period requirement. AREA: Literary Theory and Interdisciplinary Studies. PERIOD: Early Literatures through 17th Century, 18th- and/or 19th-Century Literature, or 20th- and/or 21st-Century Literature. Same as 008:130.

108:182 The Book in the Middle Ages  3 s.h.
Relation of text, decoration, function, creators, and audience in different genres of medieval manuscript books 400-1500 A.D. Same as 16E:120.

108:183 The Transition from Manuscript to Print  3 s.h.
Western manuscripts and books 1200-1600; changes in production and distribution methods and in how texts were used, in cultural context. Same as 021:258, 16E:118.

108:185 Introduction to Book Studies  3 s.h.
Theory and practice of book studies; meanings of word and image in the book format; comparative study of other media, applied study of the codex as physical artifact. English majors may apply this course to the following area and/or period requirement. AREA: Literary Theory and Interdisciplinary Studies. PERIOD: Early Literatures Through 17th Century, or 18th- and/or 19th-Century Literature, or 20th- and/or 21st-Century Literature. Same as 008:134.

108:186 Topics in Book History  3 s.h.
Authorship, publishing, and so forth within specific historical and cultural contexts. English majors may apply this course to the following area and/or period requirement. AREA: Literary Theory and Interdisciplinary Studies. PERIOD: Early Literatures Through 17th Century, 18th- and/or 19th-Century Literature, or 20th- and/or 21st-Century Literature. Same as 008:190.

108:200 Special Project for Graduate Students  arr.
Independent study.

108:201 Book Studies Workshop  1 s.h.
Discussion of issues central to book studies; workshop approach to current projects.

108:205 Final Project  arr.
Project for graduate certificate.

108:210 Individual Instruction in Papermaking/Paperworks  arr.
Traditional papermaking or creation of works of art using paper pulp as the medium; independent projects.

Bookbinding and artists' book works; independent projects.
108:216 Individual Instruction in Printing

108:220 History of Readers and Reading 3 s.h.
Cultural nature of reading practices in historic and contemporary contexts of reading; reading communities; dimensions of gender, age, class, religion, race, ethnicity; examples of recent scholarship; use of primary resources; seminar. Prerequisites: 021:101. Same as 021:256.

108:222 Topics: Policy/Planning 1-3 s.h.
Current topics in national and international policies, their impact on planning. Repeatable. Same as 021:279.

108:224 Electronic Publishing 3 s.h.
Modes and methods for building electronic journals, books, thematic collections; new genres for publishing, including blogs, wikis, comics, short stories on the web; social, political, and economic forces that shape electronic publishing; XML-based project. Prerequisites: 021:120. Same as 021:224.

108:230 Topics in Book Studies 1-3 s.h.
Topics relevant to book studies and special collections. Prerequisites: 021:101. Requirements: admission to library and information science. Same as 021:249.

108:280 Graduate Book Arts Workshop 3 s.h.
Development of art work and studio practice; readings and research in contemporary theory and practice; analysis of visual language; integration of creative activities and critical thinking in student’s own art practice and analysis of contemporary work in book arts; group and individual critiques, studio assignments, presentations, discussions.

108:299 Book Studies Proseminar 1-3 s.h.

Graduate Program

• Doctor of Philosophy in genetics

Doctor of Philosophy

The Doctor of Philosophy program in genetics requires a minimum of 72 s.h. of graduate credit. The Ph.D. program is designed to promote collaborative investigation and intellectual interaction among students and faculty participants affiliated with several different departments.

Students who enroll in the program are encouraged to obtain a broad background in genetics, including molecular, population, and human genetics. Within this context, course requirements are flexible enough to permit students to tailor their formal course work to their individual needs.

Students have the option to declare a Ph.D. emphasis in computational genetics.

All students enrolled in the program are required to take the following courses.

All of these:

127:150 Genetic Analysis of Biological Systems 3 s.h.
127:200 Special Topics in Genetics (seminar) 1 s.h.
156:201 Fundamentals of Gene Expression 1 s.h.
156:202 Fundamentals of Protein Regulation 1 s.h.
156:203 Fundamentals of Dynamic Cell Processes 1 s.h.

One of these:

002:131 Evolution 4 s.h.
002:168 Genes and Development 3 s.h.
127:191 Human Molecular Genetics 3 s.h.

All of these:

650:270 Principles of Scholarly Integrity 1 s.h.
Elective course work in molecular and microbial genetics, cell and development genetics, human genetics, or computational genetics 8 s.h.
Seminar courses approved by the program 5 s.h.

Even more important than formal course work is the opportunity to do significant research in genetics. Research interests of the participating faculty include virtually all areas of genetics, ranging from bacteriophage genetics to human medical genetics. In each area of genetics, there is a group of faculty members who have closely related interests.

The University is also strong in several related disciplines, including microbial physiology, enzymology, virology, protein biochemistry, computational genetics, and developmental and cell biology, all of which contribute significantly to the overall training program.

In addition to completing research and course work, students must pass a comprehensive examination, usually at the end of their second year in the program.

Joint M.D./Ph.D.

Students may work toward the Doctor of Medicine degree and a Ph.D. in genetics in a joint degree program offered by the Carver College of Medicine and the Graduate College. See Medical Scientist Training (p. 1323) Program (Carver College of Medicine) in the Catalog.

Ph.D. and Dental Scientist Training Program

Ph.D. students in genetics who have earned a D.D.S. degree may be candidates for advanced training programs in dentistry. For information, contact the College of Dentistry.

Admission

Prospective doctoral students in genetics should have a strong undergraduate background in science, including courses in general genetics, organic chemistry, biochemistry, introductory physics, and mathematics, as well as a strong commitment to genetic research and teaching. Students can make up deficiencies in a particular area during their first year of graduate study.

Applicants must meet the admission requirements of the Graduate College; see the Manual of Rules and Regulations of the Graduate College or the Graduate (p. 1117) College section of the Catalog.

Admission to the program is based on assessment of applicants’ undergraduate academic records, performance on the Graduate Record Examination (GRE) General Test, and letters of recommendation. Admission requirements are not rigid. Most students working toward a Ph.D. in genetics at the University have an undergraduate g.p.a. above 3.50, and a combined verbal and quantitative score above 1250 on the GRE General Test. Students with lower grade-point averages or GRE scores may be admitted, depending on prior research experience and other indications of academic potential.

Students generally begin graduate work in the fall semester.

Financial Support

All genetics graduate students receive a financial stipend of $25,000 (academic year 2010-11) plus tuition.

Financial support comes from training grants, research assistantships, teaching assistantships, scholarships, individual research grants, or other departmental or college funds. All students are required to do some teaching as part of their development as future scientists and faculty members.

Associated Courses

Credit earned in the following courses may be counted toward the Ph.D. in genetics. Not all courses are offered every year.

Courses

127:150 Genetic Analysis of Biological Systems

Genetic techniques and approaches for analysis of biological processes; comparison of strengths, weaknesses of a variety of experimental systems.
127:170 Bioinformatics 3 s.h.
Overview of bioinformatics and genomics; requires working knowledge of basic concepts in genetics and molecular biology. Requirements: (for 002:170) grade of B+ or higher in 002:128; (for 127:170) grade of B+ or higher in 002:128 and working knowledge of basic genetics and molecular biology concepts. Same as 002:170.

127:173 Computational Genomics 3 s.h.
Introduction to computational methods used in genome analysis and functional genomics; biological sequence analysis, sequence database search, microarray data analysis, biological network analysis; in-depth coverage of principal genome science challenges and recent solutions. Same as 002:174, 051:122, 055:122.

127:176 Microarray Data Analysis 3 s.h.
Basic statistical principles and techniques used in bioinformatics, including analyzing microarray gene expression data. Offered spring semesters. Prerequisites: 22S:030 or 22S:101 or 171:161. Same as 002:176, 171:185.

127:191 Human Molecular Genetics 3 s.h.
Molecular genetic approaches to human disease; the human genome project, linkage analysis, candidate gene screening, special features of inbred populations, triplet repeat expansions, mitochondrial genetics, genetics of complex traits. Requirements: fundamental genetics and molecular biology.

127:200 Special Topics in Genetics 1 s.h.
Current research in a selected field of genetics; different topic each year. Companion to a genetics seminar series. Same as 060:200.

Graduate degrees: M.S., Ph.D. in Human Toxicology
Web site: http://toxicology.grad.uiowa.edu/

Toxicology is the study of how biological, chemical, physical, and radiological agents affect living organisms and the ecosystem, and how to prevent or lessen the adverse effects of those agents. The Human Toxicology Program prepares toxicologists to identify and assess environmental exposures, identify mechanisms by which toxicants affect homeostasis or induce disease, identify interventions to prevent adverse effects, and estimate acceptable levels of exposure to protect public health.

The program is interdisciplinary, involving the Graduate College, the Carver College of Medicine, and the Colleges of Engineering, Liberal Arts and Sciences, Pharmacy, and Public Health.

The Human Toxicology Program is supported by an Iowa Superfund basic research program grant that supports six research projects and seven support cores, including a training core. Human toxicology faculty members are supported by the Environmental Health Sciences Research Center, a National Institute of Environmental Health Center of Excellence.

Graduate Programs

- Master of Science in human toxicology
- Doctor of Philosophy in human toxicology

Master of Science

The Master of Science program in human toxicology requires a minimum of 39 s.h. of graduate credit; a thesis is required. The program is designed for students who wish to pursue a master's degree as a second degree or through part-time study, particularly those who perform toxicologists' functions in their jobs and who need additional training.

Entering students should have backgrounds in the biological, engineering, and physical sciences and should have completed courses in introductory chemistry and biology, and organic chemistry.

After entering the program, students work with their assigned mentors to choose an advisory committee, which meets at least once a semester to help the student explore his or her research interests. The committee also provides consultation on course work and research activities and serves as the committee for the final examination (thesis defense).

The Human Toxicology Program is flexible. Students work with their advisory committees to plan a course of study tailored to their individual interests and goals within the field of toxicology.

All M.S. students must successfully complete a first course in toxicology, 175:260 Environmental Toxicology (3 s.h.) or 046:214 Pharmaceutical and Chemical Toxicology (3 s.h.); and an advanced course, 175:265 Advanced Toxicology (4 s.h.).

All toxicology graduate students are required to register for 198:180 Toxicology Research Seminar each semester of their enrollment in the program.

Upon successful completion of all requirements, including the thesis and its oral defense, students are awarded a Master of Science.
Doctor of Philosophy

The Doctor of Philosophy program in human toxicology requires a minimum of 72 s.h. of graduate credit. The program is designed for students with backgrounds in the biological, engineering, and physical sciences. Entering students should have solid training in science, including courses in introductory chemistry and biology, and organic chemistry; knowledge of biochemistry and molecular biology is also useful. Students may remedy deficiencies by taking appropriate courses during their first year of graduate study.

Students begin the program with three two-month rotations in the laboratories of participating faculty members, in order to identify a mentor. After the first year, the mentor assumes financial responsibility for the student. With advice from their mentors, students choose an advisory committee, which meets at least once a semester to help the student explore his or her research interests. The committee also provides consultation on course work and research activities and serves as the committee for the comprehensive examination and the final examination (dissertation defense).

The Human Toxicology Program is flexible. Students work with their advisory committees to plan a course of study tailored to their individual interests and goals within the field of toxicology.

All Ph.D. students must successfully complete a first course in toxicology, 175:260 Environmental Toxicology (3 s.h.) or 046:214 Pharmaceutical and Chemical Toxicology (3 s.h.); and an advanced course, 175:265 Advanced Toxicology (4 s.h.).

All toxicology graduate students are required to register for 198:180 Toxicology Research Seminar each semester of their enrollment in the program and to successfully complete 650:270 Principles of Scholarly Integrity within the first two years of graduate study.

After successfully completing the comprehensive examination, usually at the end of the second year of graduate study, students advance to Ph.D. candidacy. They devote all of their time to dissertation research and writing. Upon successful completion of all requirements, including the dissertation and its oral defense, students are awarded a Doctor of Philosophy.

Admission

Prospective students may apply to the program via a centralized application system; see Admissions Information on the Human Toxicology Program web site.

Completed applications should be submitted by January 15; applications submitted after that date are reviewed as they are received and are considered for any remaining openings.

Applicants must meet the admission requirements of the Graduate College; see the Manual of Rules and Regulations of the Graduate College or the Graduate (p. 1117) College section of the Catalog.

Financial Support

Doctoral students in human toxicology receive stipends and tuition support from University of Iowa sources, including the Presidential Graduate Fellowship and graduate research assistantships, and from non-University sources, such as training grants from the National Institutes of Health.

Facilities

Training is conducted primarily in laboratories and teaching facilities of the departments and colleges of Human Toxicology Program faculty members. These are among the best-equipped laboratories on campus. Together with the University’s central research facilities, they provide access to the most up-to-date research equipment and expertise.

Associated Courses

For course descriptions and prerequisite information, see the course listings in the College of Pharmacy (p. 1425) (prefix 046) and Department of Occupational and Environmental Health (p. 1495) (prefix 175) sections of the Catalog.

Graduate degree: Ph.D. in Immunology
Web site: http://immuno.grad.uiowa.edu

The Immunology Program provides interdisciplinary training in the concepts and methodologies of basic and applied immunology. Faculty members are involved in a variety of research projects dealing with the immune system at all levels--structural, functional, cellular, biochemical, and molecular. Students take course work in immunology and related disciplines and are involved directly in laboratory research throughout their study.

Graduate Program

- Doctor of Philosophy in immunology

Doctor of Philosophy

The Doctor of Philosophy program in immunology requires a minimum of 72 s.h. of graduate credit. The program is flexible, accommodating students with a wide range of backgrounds in course work as well as practical experience in the biological and physical sciences. Entering students generally are expected to have strong backgrounds in biology, chemistry, biochemistry, microbiology, genetics, and mathematics. An introductory course in immunology is desirable. Deficiencies in specific areas often can be remedied through appropriate course work taken during the first year of graduate studies.

The curriculum consists of a sequence of required and elective courses that provide training in the conceptual and methodological aspects of immunology. The program offers ample opportunity for study in a variety of fields that interface with immunology.

The Ph.D. in immunology requires the following course work.

148:201 Graduate Immunology 3 s.h.
148:211 Immunology Seminar (taken fall and spring of first year, spring of second year) 1 s.h.
148:221 Advanced Topics in Immunology 3 s.h.
156:204 Biostatistics for Biomedical Research 1 s.h.
650:270 Principles of Scholarly Integrity 1 s.h.
Elective courses (optional)

Students complete 5 s.h. of the following.

Fundamentals:

156:201 Fundamentals of Gene Expression (recommended) 1 s.h.
156:202 Fundamentals of Protein Regulation (recommended) 1 s.h.
156:203 Fundamentals of Dynamic Cell Processes (recommended) 1 s.h.

Molecular biology:

142:215 Transcription and Multifunctional Regulation by RNA 1 s.h.
142:216 Chromatin Structure and Disease 1 s.h.
142:217 Cancer, Epigenetics, and Genetic Manipulations in Mice 1 s.h.

Cell biology:

142:220 Mechanisms of Cellular Organization 3 s.h.
142:225 Growth Factor Receptor Signaling 1 s.h.
142:226 Cell Cycle Control 1 s.h.
142:227 Cell Fate Decisions 1 s.h.

After successfully completing the comprehensive examination, usually by the end of the second year of graduate study, students advance to candidacy for the Ph.D. They devote their time to research and writing their dissertation. Upon successful completion of all requirements, including the dissertation and its oral defense, students are awarded a Ph.D. in immunology.
Admission
For information regarding admission and application procedures, contact the Immunology Program or visit its website.
Applicants must meet the admission requirements of the Graduate College; see the Manual of Rules and Regulations of the Graduate College or the Graduate College section of the Catalog.

Financial Support
All students in the Immunology Program receive stipends and tuition support, which comes from a variety of sources, including training grants from the National Institutes of Health, University of Iowa fellowships and graduate research assistantships, and individual faculty research grants.

Facilities
Training is conducted in laboratories and teaching facilities of the Carver College of Medicine Departments of Dermatology, Internal Medicine, Pathology, Microbiology, Pharmacology, and Urology. Faculty laboratories and central research core facilities provide students with access to state-of-the-art research equipment.

Courses

148:040 Summer Undergraduate IDGP Research 0 s.h.

148:201 Graduate Immunology 3 s.h.
Ontogeny, activation, and function of T lymphocytes and B lymphocytes; innate immune effector mechanisms; major histocompatibility complex; antigen presentation; thymocyte positive and negative selection; signaling of T lymphocytes, B lymphocytes; emphasis on experimental methods for analysis of these processes. Requirements: (for 148:201) college biology, general chemistry, and introductory immunology courses; (for 061:201) courses in college biology, genetics, general chemistry, and introductory immunology. Recommendations: (for 148:201) courses in biochemistry and genetics; (for 061:201) biochemistry course. Same as 061:201.

148:217 Integrated Topics in Infectious Diseases 1 s.h.
Clinical cases used to raise questions in host-parasite interactions; case/scientific exposures followed by related journal club discussions at next class session. Same as 061:217.

148:221 Advanced Topics in Immunology 3 s.h.

148:231 Research in Immunology arr.
Laboratory research. Requirements: immunology graduate standing.

148:247 Graduate Survey of Immunology 3 s.h.
Major features of evolutionary, ontogenic, and comparative development of innate and adaptive immune systems; their functions at cellular and molecular levels. Offered fall semesters. Same as 061:247.

148:251 Principles of Medical Immunology 2 s.h.
Basic molecules, cells; organs of immune system; mechanics and regulations of immune response; clinical principles of normal and abnormal immunity. Requirements: M.D. enrollment.

148:301 Directed Study in Immunology arr.

148:211 Immunology Seminar 1 s.h.
Requirements: immunology graduate standing.

Graduate degrees: M.S., Ph.D. in Informatics
Graduate nondegree program: Certificate in Informatics

Web site: http://informatics.grad.uiowa.edu

The field of informatics springs from the intersection of computational disciplines related to the humanities, the arts, and the biological, health, natural, and social sciences. As the rapid development of information technology transforms the world of human pursuits, informatics offers ways to solve new problems and to examine existing problems from new perspectives.

The Informatics Program provides graduate students the opportunity to study informatics in the broadest sense. The program is interdisciplinary, involving the Graduate College, the Carver College of Medicine, the Tippie College of Business, and the Colleges of Engineering, Liberal Arts and Sciences, Nursing, and Public Health.

Graduate Programs

- Master of Science in informatics
- Doctor of Philosophy in informatics
- Certificate in Informatics
The Master of Science and Doctor of Philosophy degrees in informatics are offered with two subtracks: health informatics and information science. The Certificate in Informatics is offered with four subtracks: bioinformatics and computational biology, geoinformatics, health informatics, and information science.

Master of Science

The Master of Science program in informatics requires a minimum of 32 s.h. of graduate credit. It is offered with subtracks in health informatics and information science. Students working toward a Doctor of Philosophy in informatics may be granted a Master of Science upon completion of the M.S. requirements.

The 32 s.h. required for the M.S. includes 9 s.h. in foundations of informatics and at least 9 s.h. in disciplinary applications of informatics.

Students select an advisor from their subtrack’s affiliated faculty members. In consultation with their advisors, students prepare a study plan, which is reviewed at least once a year. A final master’s degree examination, either oral or written, may be required.

For more information about the Master of Science requirements, visit the Informatics Program web site.

Doctor of Philosophy

The Doctor of Philosophy program in informatics requires a minimum of 72 s.h. of graduate credit. It is offered with subtracks in health informatics and information science.

The 72 s.h. required for the Ph.D. includes 9 s.h. in foundations of informatics and at least 9 s.h. in disciplinary applications of informatics.

Students select an advisor from their subtrack’s affiliated faculty members. In consultation with their advisors, students prepare a study plan, which is reviewed by their mentors and curricular advisory committees at least once a year. Ph.D. students must pass a comprehensive examination at or near completion of their course work requirements. The exam may be written, oral, or both, depending on the structure of the student’s subtrack or the decision of the student’s committee.

Students who do not already hold an M.S. from The University of Iowa may request that one be granted to them at the doctoral comprehensive exam. A final master’s examination, not related to the Ph.D. comprehensive exam, may be required.

Upon successful completion of all requirements, including the dissertation and its oral defense, students are awarded a Doctor of Philosophy.

For more information about the Doctor of Philosophy requirements, visit the Informatics Program web site.

Certificate

The Certificate in Informatics requires a minimum of 18-21 s.h. of graduate credit, depending on choice of subtrack (the subtracks in bioinformatics and computational biology, health informatics, and information science require a minimum of 18 s.h.; the geoinformatics subtrack requires minimum of 21 s.h.). The program is designed for students enrolled in University of Iowa graduate degree programs who wish to study informatics as a complement to their degree programs.

All subtracks require 9 s.h. in the foundations of informatics. In addition, the subtracks in bioinformatics and computational biology, health informatics, and information science require at least 9 s.h. in disciplinary applications of informatics; and the geoinformatics subtrack requires at least 12 s.h. in disciplinary applications of informatics. Work toward the certificate may not be substituted completely for courses or examinations required by the student’s graduate degree program.

For more information about certificate requirements, visit the Informatics Program web site.

Admission

Applicants to the M.S., Ph.D., or certificate program should apply to the degree subtrack of their choice. The subtrack programs make independent admission decisions. Certificate program applicants must be enrolled in a University of Iowa graduate degree program and must be in good academic standing in their degree programs.

Applicants must meet the admission requirements of the Graduate College; see the Manual of Rules and Regulations of the Graduate College or the Graduate (p. 1117) College section of the Catalog. They also must meet the admission requirements of the informatics subtrack they want to enter; see Prospective Students/How To Apply on the program’s web site.

200:110 Health Informatics I 3 s.h.

200:120 Health Informatics II 3 s.h.
Selected health informatics initiatives, including computer-based patient records, physiologic monitoring, networking, imaging, virtual reality; participation in an interdisciplinary project team focused on an informatics innovation; application and research seminars. Same as 021:280, 051:189, 056:287, 074:192, 096:289.

200:199 Research for Master's Thesis
Requirements: admission to M.S. program.

200:201 Leadership and Management in Complex Health Care Systems 3 s.h.
Introduction to complex systems theory in the biological, physical, and social sciences; applications in decision-making processes, change management, organizational effectiveness, and implementation of technology; interdisciplinary approach.

200:220 Social Informatics 3 s.h.
Study of information and communication tools (ICTs) in cultural or institutional contexts; how ICTs are conceptualized, disseminated, and used in everyday and specialized environments such as libraries, education settings, corporations, local communities, cultural groups, political campaigns, and Web 2.0. Prerequisites: 021:101. Same as 021:210.

200:296 Topics in Informatics
Current topics in informatics.

200:297 Readings in Informatics
Topics not covered in other courses; individual study.

200:298 Independent Study

200:299 Research for Dissertation
Requirements: Ph.D. candidacy.
International Programs

Director
Roberta M. Marvin

Graduate degree: M.A. in International Studies
Web site: http://international.uiowa.edu/

Graduate Program

- Master of Arts in international studies

Master of Arts

The Master of Arts in international studies requires a minimum of 36 s.h. of graduate credit; a thesis or final project is required. The program is designed for students who seek an interdisciplinary approach to graduate study, especially those who have identified an area of international interest and who wish to pursue a tailor-made program on international issues.

The 36 s.h. required for the M.A. includes 33 s.h. of graded course work (thesis credit is not graded); 24 s.h. must be earned after admission to the M.A. program, with at least 8 s.h. earned in residence on the University of Iowa campus. Students must earn a minimum of 21 s.h. in formal classroom work (excluding independent study, research, thesis work, and special projects); no more than 9 s.h. of independent study, research, and thesis credit may be counted toward the degree. A maximum of 12 s.h. earned at another institution or in another University of Iowa graduate program may be counted toward the degree.

Students must maintain a g.p.a. of at least 3.00 in all University of Iowa and transfer course work applied toward the degree.

Basic requirements for the M.A. are as follows.

All M.A. students must submit a plan of study when they apply for admission to the program. The study plan must identify a focus area for the student’s course work and research. During their first semester in the program, students review and revise the study plan in consultation with their advisory committee; changes must be approved in writing by the committee.

The advisory committee must include at least three tenured or tenure-track faculty members, who may be drawn from any college at the University. One of the committee members serves as the student’s primary advisor and chairs the committee. Students should meet with their advisors at least once each semester, before registration for the next term. Additional meetings and consultations with the advisor and committee members should take place as needed.

International Programs provides a list of faculty mentors, searchable by focus area; see International Studies Mentor Directory on the International Programs web site.

Admission

Applicants to the M.A. in international studies must meet the application requirements of the Graduate College; see the Manual of Rules and Regulations of the Graduate College or the Graduate (p. 1117) College section of the Catalog.

Prospective students are urged to consult with the program about their academic objectives.

Admission is for fall entry only; application deadline is February 1 for the following fall.

For detailed application information, see Application & Admission on the International Studies M.A. web page.

Courses

287:029 First-Year Seminar
1 s.h.

Small discussion class taught by a faculty member; international topics chosen by instructor; may include outside activities (e.g., films, lectures, performances, readings, visits to research facilities). Requirements: first- or second-semester standing.

287:098 Issues in International Studies
1 s.h.

Modules focusing on varied topics, taught by international studies faculty members.

287:099 International Studies Colloquium
arr.

Modules focusing on varied topics, taught by international studies faculty members.
287:150 Special Topics in International Studies
Topics related to international studies.

287:177 Summer Institute for Teachers and Lifelong Learners
2-3 s.h.
Interdisciplinary global issues; intensive course for teachers and students. Same as 07S:177.

287:189 Provost's Forum on International Affairs
1 s.h.
Opportunity to debate, discuss, and reflect upon urgent and significant international issues; symposium.

287:205 International Graduate Research
1-6 s.h.
Independent study directed by a faculty member.

287:210 International Programs Summer Institute for Teachers
1-3 s.h.
Professional development workshop for teachers. Same as 07S:210.

287:299 International Studies M.A. Thesis
1-3 s.h.
Thesis for interdisciplinary M.A. with international studies emphasis. Repeatable.
International Writing Program

Web site: http://iwp.uiowa.edu/

The International Writing Program (IWP) is a unique residency program for established writers from outside the United States. IWP participants range from emerging talents to writers who are among their countries' leading literary figures and writers of world stature.

Each fall the International Writing Program assembles a community of poets, fiction writers, essayists, playwrights, and journalists. For most of them, their time in the program is their first, or their first extended, stay in the United States. At the University they live and interact with each other while working on writing and translation projects and participating in public events. Throughout their residency, they present their work in 181:191 International Literature Today and 181:205 International Translation Workshop and participate as guests in many other courses on campus, including a First-Year Seminar for incoming undergraduates. They also interact with the public through readings, panel discussions, a film series, and other presentations.

During the spring semester, IWP offers other courses related to the program’s general mission, including collaborative distance learning courses for writing students overseas. Every summer IWP sponsors Between the Lines, a two-week bilingual creative writing program for a select group of high school students from Arabic-speaking countries.

Since 1967 more than 1,200 writers from 120 countries have participated in the program.

International Writing Program participants are supported by the U.S. Department of State, through bilateral agreements with many countries, by grants from cultural institutions and governments abroad, and by private funds. The program does not provide grants for writers.

For more information, contact the International Writing Program or visit its web site.

Courses

181:001 Readings for Writers 1 s.h.
Introduction to the Iowa City writing community; attendance at readings by professional, faculty, and student writers; students keep journals about readings.

181:040 Writing Across the Atlantic: Guided Creative Writing and Reading arr.
Reading contemporary British prose and poetry and students’ own creative writing; instruction by a visiting writer from Great Britain who is participating in the International Writing Program.

Directed readings in contemporary world literature.

181:102 On Campus Independent Study arr.
Independent study arranged in collaboration with instructor.

181:110 Comparative Arts 3 s.h.
Cultural and aesthetic issues arising from side-by-side investigation of several art forms, including literature, cinema, painting, music, opera, architecture; periods, schools, styles, and their theories. Same as 048:110.

181:152 America in Other Words 1-3 s.h.
Current idea of America in its imaginary form: post-1989 world fiction, poetry, and film in original language, in translation, and via online translation resources. Same as 048:152.

181:191 International Literature Today 1,3 s.h.
English majors may apply this course to the following area and/or period requirement. AREA: Transnational Literature and Culture. PERIOD: 20th- and/or 21st-Century Literature. Same as 008:191.
181:205 International Translation Workshop 1-3 s.h.
International writers pair with University of Iowa translators to write new works of poetry and fiction in English; second-language fluency not required for international writers. Same as 048:205.

181:247 Crossing Borders Seminar 2-3 s.h.

181:260 Translation Workshop 3 s.h.
Requirements: at least one foreign language. Same as 048:260, 08W:260.

Graduate degree: M.A. in Library and Information Science
Web site: http://slis.grad.uiowa.edu/

Today's age is defined by the intersection of information, technology, and human creativity. In this context, library and information science is dedicated to understanding the nature of information, the interaction between information and communication technologies, the relationship between information and knowledge, the cognitive and affective aspects of knowledge acquisition, and the interface between people and information. It offers new knowledge, technological benefits, and professional expertise for every dimension of human affairs.

Library and information professionals take on many challenges in serving the needs of their constituencies—children and teachers, members of academic communities, employees of profit and nonprofit organizations, and the public at large—constituencies that range from information poor to information rich. They work in the contexts of issues such as information and communication technology, public and private information policy, managerial policy, and regional, national, and international economics.

The School of Library and Information Science prepares professionals to meet these diverse challenges. It offers a graduate-level program of preparation for careers in all types of libraries and information centers, providing students with a strong, well-rounded education in an environment that supports individuals from all segments of a multicultural, multiethnic, and multilingual society. Its curriculum reflects the profession’s immediate and long-range needs and prepares students to be leaders in a changing field.

By promoting excellence in research, the school contributes to the base of theoretical and practical knowledge in library and information science and helps develop an understanding of how to meet the varied and changing information needs of individuals and society. It also provides public service through continuing education programs, selective consulting services for library and information centers, and participation in professional organizations.

The school strongly encourages its students, faculty members, and alumni to shape the future of the profession by filling key roles in organizations involved in all aspects of the information cycle.

Graduate Programs

• Master of Arts in library and information science

Graduate students working toward a degree in library and information science may elect to pursue one of the joint degree programs offered by the school in collaboration with the Tippie College of Business and the College of Law. The school also offers a joint master’s degree/certificate program with the Center for the Book. See "Joint Degrees" and "Joint M.A./Certificate" below.

Students interested in school librarianship may earn a teaching license through a joint program with the College of Education; see “Specializations”/“School Teacher Librarian” below. Library and information science students also may earn the Certificate in Informatics, described below.

The Master of Arts in library and information science has held continuous accreditation from the American Library Association since 1971.

Library science graduates have many options for employment. Alumni hold positions in public, school, special, and academic libraries as well as other information settings. They serve in varied roles, such as information consultant, database manager, library administrator, webmaster, network coordinator, cataloger, children’s librarian, school library media specialist, and archivist.

Master of Arts

The Master of Arts in library and information science requires 36 s.h. of graduate credit. A thesis option is available for students who seek additional research experience.
Students pursuing the master's degree gain an understanding of the foundations of the library and information profession, including the history of the field, ethical and philosophical concerns, the information cycle, principles and procedures for dealing with a variety of information carriers, and the theory and practice of strategic management. They examine future trends, with emphasis on cutting-edge technological concerns. They study the discipline’s research base, gaining heightened awareness of the synergism between library and information science and other disciplines, as well as the close relationship between research and practice. Finally, students become knowledgeable about the factors that underlie users’ information needs and appropriate strategies to satisfy those needs.

The master’s degree program is designed to be completed in two years. The maximum allowable load for graduate students is 12 s.h. during regular semesters and 8 s.h. during summer sessions. Students also may choose to complete the program through part-time study.

Students may apply a maximum of 12 s.h. of graduate transfer credit in library and information science or related areas toward the degree, subject to the approval of the transfer credit committee. Approval is given course-by-course and is determined by the course’s content, currency, and applicability to the student’s program.

The curriculum has three tiers. Tier I consists of three required courses that provide a solid grounding for all successive course work. Tier II consists of four courses; students must include 021:260 Organizational Management or 021:262 School Library Media Administration as one of their tier II courses, but they may not include both. In tier III, students earn 15 s.h. in electives chosen with guidance from their advisors. This three-tier arrangement allows each student to concentrate in an area that most closely matches his or her professional goals.

TIER I

All of these:

021:101 Cultural Foundations 3 s.h.
021:120 Computing Foundations 3 s.h.
021:122 Conceptual Foundations 3 s.h.

TIER II

This course:

021:242 Search and Discovery 3 s.h.

One of these:

021:260 Organizational Management 3 s.h.
021:262 School Library Media Administration (for school teacher librarian specialization) 3 s.h.

Two of these:

021:124 Database Systems 3 s.h.
021:202 Research Methods 3 s.h.
021:205 Literacy and Learning 3 s.h.
021:210 Social Informatics 3 s.h.
021:226 Digital Environments 3 s.h.
021:236 Use and Users 3 s.h.
021:278 Information Policy 3 s.h.

TIER III

With their advisor’s guidance, students choose 15 s.h. in electives from the following courses.

021:123 User Education: Multimedia 3 s.h.
021:141 Reference and Information Services 3 s.h.
021:143 Resources for Children 3 s.h.
021:144 Resources for Young Adults 3 s.h.
021:145 Resources for Adults 3 s.h.
021:150 Preservation and Conservation of Collection Materials 3 s.h.
021:222 Beginning Cataloging and Classification 3 s.h.
021:223 Advanced Cataloging and Classification 3 s.h.
021:224 Electronic Publishing 3 s.h.
021:228 Hypertext Systems 3 s.h.
021:232 Race, Gender, and Technology 3 s.h.
021:234 Knowledge Management 3 s.h.
021:239 Topics: Conceptual Structures/Systems 1-3 s.h.
021:240 Collection Management 3 s.h.
021:244 Government Information Resources 3 s.h.
021:249 Topics in Book Studies 1-3 s.h.
021:252 Human Computer Interaction 3 s.h.
021:254 Analysis of Scholarly Domains 3 s.h.
021:256 History of Readers and Reading 3 s.h.
021:258 The Transition from Manuscript to Print 3 s.h.
021:259 Topics: Resources/Services 1-3 s.h.
021:261 Strategic Management 3 s.h.
021:263 Nonprofit Organizational Effectiveness I 3 s.h.
021:265 Nonprofit Organizational Effectiveness II 3 s.h.
021:270 Public Libraries 3 s.h.
021:271 College and University Libraries 3 s.h.
021:272 Special Libraries 3 s.h.
021:275 Health Informatics I 3 s.h.
021:279 Topics: Policy/Planning 1-3 s.h.
021:280 Health Informatics II 3 s.h.
021:282 Practicum in Libraries and Information Centers 2-3 s.h.
021:284 School Library Media Practicum 3 s.h.
021:289 Seminar in Library and Information Science 3 s.h.
021:290 Capstone 1 s.h.
021:292 Independent Study 1-3 s.h.
021:299 Thesis 0-3 s.h.

Specializations

Students’ programs often are designed around particular career goals. Following are examples of possible specializations.

PUBLIC LIBRARIES

Public libraries provide informational, educational, and recreational materials and a wide range of services for a diverse clientele. Although public libraries receive the bulk of their funding from local taxes, they also may be organized on a regional or statewide cooperative basis. The variety of uses, services, materials, and organizational structures of public libraries makes this a challenging area of librarianship. Public librarians need to develop skills in analyzing the communities they serve, designing comprehensive marketing plans to meet their needs, implementing the plans in a cost-effective way, and evaluating the success of their efforts.

ACADEMIC LIBRARIES

The academic library, whether in a community college, a four-year college, or a university, provides information services in support of the parent institution’s teaching, research, and public service missions. These services include instruction in the use of the library and its resources. Management skills and subject or language competence often are required. Since librarians in this setting usually are considered academic faculty members, a second master’s or other advanced degree is desirable.

SPECIAL LIBRARIES AND INFORMATION CENTERS

Special libraries serve corporations, private companies, government agencies, technical and academic institutions, museums, medical facilities, and information management consulting firms. They are organized to anticipate and quickly respond to the specific information needs of their users. Special librarians are information resource experts who collect, analyze, evaluate, package, and disseminate information to facilitate accurate decision making. Knowledge of information technology and the ability to design services suitable to the parent organization are professional necessities. In addition, substantial subject expertise may be required.

SCHOOL TEACHER LIBRARIAN

School teacher librarians provide instruction to students in accessing, evaluating, and using information; collaborate with teachers on the use of resources in instruction; provide leadership in the use of instructional and information technologies; offer reading guidance; provide reference service; and manage the library media center.

The University of Iowa offers a state-approved program leading to endorsement as school teacher librarian K-12. In order to fulfill state requirements for this endorsement, students must hold or be eligible for a teaching license and must complete a designated sequence of courses that leads both to certification and to the M.A. degree.

Students who are interested in school libraries but lack a valid Iowa teaching license may earn licensure as a school teacher librarian by completing 30 s.h. in the College of Education. The Master of Arts in library and information science with teacher licensure requires 66 s.h. of credit. Students must apply and be admitted to both programs.

INFORMATION SCIENCE

The multidisciplinary field of information science is influenced by the rapid growth in digital information collections and technologies. This specialization offers expertise in retrieval, dissemination, and use of information. In addition to libraries and information centers, many for-profit organizations are finding that information is a valuable commodity in today’s competitive world and are employing information management personnel. The curriculum offers opportunities to study information science aspects, such as digital libraries, electronic publishing, and automated systems design.

Joint Degrees

The School of Library and Information Science offers a joint Master of Arts/Master of Business Administration with the Tippie College of Business and a joint Juris Doctor/Master of Arts with the College of Law. The primary goal of the joint programs is integration of the two areas of study.

Students in the joint programs may apply a limited amount of credit toward both degrees. Up to 9 s.h. in business or law may be applied toward the M.A. in library and information science; up to 9 s.h. in library and information science may be applied toward the M.B.A., and 12 s.h. may be applied to the J.D.

Separate application to each degree program is required. Applicants must be admitted to both programs before they can be admitted to the joint degree program. For more information, see College of Law (p. 1215) or Master of Business Administration Program (p. 852) in the Catalog.

In addition to the joint M.A./M.B.A. and J.D./M.A., joint programs may be arranged between departments on an ad hoc basis. A minimum of 60 s.h. of graduate work is required for a joint master’s degree program.

Joint M.A./Certificate

Students interested in special collections, book arts, or museum librarianship may pursue an M.A. in library and information science in conjunction with a graduate Certificate in Book Studies/Book Arts and Technologies. The joint program also may be appropriate for students interested in book studies scholarship and those seeking careers in publishing, graphic arts, or book-related industries that require a similar blend of subject and technical knowledge.

The joint program requires a total of 51 s.h. At least 27 s.h. must be earned in the M.A. program, at least 15 s.h. must be earned in the certificate program, and the remaining 9 s.h. may be earned in either program.

To enroll in the joint program, students must be admitted both to the School of Library and Information Science and to the Center for the Book, and must fulfill the basic requirements of each program.

Related Certificate: Informatics

Library and information science students who are interested in careers involving health science libraries or hospital information centers may earn the Certificate in Informatics with the optional health informatics subtrack. The certificate is offered by the Graduate College together with several other University colleges and departments. Its health informatics subtrack emphasizes the organization, management, and use of health care information; health care research, education, and practice; and information technology developments in the socioeconomic context of health care.

The certificate requires at least 18 s.h. of course work, including 021:275 Health Informatics I, 021:280 Health Informatics II, and approved electives. To learn more, visit the Health Informatics web site.

Honor Society

The Beta Beta Theta Chapter of Beta Phi Mu, the international honor society for library and information science, is located at The University of Iowa. Each year new members are chosen from the top 25 percent of the preceding year’s graduating classes. To be eligible for membership, graduates must achieve a g.p.a. of at least 3.75, demonstrate professional promise, and be recommended by the faculty.

Student Organizations and Activities

All M.A. students in the school are automatically members of LISSO, the Library and Information Science Student Organization, which also serves as the student chapter of the American Library Association. LISSO sponsors various activities, such as speaker series, workshops, brown bag lunches, and social events. Participation in LISSO events provides students with significant opportunities for professional and extracurricular growth. Students also are encouraged to join other state and national professional organizations.

The electronic journal BSides was created and is edited entirely by library and information science students. The journal publishes work by current students and recent alumni in a wide variety of formats, such as research papers, PowerPoint presentations, and web sites.

Admission

Applicants for admission to the M.A. program are required to have a g.p.a. of at least 3.00 on a 4.00 scale. They must have a combined verbal and quantitative score of at least 1000 and an analytical writing score of at least 4 on the Graduate Record Examination. The admissions committee also considers each applicant’s letters of recommendation, statement of purpose, and other appropriate criteria. Admission is competitive.

Applicants whose first language is not English must score at least 600 (paper-based), 250 (computer-based), or 100 (Internet-based) on the Test of English as a Foreign Language (TOEFL). In place of TOEFL, the school accepts International English Testing System (IELTS) scores of 7.0 or higher, with no subscore below 6.0. Applicants who submit IELTS scores are required to take an on-campus English proficiency evaluation.

Applicants begin the admission process by contacting the School of Library and Information Science. The process requires a completed application form, transcripts of all academic work, a written statement of purpose and goals, and three letters of recommendation.

Completed applications should be received by the school by February 1 for consideration for fall admission. Decisions of the admissions committee are announced approximately six weeks after the application deadline. Late applications are considered if places are still available. Financial aid often is not available for late applicants. Admitted students are assigned a faculty advisor for program planning at the end of their first semester.

Applicants must meet the admission requirements of the Graduate College; see the Manual of Rules and Regulations of the Graduate College or the Graduate (p. 1117) College section of the Catalog.

Financial Support

The School of Library and Information Science offers partial-tuition scholarships and one-quarter-time graduate assistantships. To be considered for scholarships or assistantships, applicants must meet the M.A. program’s grade-point-average and Graduate Record Exam score requirements for admission (see “Admission” above). Prospective students must submit letters of application for scholarships before February 1. Graduate assistantships are advertised as they become available; students should apply for specific assistantships.

For information on departmental scholarships, contact the School of Library and Information Science or visit its web site. Part-time employment usually is available in the University Libraries and other campus units.

Applications for student loans, work-study eligibility, or other financial assistance should be submitted directly to the University’s Office of Student Financial Aid.

Job Placement

The school shares announcements of national and international job opportunities through an electronic mailing list. In addition, LISSO sponsors talks by speakers versed in areas of librarianship as well as workshops on résumé writing and interviewing. The University’s Educational Placement Office issues a regular listing of job openings and provides a credential file service. Internships and the school’s practicum courses provide students with hands-on experience that may enhance their job prospects.

Facilities, Resources

The School of Library and Information Science is housed in the south wing of the University’s Main Library, in a setting that promotes community among students, faculty, and staff and provides easy access to resources of the University of Iowa Libraries. Facilities are provided for the varied instructional and research activities of the school.

Technology Laboratory

The school houses a state-of-the-art technology laboratory with current Windows and Macintosh computers. The computers are networked to the campus backbone and provide access to a rich variety of relevant software. The laboratory is used primarily by students for course assignments and to gain experience with specialized software. In addition, the classrooms are equipped with networked machines that benefit students through use of the latest teaching technologies. Wireless service is provided in the building by the University of Iowa Libraries.

University of Iowa Libraries

All of the resources of the University of Iowa Libraries are available to the school’s students and faculty. The system contains more than 4 million volumes in the Main Library and six departmental libraries.

The web-based catalog provides access to books and periodicals, electronic indexes, and full-text databases held by University Libraries. In addition, the InfoHawk Catalog to online resources provides access to selected Internet and CD-ROM resources arranged by subject and academic discipline. Wireless Internet access is available in many areas of the Main Library.

The third floor of the Main Library houses the map collection and Special Collections & University Archives, including the Iowa Women’s Archives.

Other Libraries

Students have access to a variety of libraries through field trips, practicum experience, and personal use: the State Historical Society of Iowa library in Iowa City; the Iowa City, Coralville, and Cedar Rapids public and school libraries; the Augustana, Coe, Cornell, Mount Mercy, and Grinnell College libraries; and the Herbert Hoover Presidential Library and Museum in West Branch.
Other Resources

Lindquist Center houses the instructional services and campus services departments of the University’s Information Technology Services. It provides instructional and research computing facilities and services for the University community. All University students, staff, and faculty may use the center’s computers for University-related research, thesis preparation, and class work. Instructional Technology Centers provide campuswide access to the University’s academic computing resources and the Internet.

Courses

021:090 Information Handling 3 s.h.
Gathering, evaluating, and employing information from library and nonlibrary sources, including multimedia and electronic systems. Requirements: undergraduate standing.

021:101 Cultural Foundations 1-3 s.h.
The role of libraries and information agencies in society; major issues, including information policy, professional ethics, literacy, diversity, technology, pedagogy. Requirements: admission to library and information science.

021:120 Computing Foundations 3 s.h.
Introduction to analysis, specification, and design of automated systems; review of the software life cycle; testing, deployment, and evaluation of large, computer-based software. Requirements: admission to library and information science.

021:122 Conceptual Foundations 3 s.h.
Theory, principles, and standards in organization of information; function of catalogs, indexes, bibliographic networks; introduction to metadata descriptions, name and title access, subject analysis, controlled vocabularies, classification systems. Requirements: admission to library and information science.

021:123 User Education: Multimedia 3 s.h.
Learning theory as it relates to design of multimedia products for user education; presentation of information using multimedia technology in a Macintosh environment; development of user education products in linear and nonlinear forms.

021:124 Database Systems 3 s.h.
Design and development of a database-driven information system, including interfaces, database schema, and essential database operations; focus on widely used relational database model. Prerequisites: 021:120.

021:139 Topics: Conceptual Structures and Systems 1-3 s.h.
Service-learning course for graduate students and undergraduate students at the junior and senior level; hands-on library work under supervision of professional librarian with a final project presentation.

021:141 Reference and Information Services 3 s.h.
Resources and services; essential reference services and experience using a variety of print and electronic resources to answer specific reference questions. Prerequisites: 021:101.

021:143 Resources for Children 3 s.h.

021:144 Resources for Young Adults 3 s.h.
Topics related to populations served by youth services departments (e.g., societal issues, informational needs); seminar. Prerequisites: 021:101.

021:145 Resources for Adults 3 s.h.
Role of libraries in meeting adults’ informational and recreational needs; popular culture materials, Reader’s Advisory services, lifelong learning. Prerequisites: 021:101.
021:150 Preservation and Conservation of Collection Materials
Overview of responsible stewardship of library and archival collections; principles and practice of book conservation with focus on prototypes for conservation rebinding; appropriate care of books, papers, photographs (traditional and digital), film, and other non-print items; fundamental instruction in methods of page repair, investigation of eight historical prototypes, construction of related conservation binding models; lecture, discussion, student presentation, and hands-on activities. Prerequisites: 021:101. Same as 024:155.

021:202 Research Methods
Concepts and methods for research in library and information science; emphasis on design of qualitative and quantitative research; data collection techniques appropriate to information professions; examination and evaluation of research in the professional literature.

021:205 Literacy and Learning
Learning and literacy theory relevant to work in information services; how librarians can help people process information and use it to form understanding and create new knowledge. Prerequisites: 021:101.

021:210 Social Informatics
Study of information and communication tools (ICTs) in cultural or institutional contexts; how ICTs are conceptualized, disseminated, and used in everyday and specialized environments such as libraries, education settings, corporations, local communities, cultural groups, political campaigns, and Web 2.0. Prerequisites: 021:101. Same as 200:220.

021:222 Beginning Cataloging and Classification
Systems for describing materials and information in catalogs and organizing them for effective retrieval in libraries, museums, and other information centers; AACR2 descriptive principles, Dewey and Library of Congress classifications, Sears and LC subject headings, cataloging networks and services. Prerequisites: 021:122.

021:223 Advanced Cataloging and Classification
Special problems in description of materials; authority work; file structures; serials, other nonmonographic materials; Library of Congress, other classifications; subject retrieval; reclassification, other administrative issues; international bibliographic criteria; online cataloging experience. Prerequisites: 021:222.

021:224 Electronic Publishing
Modes and methods for building electronic journals, books, thematic collections; new genres for publishing, including blogs, wikis, comics, short stories on the web; social, political, and economic forces that shape electronic publishing; XML-based project. Prerequisites: 021:120. Same as 108:224.

021:226 Digital Environments
Methods and models for building digital libraries; organization with metadata; standards such as those for object identifiers, open access, building cross-linkages between collections; automatic harvesting of content. Prerequisites: 021:120.

021:228 Hypertext Systems
Theory, design, and implementation of hypertext-based information systems; access mechanisms, including navigation, browsing, search; issues in representation of information, user interfaces; case studies of representative systems, including the World Wide Web. Prerequisites: 021:120.

021:232 Race, Gender, and Technology
Brief, critical look at the ways race and gender shape the uses and design of information and communication technologies (ICTs); ICTs as a part of our social infrastructure; how the integration of ICTs into Western culture has affected, transformed, or been transformed by interactions with racial groups, men, and women; interrogate assumptions behind technology’s promises of efficiency and progress--what are the norms and values embodied within the artifacts we use every day? Same as 160:232.
021:234 Knowledge Management 3 s.h.
How organizations acquire, manage, and use information; knowledge management and competitive intelligence, information from inside and outside the organization; organization types, including library, corporate, and nonprofit. Corequisites: 06K:230. Same as 06K:234.

021:236 Use and Users 3 s.h.
Information needs and uses; theories and models of information seeking and use, formal and informal information channels, barriers to information. Prerequisites: 021:101.

021:239 Topics: Conceptual Structures/Systems 1-3 s.h.
Special topics relevant to conceptual structures (e.g., knowledge, representation, manipulation schemes) and systems (e.g., intelligent OPACS, user interface technologies). Repeatable. Prerequisites: 021:122.

021:240 Collection Management 3 s.h.
Collection management of print and electronic resources; selection and management principles, policies, procedures in various settings; production and distribution of resources; intellectual freedom. Prerequisites: 021:101 and 021:122.

021:242 Search and Discovery 3 s.h.
Search system architecture; information needs and queries; search models; concepts in relevance and repositories, archives, web-based systems; information quality measures.

021:244 Government Information Resources 3 s.h.
Emphasis on federal documents as an information resource; state, local, foreign, international materials; special concerns of organizing and administering document collections. Prerequisites: 021:141.

021:249 Topics in Book Studies 1-3 s.h.

021:252 Human Computer Interaction 3 s.h.
Design user interfaces for interacting with information, emphasis on system design and evaluation (as opposed to system implementation); construct interface prototypes, conduct evaluations of design. Prerequisites: 021:120.

021:254 Analysis of Scholarly Domains 3 s.h.
Information transfer in academic disciplines; scientific method, other means of knowledge construction, resulting literatures; reference tools used to control literature for a variety of audiences; emphasis on humanities, social sciences, or sciences. Requirements: (for 021:254) 021:141. Same as 160:230.

021:256 History of Readers and Reading 3 s.h.
Cultural nature of reading practices in historic and contemporary contexts of reading; reading communities; dimensions of gender, age, class, religion, race, ethnicity; examples of recent scholarship; use of primary resources; seminar. Prerequisites: 021:101. Same as 108:220.

021:258 The Transition from Manuscript to Print 3 s.h.
Western manuscripts and books 1200-1600; changes in production and distribution methods and in how texts were used, in cultural context. Same as 108:183, 16E:118.

021:259 Topics: Resources/Services 1-3 s.h.
Current topics in types of information resources and services.

021:260 Organizational Management 3 s.h.
Survey of management issues common to all information environments--understanding organizations, decision making, hiring and personnel, grant writing, and marketing. Prerequisites: 021:101.
021:261 Strategic Management 3 s.h.
Management and administration of all types of libraries; basics of leadership and teamwork, management issues, and skills in context of the organization.

021:262 School Library Media Administration 3 s.h.
Design of library media programs for the major functions of teaching and learning, information access, and program administration; focus on curricular and teaching responsibilities of school librarians and media specialists, development of philosophy, examination of roles and responsibilities, and program evaluation. Prerequisites: 021:101.

021:263 Nonprofit Organizational Effectiveness I 3 s.h.

021:265 Nonprofit Organizational Effectiveness II 3 s.h.

021:270 Public Libraries 3 s.h.
Historical development of public libraries; current issues in public library management and policy making, including intellectual freedom; readers advisory service and genres of popular materials for adults. Prerequisites: 021:101.

021:271 College and University Libraries 3 s.h.
Objectives, organization, unique functions and services of academic libraries; educational environment in which academic libraries function; examination of issues and problems affecting academic libraries. Prerequisites: 021:101.

021:272 Special Libraries 3 s.h.
Management, organizational structures, collections, client services in special libraries; site visits to a variety of special libraries, information centers; projects that apply theoretical principles.

021:275 Health Informatics I 3 s.h.

021:278 Information Policy 3 s.h.
Development of policy based on ethical and legal issues in library and information professions; intellectual freedom, intellectual property, privacy, equity.

021:279 Topics: Policy/Planning 1-3 s.h.
Current topics in national and international policies, their impact on planning. Repeatable. Same as 108:222.

021:280 Health Informatics II 3 s.h.
Selected health informatics initiatives, including computer-based patient records, physiologic monitoring, networking, imaging, virtual reality; participation in an interdisciplinary project team focused on an informatics innovation; application and research seminars. Same as 051:189, 056:287, 074:192, 096:289, 200:120.

021:282 Practicum in Libraries and Information Centers 2-3 s.h.
Supervised field experience in selected libraries and information centers; emphasis on application of theory to practice; at least 80 hours of fieldwork.
021:284 School Library Media Practicum
3 s.h.
Supervised field experience in library media centers at elementary and secondary school levels; emphasis on application of theory to practice; at least 80 hours of fieldwork. Prerequisites: 021:262.

021:289 Seminar in Library and Information Science
3 s.h.
Contemporary issues in library and information science; student presentations, guest speakers.

021:290 Capstone
1 s.h.
Opportunity for students to synthesize their learning in the program, to reflect on their professional education as they prepare for graduation, and to form goals. Requirements: 27 s.h. earned in library and information science.

021:292 Independent Study
1-3 s.h.
Formal contract between student and faculty member. Requirements: formal proposal.

021:299 Thesis
0-6 s.h.

Graduate degree: Ph.D. in Molecular and Cellular Biology
Web site: http://molcellbio.grad.uiowa.edu

The Molecular and Cellular Biology Program provides interdisciplinary training in the concepts and methodologies fundamental to the investigation of biological mechanisms at the molecular level. Faculty members are involved in a variety of research projects related to gene expression and regulation.

Graduate Program

- Doctor of Philosophy in molecular and cellular biology

Doctor of Philosophy

The Doctor of Philosophy program in molecular and cellular biology requires a minimum of 72 s.h. of graduate credit. The program is sufficiently flexible to accommodate students with a wide range of backgrounds in the biological and physical sciences. Entering students are expected to have a solid background in science, including introductory biology and chemistry, organic chemistry, physical chemistry, calculus, genetics, and biochemistry. Students can remedy deficiencies in particular areas by taking appropriate courses during the first year of graduate study.

The curriculum consists of a sequence of required, core, and elective courses that provide didactic training in molecular and cellular biology and that ensure comprehensive exposure to concepts and experimental methodologies in the field. Students engage in laboratory research immediately upon enrollment and progress rapidly to original thesis projects that lead to a Ph.D.

Because of the diversity of biological research problems that can be pursued by employing molecular and cellular approaches, the program provides options for specialization in particular areas of interest.

The Ph.D. in molecular and cellular biology requires the following course work.

Didactic Course Work

All of these:
142:215 Transcription and Multifunctional Regulation by RNA  1 s.h.
142:216 Chromatin Structure and Disease  1 s.h.
142:220 Mechanisms of Cellular Organization  3 s.h.
156:204 Biostatistics for Biomedical Research  1 s.h.

These, if recommended by the advisor:

099:243 Biophysical Chemistry Module 1: Protein Structure, Stability, and Dynamics  1 s.h.
156:201 Fundamentals of Gene Expression  1 s.h.
156:203 Fundamentals of Dynamic Cell Processes  1 s.h.

Students take electives in addition to the courses listed above to total 18 s.h. of credit in didactic course work.

Seminars and Professional Development

All students take both of these:

142:290 Seminars in Molecular and Cellular Biology  1 s.h.
650:270 Principles of Scholarly Integrity  1 s.h.

Precomprehensive students take this each semester:

142:280 Topics in Molecular and Cellular Biology  1 s.h.

Postcomprehensive students take this each semester:

Journal club of the student’s choice  1 s.h.

Thesis Research and Dissertation

After successfully completing the comprehensive examination, usually at the end of the second year of graduate study, students advance to candidacy for the Ph.D. degree. They devote their time to completing thesis research and writing their Ph.D. dissertation. Upon successful completion of all requirements, including the dissertation and its oral defense, students are awarded a Ph.D. in molecular and cellular biology.

Admission

For application materials and information about graduate training in molecular and cellular biology, contact the Molecular and Cellular Biology Program or visit its web site.

Applicants must meet the admission requirements of the Graduate College; see the Manual of Rules and Regulations of the Graduate College or the Graduate (p. 1117) College section of the Catalog.

Financial Support

Graduate students in the Molecular and Cellular Biology Program receive stipends and tuition support from institutional and extramural sources, including University of Iowa fellowships and graduate research assistantships, and training grants from the National Institutes of Health.

Facilities

Training is conducted primarily in laboratories and teaching facilities of the Carver College of Medicine Departments of Anatomy and Cell Biology, Biochemistry, Internal Medicine, Microbiology, Molecular Physiology and Biophysics, Neurology, Obstetrics and Gynecology, Pathology, Pediatrics, Pharmacology, and Radiation Oncology; the College of Dentistry Department of Orthodontics; and in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences Departments of Biology and Chemistry. Faculty laboratories and central research facilities available to students provide access to the most up-to-date research equipment.

Courses

142:215 Transcription and Multifunctional Regulation by RNA  1 s.h.
Principles and techniques for investigating mechanisms of controlling eukaryotic gene expression; basic genome organization, chromatin structure, transcription, RNA processing, translation; cloning methods, use of electronic sequence databases, footprinting, chromatin immunoprecipitation, in vivo and in vitro transcription assays, DNA microarray analysis, information retrieval. Prerequisites: 156:201.

142:216 Chromatin Structure and Disease  1 s.h.
Transcriptional control by chromatin, emphasis on human disease; based on research publications. Prerequisites: 156:201.
142:217 Cancer, Epigenetics, and Genetic Manipulations in Mice
1 s.h.
Epigenetic mechanisms of transcriptional control, mouse models for understanding the molecular basis for human disease; based on research publications. Prerequisites: 156:201.

142:220 Mechanisms of Cellular Organization
3 s.h.
Current understanding of basic cell biological processes; key experiments that led to guiding insights; mechanisms that cells use for compartmentalization and how those mechanisms are regulated; biogenesis of major organelles (e.g., mitochondria, peroxisomes, nucleus, secretory/endocytic membrane system); functions of cytoskeleton in cell motility, organelle motility, and cell division. Prerequisites: 099:130. Same as 060:216, 072:220.

142:225 Growth Factor Receptor Signaling
1 s.h.
Mechanisms of signaling by growth factors; cytokines and related molecules that regulate cell proliferation, development, differentiation, and survival; emphasis on molecular mechanisms of signaling, relevance of these signaling processes to various human diseases. Recommendations: 156:201, 156:202, and 156:203. Same as 060:225, 072:225.

142:226 Cell Cycle Control
1 s.h.

142:227 Cell Fate Decisions
1 s.h.

142:230 Cell Migration from Development to Metastasis
1 s.h.
Introduction to major cell migration events during development, culminating in how such principles of migration are reutilized during cancer metastasis; emphasis on utilizing current literature in the field to understand how to study cell migration, questions that can be asked, and what remains to be determined.

142:280 Topics in Molecular and Cellular Biology
1 s.h.
Opportunity to work closely with participating faculty to gain skill in critical reading of research literature and facility in presenting the material to an audience. Repeatable. Requirements: advanced graduate standing.

142:290 Seminars in Molecular and Cellular Biology
1 s.h.
Research findings in molecular biology. Requirements: molecular and cellular biology graduate standing.

142:299 Mechanisms of Parasitism Journal Club
1 s.h.
Reviews of recent publications in molecular parasitology research and thesis research by training grant or journal club students. Same as 061:299.

142:301 Directed Study in Molecular and Cellular Biology
arr.

142:305 Molecular and Cellular Biology Research
arr.
Requirements: molecular and cellular biology graduate standing.

Graduate degree: Ph.D. in Neuroscience
Web site: http://neuroscience.grad.uiowa.edu

The Neuroscience Program provides an interdisciplinary and interdepartmental approach to graduate education and research training in the structure, function, and development of the nervous system and its role in cognition and behavior. Students obtain training at all levels of the nervous system, from cellular/molecular to behavioral/cognitive.

Graduate Program

- Doctor of Philosophy in neuroscience

Doctor of Philosophy

The Doctor of Philosophy program in neuroscience requires a minimum of 72 s.h. of graduate credit. The program’s curriculum is designed around three tracks: molecular/cellular, developmental/systems, and cognitive/behavioral. Following broad-based instruction in a core curriculum, students specialize in one of the tracks.

Within a framework of core, track-specific, and elective courses, each student pursues a program of study individually designed according to his or her undergraduate training and graduate research goals. After enrolling in the Neuroscience Program, entering students consult with the advisory committee regarding their level of preparation for the program’s required courses.

The Student Advisory Committee meets with all first- and second-year graduate students once each semester, helping each student explore his or her research interests and select faculty mentors for the required laboratory rotations. Each student is expected to complete three rotations in faculty laboratories before selecting a thesis advisor. Rotations ordinarily last 12 weeks but may last from 8 to 16 weeks. Under special circumstances, two rotations may be in the same laboratory, an arrangement that permits the student to learn a variety of techniques and approaches before settling down to work on the dissertation project. Students usually choose a dissertation lab at the end of their first year.

BACKGROUND REQUIREMENTS

Students are expected to demonstrate competency, through prerequisites or course work, in each of four fields: biochemistry, general physiology, cell biology, and statistics. These requirements ordinarily should be fulfilled by the end of the first year of graduate study. Waivers of background course requirements may be requested by students who have taken equivalent courses before entering the Neuroscience Program.

ELECTIVES

Elective requirements may be met with three or more courses from a list of courses offered by the Departments of Anatomy and Cell Biology, Biology, Molecular Physiology and Biophysics, Pharmacology, Psychology, and other departments as appropriate. Students must take electives in at least two of the program’s three tracks, ensuring that they receive advanced training both in their area of specialization and in related areas of neuroscience. With permission of the Student Advisory Committee, students may satisfy the elective requirement wholly or in part by registration in 132:301 Directed Study in Neuroscience.

Admission

Applicants must meet the admission requirements of the Graduate College; see the Manual of Rules and Regulations of the Graduate College or the Graduate (p. 1117) College section of the Catalog.

For information about predoctoral training opportunities in neuroscience, contact the Neuroscience Program or visit its web site.

Financial Support

Full-time Neuroscience Program students receive stipends and full tuition scholarships through fellowships and research assistantships. Awards are renewed annually, based on continued satisfactory progress and availability of funds. The standard stipend for graduate students is $25,000 for 2010-11.

The Neuroscience Program is committed to supporting its graduate students for their entire training period. Students normally are supported in the first year by the program. After that, support is expected to come from the student’s primary research mentor. Occasionally, advanced students are supported through teaching assistantships. Tuition is paid for all students.

NIH TRAINING GRANT

The Neuroscience Program is supported by a training grant from the National Institutes of Health. The grant provides stipend and tuition support for a select group of first- and second-year graduate students.

Facilities

Training is conducted primarily in the laboratories and teaching facilities of the Carver College of Medicine graduate Departments of Anatomy and Cell Biology, Biochemistry, Molecular Physiology and Biophysics, and Pharmacology; clinical Departments of Internal Medicine, Neurology, and Psychiatry; and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences graduate Departments of Biology, Communication Sciences and Disorders, Health and Human Physiology, and Psychology. Students use faculty laboratories and central research facilities for ultrastructural analysis; histochemistry and immunocytochemistry; electrophysiology; fluorescence-activated cell sorting; cellular and subcellular biochemistry; cell, tissue, and organ culture; operant and classical conditioning; molecular biology; behavioral genetics; neural substrates of complex behavior; brain-behavior relationships in humans; neuropsychology; and functional neuroimaging (PET, fMRI).
132:161 Undergraduate Research in Neuroscience
Experimental research under faculty supervision.

132:180 Fundamental Neurobiology
4 s.h.
Cellular neurobiology (cytoskeleton and transport, membrane physiology, synaptic transmission and plasticity, sensory transduction); systems neurobiology (peripheral and central sensory processing, autonomic and somatic motor systems); cognitive neurobiology (emotion, biological rhythms and sleep, memory, attention, language); developmental neurobiology. Prerequisites: 002:145. Recommendations: 002:114 and 099:110. Same as 002:180.

132:181 Neurophysiology
3-4 s.h.
Physiological properties of nerve cells, nervous systems; axonal conduction, synaptic transmission, sensory transduction, integrative processes, higher functions. Prerequisites: 002:180, 22M:025, and 029:012 or 029:082. Same as 002:181.

132:184 Developmental Neurobiology
3 s.h.
Neural induction and nervous system patterning; neurogenesis, axon and dendrite outgrowth and targeting; synapse formation, specificity, refinement; mechanisms of neuronal cell death; myelination; neural stem cells; introduction to cellular, molecular, and genetic techniques in studies of neural development. Requirements: grade of B- or higher in 002:180 or graduate standing. Same as 002:184, 072:184.

132:209 Steroid Receptor Signaling
1 s.h.
Structure-function relationship and genomic and nongenomic actions of the steroid hormone receptor family; basis for actions of novel new ligands on these receptors. Offered spring semesters. Same as 071:209, 072:209.

132:235 Neurobiology of Disease
3 s.h.
Broad, thematic understanding of disease mechanisms in neurobiological disorders.

132:240 Topics in Cognitive Neuroscience
3 s.h.
Key topics in the neural basis of human cognition; research literature. Recommendations: graduate courses in basic neuroscience and cognitive psychology. Same as 064:240.

132:241 Fundamentals of Behavioral Neuroscience
3 s.h.
Concepts, methods, and findings in behavioral and cognitive neurosciences; emphasis on principles of neuroscience, sensation, motivation, emotion. Same as 031:241.

132:242 Fundamentals of Learning and Behavior
3 s.h.
Concepts, methods, and findings in behavioral and cognitive neurosciences; emphasis on principles of comparative psychology, motor control, learning. Same as 031:242.

132:250 Functional Magnetic Resonance Imaging
2-3 s.h.
Basic physics principles of functional magnetic resonance imaging and approaches to data acquisition, including BOLD imaging, arterial spin labeling, and magnetic source imaging; data analysis strategies; paradigm design and development. Same as 051:280.

132:265 Neuroscience Seminar
0-1 s.h.

132:277 Mechanisms of Pain Transmission
3 s.h.
Anatomical, physiological, and pharmacological mechanisms underlying peripheral and central neuronal processing of pain; emphasis on neuronal changes that occur during pathological conditions such as inflammation/arthritis, peripheral neuropathy. Offered fall semesters of even years. Same as 071:277, 101:277.

132:301 Directed Study in Neuroscience
arr.
132:305 Neuroscience Research arr.
Requirements: neuroscience graduate standing.

Neuropsychology and Neuroscience
Clinical neuropsychology and cognitive neuroscience: cutting-edge research from scientific journals, case presentations in clinical neuropsychology, and current research. Same as 031:365, 064:365.
Rhetorics of Inquiry (POROI)

Graduate nondegree program: Certificate in Rhetorics of Inquiry
Web site: http://poroi.grad.uiowa.edu

The Project on Rhetorics of Inquiry (POROI) is an interdisciplinary program whose aim is to improve academic inquiry and scholarly writing in the arts, humanities, sciences, and professions, especially at the intersections between disciplines. POROI explores how scholarship and professional discourse are conducted through argument, how paradigms of knowledge are sensitive to social-political contexts, and how the presentation of scholarly and professional findings is an audience-sensitive process. The program offers classes, seminars, workshops, conferences, and a peer-reviewed online journal, Poroi: An Interdisciplinary Journal of Rhetorical Analysis and Invention.

POROI also collaborates with the Graduate College to offer a certificate for graduate students.

Graduate Program

• Certificate in Rhetorics of Inquiry

Certificate

The Certificate in Rhetorics of Inquiry requires completion of four POROI courses (normally a minimum of 12 s.h.). Students may pursue the certificate in conjunction with a graduate degree in any field. The interdisciplinary program helps students hone their skills for arguing in oral, written, and multimedia forms within their own disciplines and broaden their understanding of the similarities and differences among various fields.

The certificate program’s objectives are to:
• improve students’ awareness of the rhetorical dimensions of argumentation and inquiry; and
• certify that students who have completed the program are prepared to do rhetorical and cross-disciplinary work after they graduate.

All certificate students must complete 160:200 Introduction to Rhetorics of Inquiry and three additional POROI courses of their choice. See "Courses" below.

Admission

Master’s and doctoral candidates in good standing are eligible to enter the certificate program. To enroll, contact the Project on Rhetorics of Inquiry.

Courses

POROI courses are open to certificate students and to those not enrolled in the certificate program.

160:110 Undergraduate Independent Study on Rhetoric of Inquiry
Independent study on the rhetoric of inquiry; connections between discourses that at first may not seem connected. Requirements: undergraduate standing.

160:160 Issues in Rhetoric and Culture
Rhetorical theory and criticism as culturally embedded practices; rhetorical production of selves and social difference; relationships between rhetoric and literature, philosophy, popular texts. Communication studies majors may apply this course to the following area requirement. AREA: Context. Requirements: (for 036:146) g.p.a. of at least 2.50, completion of Foundations of Communication requirement, and 6 s.h. of intermediate-level course work. Same as 036:146, 048:160.

160:161 Rhetorical Issues in Health Care
Role of rhetoric in health care practice, decisions, and ethics; rhetorical production of patient and professional selves in health care; varied practices, diverse perspectives, and situated production of medical and health care knowledge. Requirements: satisfactory completion of rhetoric General Education requirement. Same as 010:161, 153:161.
160:170 Philosophy of the Body 3 s.h.
Philosophical treatment of the body; perspectives from classical, modern, and contemporary texts from Western philosophy, and texts from feminist theory, critical race theory, cultural studies, and disability studies. Prerequisites: 131:010. Same as 131:170.

160:180 Literature and Translation 3 s.h.
Translation in the broadest sense; originality, authority, authorship, accuracy, ownership, audience; issues problematizing differences between medium and message. Same as 041:180, 048:180.

160:183 Invention 3 s.h.
How to get writing going, keep it going, and write in an authentic meaningful way.

160:200 Introduction to Rhetorics of Inquiry 2-4 s.h.
How connections between discourses that don’t seem connected suggest innovative arguments and ways of crossing boundaries between disciplines. Same as 036:210.

160:210 Independent Study Rhetorics of Inquiry arr.
Repeatable.

160:216 Conflict, Negotiation, and Planning 3 s.h.
Conflict within communities, and planners’ responses; networking, negotiating, mediating, coalition building, consensus building; case studies, role playing. Requirements: (for 102:216) 102:203. Same as 102:216.

160:223 Deliberation, Advocacy, and Civic Engagement 3 s.h.
Practices of public deliberation in governance and civil society; counterpublic sphere discourses. Same as 036:223.

160:230 Analysis of Scholarly Domains 3 s.h.
Information transfer in academic disciplines; scientific method, other means of knowledge construction, resulting literatures; reference tools used to control literature for a variety of audiences; emphasis on humanities, social sciences, or sciences. Requirements: (for 021:254) 021:141. Same as 021:254.

160:232 Race, Gender, and Technology 3 s.h.
Brief, critical look at the ways race and gender shape the uses and design of information and communication technologies (ICTs); ICTs as a part of our social infrastructure; how the integration of ICTs into Western culture has affected, transformed, or been transformed by interactions with racial groups, men, and women; interrogate assumptions behind technology's promises of efficiency and progress--what are the norms and values embodied within the artifacts we use every day? Same as 021:232.

160:233 Media Communication Theory II 3 s.h.
Continuation of 019:231; social scientific theories. Same as 019:232.

160:239 Topics 3 s.h.

160:243 Feminist Cultural Studies 3 s.h.

160:247 Crossing Borders Seminar 2-3 s.h.

160:250 Introduction to Rhetoric of Science 3 s.h.
How science is related to social and political practices, examined by placing philosophical and pedagogical controversies about scientific method into their historical and rhetorical contexts. Same as 036:250.

Graduate degree: Ph.D. in Second Language Acquisition
Web site: http://international.uiowa.edu/centers/flare/default.asp

Second language acquisition (SLA) is a multidisciplinary field whose goal is to understand the processes that underlie non-native language learning. The Second Language Acquisition Program draws from varied academic disciplines, among them linguistics, psychology, psycholinguistics, sociology, sociolinguistics, discourse analysis, conversation analysis, and education.

Graduate Program

- Doctor of Philosophy in second language acquisition

Doctor of Philosophy

The Doctor of Philosophy program in second language acquisition requires 72 s.h., including a maximum of 33 s.h. earned in work toward a master’s degree. The program is interdisciplinary and focuses on languages other than English. Students interested in pursuing the Ph.D. must hold a master’s degree in an appropriate field (e.g., linguistics, foreign language education, English as a second language) or have equivalent academic experience. Students begin the program in the fall.

Doctoral students may specialize in one of three areas: linguistics, language program direction, or technology. They may pursue their interdisciplinary interests in courses offered by the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences Departments of Asian and Slavic Languages and Literatures, Communication Sciences and Disorders, French and Italian, German, Linguistics, Rhetoric, and Spanish and Portuguese, and the College of Education Departments of Psychological and Quantitative Foundations, and Teaching and Learning.

The program is divided into foundation courses (13 courses, or 39 s.h.); specialization courses (5 courses, or 15 s.h.), and dissertation work (18 s.h.). A course may be used to fulfill only one requirement.

FOUNDATION COURSES

All of these:

164:201 Second Language Acquisition Research and Theory I 3 s.h.
164:202 Second Language Acquisition Research and Theory II 3 s.h.
164:211 Multimedia and Second Language Acquisition 3 s.h.

Two of these:

07S:184 Reading in a Second Language (or 164:226, but not both) 3 s.h.
164:221 Topics in Second Language Acquisition: Speaking 3 s.h.
164:223 Topics in Second Language Acquisition: Listening 3 s.h.
164:225/013:259 Grammar in Second Language Teaching/Learning 3 s.h.
164:226 Reading in Non-Roman Scripts (or 07S:184, but not both) 3 s.h.
164:227 Topics in Second Language Acquisition: Writing 3 s.h.
164:229 Cultural Curriculum 3 s.h.

To complete the foundation requirement, students select one course from each of the following eight areas, in consultation with their advisor. With the advisor’s approval, students may use courses not listed here to fulfill the requirement.

SPECIALIZATION COURSES

Each student selects one of three specialization areas—linguistics, language program direction, or technology—and takes five courses (total of 15 s.h.) in that area.

Linguistics Specialization

The linguistics specialization requires the following courses.

One of these three-course sequences (group 1 or group 2):

Group 1

103:203 Introduction to Phonology
103:204 Phonological Theory
103:214 Advanced Phonological Theory

Group 2

103:201 Introduction to Syntax
103:202 Syntactic Theory
103:212 Advanced Syntactic Theory

One of these:

103:211 Generative Second Language Acquisition
An alternate course on linguistic theory and second language acquisition

One of these:

031:122 Language Development
031:218 Cognitive Development
An alternate course on parsing/psycholinguistic mechanisms

Language Program Direction Specialization

Students who choose the language program direction specialization take five of the following courses (chosen from those not taken to satisfy the foundation requirements).

07P:203 Design of Instruction
07P:215 Web-Based Learning
07S:180 Issues in Foreign Language Education
07S:183 Second Language Classroom Learning
07S:184 Reading in a Second Language
07S:197 Principles of Course Design for Second Language Instruction
07S:202 Second Language Program Management
07S:203 Second Language Planning in Education
07S:208 Designing Materials for Second Language Instruction
07S:415 Ph.D. Seminar in Language, Literacy, and Culture
039:204 Teaching Chinese as a Foreign Language III
164:205 Analysis of L1 and L2 Data
164:221 Topics in Second Language Acquisition: Speaking
164:222 Advanced Japanese Pedagogy
164:223 Topics in Second Language Acquisition: Listening
164:225 Grammar in Second Language Teaching/Learning
164:226 Reading in Non-Roman Scripts
164:227 Topics in Second Language Acquisition: Writing
164:228 Special Topics in Japanese Linguistics
164:229 Cultural Curriculum
039:204 Teaching Chinese as a Foreign Language III
164:230 Internship
07P:203 Design of Instruction
07P:275 Constructivism and Design of Instruction

Some students may include an internship experience as part of the specialization.

164:230 Internship

Technology Specialization

The technology specialization requires the following courses.

A three-course sequence in psychological and quantitative foundations:

One of these:

07P:203 Design of Instruction
07P:215 Web-Based Learning
021:120 Computing Foundations
22C:104 Introduction to Informatics
103:157 Linguistic Theory and Second Language Acquisition

Students choose their remaining specialization course work from the following (others may be approved by the student’s advisor).

07P:203 Learning, Technology, and Effective Teaching
021:120 Computing Foundations
22C:104 Introduction to Informatics
103:157 Linguistic Theory and Second Language Acquisition
164:212 Practicum in CALL Software 1-4 s.h.
Development
A practicum course 3 s.h.

Either of these (if not taken for the three-course sequence in psychological and quantitative foundations, above):

07P:205 Design of Instruction 3 s.h.
07P:275 Constructivism and Design of Instruction 3 s.h.

*Either of these:

07P:293 Individual Instruction in Psychological and Quantitative Foundations 3 s.h.
164:302 Special Projects in Second Language Acquisition 3 s.h.

*May be taken after students have completed the core design and technology courses (07P:205 Design of Instruction or 07P:275 Constructivism and Design of Instruction, 07P:208 Designing Educational Multimedia, 07P:215 Web-Based Learning).

THESIS

All candidates must complete a thesis (164:303 Ph.D. Thesis), for which they may earn up to 18 s.h.

OPTIONAL COURSE WORK

Students may include the following optional course work in their degree programs.

164:300 Special Topics in Second Language Acquisition arr. s.h.
164:301 Readings in Second Language Acquisition arr. s.h.
164:302 Special Projects in Second Language Acquisition arr. s.h.

Admission

Admission is for fall semester; students are admitted only for full-time study. Applicants must meet the admission requirements of the Graduate College; see the Manual of Rules and Regulations of the Graduate College or the Graduate (p. 1117) College section of the Catalog. Strong applicants hold a master’s degree in a related area, have a cumulative g.p.a. of at least 3.50 in master’s degree work, and speak and write English and another language at a professional level. Applicants must submit a writing sample that demonstrates their ability to synthesize and analyze information using standard academic English.

Financial Support

Teaching assistantships are available through the Foreign Language Acquisition Research and Education Program (FLARE). Assistantships usually involve teaching elementary or intermediate language courses. FLARE also offers a limited number of research assistantships. Visit the FLARE web site for details.

Courses

164:120 Elementary Indonesian I 4 s.h.
Bahasa Indonesian language for those with no prior study of the language; emphasis on functional communication skills (listening, speaking, reading, writing).

164:121 Elementary Indonesian II 4 s.h.
Continuation of 164:120; emphasis on functional communication skills (listening, speaking, reading, writing). Prerequisites: 164:120.

164:125 Conversational Indonesian 1 s.h.
Open conversation in Indonesian language; active participation. Prerequisites: 164:120 and 164:121.

164:130 Elementary Turkish I 4 s.h.
Turkish language for those with no prior study of the language; emphasis on functional communication skills (listening, speaking, reading, writing). Same as 187:130.

164:131 Elementary Turkish II 4 s.h.
Continuation of 164:130; emphasis on functional communication skills (listening, speaking, reading, writing). Prerequisites: 164:130. Same as 187:131.

164:135 Conversational Turkish 1 s.h.
Open conversation in Turkish language; active participation. Prerequisites: 164:130 and 164:131. Same as 187:135.
164:140 Language Development 3 s.h.
Introduction to first language acquisition, with focus on infancy through five years; sound discrimination abilities, word learning, babbling and speech production, acquisition of grammar; perspectives from psychology, audiology, linguistics, speech pathology. Prerequisites: 031:002. Requirements: grade of C- or higher in 031:010 and grade of C- or higher in 031:014 or 031:016. Same as 031:122.

164:157 Linguistic Theory and Second Language Acquisition 3 s.h.
Introduction of research results obtained by generative second language acquisition framework and their implications for classroom teaching methods; current views of language architecture; focus on inflectional morphology and linguistic interfaces, which have been proposed to be severe bottlenecks for acquisition; research findings on acquisition of syntax, phonology, semantics, linguistic pragmatics; pedagogical implications of these findings. Prerequisites: 103:111 and 103:112. Same as 103:157.

164:160 Articulatory and Acoustic Phonetics 3 s.h.
Production and transcription of sounds in human languages; physics of sound, computer analysis of speech sounds. Offered fall semesters. Same as 103:110.

164:163 Methods of Teaching English as a Second Language 3 s.h.
Observations of ESL and intensive English classes at the University; design and presentation of short lessons, text evaluation, demonstrations of innovative approaches of the last decade; materials. Offered spring semesters. Prerequisites: 103:110 and 103:141. Same as 103:145.

164:170 Issues in Foreign Language Education 3 s.h.
Theoretical perspectives of pivotal research issues at the forefront of foreign language education; systems available to foreign language professionals for disseminating research. Same as 07S:180.

164:171 Second Language Classroom Learning 3 s.h.
Synthesis of empirical findings on children's and adults' learning of a second or foreign language; emphasis on theoretical underpinnings of approaches, methods, techniques in language teaching. Same as 039:177, 07S:183.

164:172 Reading in a Second Language 3 s.h.
Current theory, research, practice in second language reading field; role of textual features and the reader in reading comprehension. Same as 07S:184.

164:173 Curriculum Foundations 2-3 s.h.
Elementary and secondary background developments in curriculum; definitions, historical perspective, philosophies, theories of knowledge, models, learning theories, directions of development and shaping forces; emphasis on development of a curriculum project. Same as 07S:186.

164:174 Principles of Course Design for Second Language Instruction 3 s.h.
Contemporary views of second language curriculum design; guidelines necessary for the creation of prototypical curriculum units to be transposed into classroom-ready forms; for individuals interested in foreign language materials development. Same as 07S:197.

164:181 Introduction to Chinese Linguistics 3 s.h.
Aspects of modern Chinese linguistics, such as Chinese phonology, syntax, pedagogical grammar, history of the language. Taught in English. Same as 039:144, 103:144.

164:186 Introduction to Spanish Syntax 3 s.h.
Basic principles of generative syntax as applied to analysis of Spanish syntactic structure; extensive syntactic analysis. Prerequisites: 035:121. Same as 035:186.
164:189 Introduction to Spanish Phonology
Sound patterns of Spanish; how various theoretical approaches solve basic problems in Spanish phonology; identification of linguistic universals, how they are manifested in the sound structure of Spanish. Prerequisites: 035:121 or 035:122. Same as 035:189.

164:201 Second Language Acquisition Research and Theory I
Theories regarding success and failure in acquisition of second or subsequent languages; research, issues. Same as 009:237, 035:201, 039:200, 39J:201.

164:202 Second Language Acquisition Research and Theory II
Continuation of 164:201. Prerequisites: 164:201. Same as 035:202, 039:201.

164:203 Introduction to Phonology
Analysis of sound systems, focus on early generative phonological theory; extensive practice in analysis using data from a variety of languages; linguistic argumentation. Prerequisites: 103:110. Same as 103:203.

164:205 Analysis of L1 and L2 Data
Issues in qualitative and quantitative analysis of first- and second-language data; data collection, analytical frameworks and approaches. Prerequisites: 164:201. Same as 039:205.

164:207 Sociolinguistics
Topics such as discourse and conversation analyses, linguistic pragmatics, linguistic variations, issues of language and gender. Prerequisites: 103:100. Same as 039:207.

164:211 Multimedia and Second Language Acquisition
Foreign language multimedia in the context of current second language acquisition theories and research; readings on interactivity, interface design, feedback, learner control, and acquisition of vocabulary, grammar, and culture; multimedia development project. Requirements: foreign language teaching methodology course. Same as 009:238, 013:253, 035:212.

164:212 Practicum in CALL Software Development
Supervised experience in an applied setting involving development of computer-assisted language learning (CALL) software. Repeatable. Prerequisites: 164:211. Requirements: faculty sponsor.

164:221 Topics in Second Language Acquisition: Speaking
Theory, pedagogy, research, and assessment in second language speaking. Same as 009:236, 035:228.

164:222 Advanced Japanese Pedagogy

164:223 Topics in Second Language Acquisition: Listening
Theory, pedagogy, research, and assessment in second language listening. Same as 039:223.

164:225 Grammar in Second Language Teaching/Learning
Grammar, second language acquisition, and teaching. Taught in English, projects in varied languages. Same as 013:259.
164:226 Reading in Non-Roman Scripts 3 s.h.
Theory and practice of reading in languages that use non-Roman alphabets, syllabary, logographic systems; reading in first and second language contexts; instructional and literacy development issues. Prerequisites: 07E:171 or 07P:270 or 07S:184. Same as 07S:207.

164:227 Topics in Second Language Acquisition: Writing 3 s.h.
Theory, pedagogy, research, and assessment in second language writing. Taught in English. Same as 010:275, 035:227.

164:228 Special Topics in Japanese Linguistics 3 s.h.
Topics in applied linguistics and language pedagogy related to Japanese language. Same as 39J:239.

164:229 Cultural Curriculum 3 s.h.
Culture’s role in foreign/second language teaching; definition, pedagogy, assessment, and materials that allow culture to be taught and learned. Same as 07S:209.

164:230 Internship arr.

164:240 Cognitive Development 3 s.h.
Theoretical and empirical analyses of children’s cognitive development; spatial and numerical concepts, causal reasoning, categorization, metacognition, memory. Same as 031:218.

164:241 Introduction to Syntax 3 s.h.
Methods and argumentation for formal analysis of sentence structure through induction from language data of central concepts and relations; hypothesis testing, empirical bases of theoretical concepts. Corequisites: 103:200. Same as 103:201.

164:242 Syntactic Theory 3 s.h.
Current syntactic theory examined through analysis of data sets, readings in recent research; emphasis on argument construction, statement of formal principles. Offered spring semesters. Prerequisites: 103:201. Same as 103:202.

164:244 Phonological Theory 3 s.h.
Post-SPE phonological theory, including autosegmental phonology, feature geometry, the syllable, optimality theory. Prerequisites: 103:203. Same as 103:204.

164:245 First Language Acquisition 3 s.h.
Child language from a crosslinguistic perspective. Prerequisites: 103:110, and 103:141 or 103:201. Same as 103:206.

164:246 Generative Second Language Acquisition 3 s.h.
Overview of current second-language acquisition research in the generative linguistic framework; focus on characterizing second language learners’ linguistic competence and how it is constrained by principles of universal grammar. Offered fall semesters. Prerequisites: 103:111 or 103:201, and 103:112 or 103:203. Same as 103:211.

164:247 Advanced Syntactic Theory 2-3 s.h.
Recent developments in syntax; comparison of theories, argumentation, and uses of data. Same as 103:212.

164:248 Advanced Phonological Theory 2-3 s.h.
Current issues. Prerequisites: 103:204. Same as 103:214.

164:249 Topics in Second Language Acquisition 3 s.h.
Recent developments of selected issues in second language acquisition. Repeatable. Prerequisites: 103:211. Same as 103:216.
164:260 Foreign Language Teaching Methods
Readings in pedagogical theory and practice and second language acquisition; experience designing activities for teaching and assessment, with critiques based on current theories and approaches; development of reflective practices toward one’s own language teaching. Same as 035:200.

164:261 Topics in Spanish Language Acquisition
Theoretical linguistic approaches to monolingual, bilingual, and second language acquisition of Spanish and Portuguese; varied topics. Requirements: at least one course in linguistics (e.g., general introduction to linguistics). Same as 035:206.

164:262 Topics in Comparative Romance Linguistics
Comparative study of phonology, morphology, or syntax of the main Romance languages as informed by linguistic theory; diachronic or synchronic perspective. Repeatable. Prerequisites: 035:204. Recommendations: additional graduate course work in linguistics. Same as 035:207, 103:262, 20E:201.

164:263 Spanish Phonology
Modern approaches to synchronic phonology as applied to Spanish; focus on traditional descriptive problems, recent generative analyses. Requirements: phonology or linguistics course. Same as 035:209.

164:264 Spanish Syntax
Spanish syntactic constructions examined in framework of selected syntactic theory; emphasis on development of syntactic argumentation. Requirements: one course in syntax. Same as 035:210.

164:270 Fundamentals of Second Language Assessment
How to write language tests; discussion of fundamental issues in development of new tests or selection of existing tests. Same as 07S:200.

164:271 Second Language Program Management
Preparation for supervising, administering foreign language programs at all levels; for precollegiate language teachers and graduate students. Same as 07S:202.

164:272 Designing Materials for Second Language Instruction
Critical perspective on creating and using media for second language learning and teaching; research on materials design, development of media. Prerequisites: 07S:183. Same as 07S:208.

164:274 Teaching Chinese as a Foreign Language IV
Overview of goals, concepts, principles, research, and issues in assessment and testing of Chinese as a foreign language. Same as 039:208.

164:275 Teaching Chinese as a Foreign Language V
Seminar on research design; for M.A. students planning to write a thesis or project, or graduate students seeking knowledge in designing qualitative or quantitative studies. Prerequisites: 07P:143 and 039:202. Same as 039:209.

164:276 Japanese as a Foreign Language: Practical Applications
Instructional methodology, curriculum, and material design; hands-on experience. Prerequisites: 39J:122. Same as 39J:202.

164:281 Teaching Chinese as a Foreign Language I: Theories/Research

164:282 Teaching Chinese as a Foreign Language II
Multiple levels of major Chinese textbooks, curricular organizational schemes, language programs, communicative language instruction; development of supplementary materials for a University of Iowa Chinese course. Same as 039:203.
164:298 Semantics 3 s.h.
Meaning in natural language, with focus on German; lexical semantics (sense relations, semantic fields, componential analysis), modality, temporal and spatial deixis, aspect. Same as 013:255.

164:299 Special Topics in German Linguistics 3 s.h.

164:300 Special Topics in Second Language Acquisition arr.
Repeatable.

Repeatable.

Repeatable.

164:342 Seminar: Problems in Linguistics 2-3 s.h.
Intensive study of theoretical and practical problems. Same as 103:312.
Translational Biomedicine

Affiliated faculty
Elizabeth Chrischilles (Epidemiology/Pharmacy), David Katz (Internal Medicine/Epidemiology), Charles F. Lynch (Epidemiology/Pathology), Audrey Saftlas (Epidemiology), Christian Simon (Internal Medicine), James Torner (Education/Surgery/Epidemiology/Neurosurgery), Mary Vaughan Sarrazin (Internal Medicine), Robert Wallace (Epidemiology/Internal Medicine)

Graduate degrees: M.S., Ph.D. in Translational Biomedicine
Web site: http://icts.uiowa.edu

The Translational Biomedicine Program prepares skilled clinicians to pursue new knowledge about health and disease through patient-based research. The program’s goal is to support the medical research enterprise in its efforts to advance the prevention, treatment, and cure of disease.

Students in the program are trained to conduct rigorous, original clinical investigations using basic biological and physiological principles. They receive didactic training and engage in substantial mentored research opportunities in the areas of disease mechanisms, or etiology; new clinical insights into diagnosis or natural history of disease; objective assessment and outcome of therapeutic intervention; medical informatics; and development of new approaches to therapeutics.

Graduate Programs

- Master of Science in translational biomedicine
- Doctor of Philosophy in translational biomedicine

Master of Science

The Master of Science program in translational biomedicine requires course work and research equivalent to 54 s.h. of graduate credit. Each student’s plan of study for the three-year program is based on his or her chosen discipline.

All students take background courses in epidemiology, study design, and statistics as well as advanced courses in basic sciences relevant to their individual research areas.

Students also must write a proposal for a K23 Mentored Patient-Oriented Research Career Development Award from the National Institutes of Health. For M.S. students, the K23 proposal replaces the thesis. A draft of the K23 proposal must pass an internal review by the end of the student’s second year.

Students may choose to pursue research areas in any of the health sciences disciplines, and they enjoy considerable flexibility in scheduling course work and beginning research.

The following courses are required. All students must register for 163:225 Translational Biomedical Research and 173:163 Seminar in Clinical and Translational Research each semester in the program.

Doctor of Philosophy
The Doctor of Philosophy program in translational biomedicine requires a minimum of 72 s.h. of graduate credit. Ph.D. students build on their M.S. study plan with more advanced work.

For information about the Ph.D., contact the Translational Biomedicine Program.

Admission
The Translational Biomedicine Program welcomes students with diverse educational and scientific backgrounds and varied research interests. Applicants to the program should have a strong interest and background in a health science profession and knowledge of basic sciences and medicine. They should hold an advanced degree in one of the health sciences (e.g., M.D., D.O., D.D.S., D.V.M., M.S.N., Pharm.D., Ph.D.).

Applicants must meet the admission requirements of the Graduate College; see the Manual of Rules and Regulations of the Graduate College or the Graduate (p. 1117) College section of the Catalog.

Admission is based on applicants’ undergraduate and graduate academic achievement, performance on the Graduate Record Examination (GRE) General Test, and letters of recommendation. Applicants whose first language is not English must take the Test of English as a Foreign Language (TOEFL).

The program helps applicants find suitable mentors. All prospective students, and their mentors, must guarantee that once they are accepted as students in the program, they will be able to devote essentially all of their time over a three-year period to training. For instance, a fellow in the Carver College of Medicine could spend no more than two months each year working on clinical assignments (e.g., two months of inpatient assignments or one month of inpatient assignments and one-half day per week in a clinic).

Financial Support
Funding of tuition and salaries or stipends is available from a number of sources. Contact the Translational Biomedicine Program for information.

Facilities
Training is conducted mainly in the laboratories and teaching facilities of the Carver College of Medicine and the College of Public Health. The University of Iowa Institute for Clinical and Translational Science Institute for Clinical and Translational Science Clinical Research Unit is available for research training. The program also is linked with the Carver College of Medicine’s graduate training program in clinical research.

Graduate nondegree program: Certificate in Transportation Studies
Web site: http://ppc.uiowa.edu

Transportation is vital to modern society. The United States, like other nations, faces many critical transportation problems and issues. The highway system is reaching an advanced stage of its life cycle, public transit operating deficits are growing, the quality of transportation available to many citizens is unacceptably low, serious inequities exist between transportation modes, and extensive changes are called for in traditional transportation institutions. New approaches to financing the nation’s road system are badly needed.

Transportation engineers and planners draw on a number of skills to respond to the challenges they face. They must analyze and forecast the movement of people and goods within and between cities; identify effective and efficient means for providing desired transportation services; price these services properly; and evaluate the impact that transportation changes have on land use, environmental quality, the local or regional economy, and various subgroups within society.

No single academic discipline can supply all of the theories, principles, or methods needed to address the varied and complex problems in transportation. Recognizing this, the Department of Civil and Environmental Engineering (p. 1061) and the School of Urban and Regional Planning (p. 1205) participate in the interdisciplinary Transportation Studies Program, through which students in the participating units can earn the Certificate in Transportation along with their graduate degrees.

The Department of Mechanical and Industrial Engineering (p. 1090) also participates in the transportation certificate program, offering courses in human factors and safety issues in transportation, and the Department of Geography (p. 392) offers courses in geographic information systems (GIS), location theory, and other related areas.

Graduate Program

- Certificate in Transportation Studies

Certificate

The Certificate in Transportation Studies requires 18 s.h. of graduate credit. Students may earn the certificate in conjunction with an M.S. or Ph.D. in civil and environmental engineering or with an M.A. or M.S. in urban and regional planning.

Individuals working toward degrees in other transportation-related disciplines are encouraged to apply to the Transportation Studies Program. Depending on a student’s background, additional course work in statistics, computer programming, simulation, mathematics, and operations research may be required for the certificate. Credit earned in these courses may not be applicable to the student’s degree program.

Completion of the certificate is noted on the student’s transcript.

Students enrolled in the certificate program may wish to participate in faculty-led transportation research, which may explore topics such as system planning, traffic operations and engineering, spatial data systems and analysis, simulation applications, and policy issues.

The Certificate in Transportation Studies is coordinated by the Public Policy Center in conjunction with the Graduate College.

Certificate with M.S. or Ph.D. in Civil and Environmental Engineering

Students working toward a Master of Science or a Doctor of Philosophy in civil and environmental engineering may earn the Certificate in Transportation Studies by completing the courses listed below (18 s.h.). Not all courses are offered every semester; consult ISIS to determine when specific courses are offered.

Graduate degrees: M.A., M.S. in Urban and Regional Planning
Web site: http://www.urban.uiowa.edu

Urban and regional planning encompasses the development and implementation of public policies that improve the quality of life in cities and regions. Today’s planners find themselves in demand for such diverse jobs as transport planner, zoning administrator, environmental analyst with a natural resources agency, economic development planner, regional solid waste management coordinator, state public health planner, neighborhood planner, state legislative analyst, and transportation consultant.

Graduate Programs

- Master of Arts in urban and regional planning
- Master of Science in urban and regional planning

Graduate students working toward a master’s degree in urban and regional planning may elect to pursue one of the joint degree programs offered by the school in collaboration with the College of Engineering, the College of Law, the College of Public Health, and the School of Social Work. The school also offers a joint master’s degree/graduate certificate with the Transportation Studies Program. See “Joint Degrees and Certificate” below.

The Master of Arts and Master of Science are two-year degree programs fully accredited by the Planning Accreditation Board. Each is built on the premise that planners must be educated in methods of policy analysis and that there is a common body of knowledge, represented in the core curriculum, that provides a solid foundation for all specializations in the field.

A wide range of educational backgrounds provide good preparation for graduate study in urban and regional planning. Students with undergraduate majors such as geography, economics, English, political science, engineering, architecture, sociology, urban studies, and history currently study in the school. More than 60 full-time students and a few part-time students are enrolled. About half of them are women, and about 10 percent are international students.

The common core of courses and the design of the facilities allow students to get to know each other quickly. Students interact closely with faculty members in the classroom, in informal conversation, and while working on research projects.

Recent graduates of the school have taken positions with city, metropolitan, and regional planning agencies, state and federal government, nonprofit organizations, and private consulting firms. They work in all geographic regions of the United States and in several countries around the world.

Master of Arts, Master of Science

The Master of Arts and Master of Science programs in urban and regional planning require 50 s.h. of graduate credit, including 23 s.h. of core courses, 9 s.h. of courses in an area of concentration, and 18 s.h. of electives. A final examination is required for both degrees. A thesis is not required, although students may petition to write one; see “Thesis” below.

Students may choose to complete an approved internship with a planning agency during summer or the academic year, for 2 s.h. of credit. They also may elect to complete a practicum consisting of at least five months of employment in a planning-related organization, for 5 s.h. of credit. See "Internship" and "Practicum" below.

All students, including those in joint degree programs, must complete a minimum of 35 s.h. of planning courses (prefix 102). Students must earn a grade of B-minus or higher in all core and concentration area courses and must maintain an overall graduate g.p.a. of at least 3.00.

The curriculum is based on the philosophy that planners must develop the theoretical and analytic skills that will permit them to analyze social problems and evaluate public policies.
Planners also must cultivate professional skills such as report writing, oral presentation, computer use, and team management in order to work effectively in various organizational and political environments.

CORE CURRICULUM

The core curriculum helps students develop an understanding of the institutions—social, economic, political, administrative, and legal systems—that provide the context for policy analysis and that constrain public choices. It also promotes development of the ability to identify social goals and normative criteria for evaluating public policies, as well as the analytic skills to perform such investigations.

The core requires a total of 23 s.h. (14 s.h. in the first fall semester, 3 s.h. in the spring semester, and 6 s.h. in the second year). First-semester courses are drawn primarily from traditional disciplines, particularly economics and statistics, and include an introduction to land use planning and to theories and practice of planning. As students proceed through the curriculum, increasing emphasis is placed on the development of critical judgment and insight, achieved through the application of theory and methods to realistic planning problems and case studies.

Students may request a waiver of selected core courses on the basis of previous course work. Core courses and required semester hours are noted in the following typical class schedule.

CONCENTRATION AREA

Beginning in the second semester, students choose a concentration area and develop it by applying the concepts and skills developed in the core. Currently, the school’s faculty and course offerings support five concentration areas: transportation planning, housing and community development, economic development, land use and environmental planning, and geographic information systems.

Students complete at least 9 s.h. of courses in their concentration area. Courses offered by other University departments and programs may supplement those offered by the School of Urban and Regional Planning.

Students may combine two concentration areas. Examples of combined areas are environmental and economic development planning, and transportation and community development planning. Students also may design other concentration areas, subject to faculty approval. For example, students may specialize in health services planning with appropriate course work in the Department of Health Management and Policy or Occupational and Environmental Health, or in human services planning with courses in the School of Social Work.

THESIS

A thesis is not required, although students may petition to write one. Students may register for up to 6 s.h. of thesis credit. In addition, they may take up to 8 s.h. of readings to develop a thesis topic and prepare a literature review.

INTERNSHIP

Students are encouraged to complete an internship in a planning agency or related organization. To earn 2 s.h. of credit for the internship, students must submit a brief paper summarizing and evaluating their experience. Internships usually are paid staff positions and are completed during the summer between the first and second years or during the academic year.

PRACTICUM

An extended internship, consisting of at least five months of full-time employment in a planning-related organization, may qualify as a practicum. A practicum generally takes place during the summer and into the fall semester of the second year. It carries 5 s.h. of credit and substitutes for the required field problems courses, 102:209 Field Problems in Planning I and 102:210 Field Problems in Planning II, and the internship.
Final Exam

A final examination is required for all M.A. and M.S. students. An oral exam constitutes the final exam for students who do not write a thesis.

Joint Degrees and Certificate

Students who wish to pursue a joint degree or degree/certificate program must apply to each program separately, and they must be admitted to both programs before they may be admitted to the joint program.

Joint B.S.E./M.A. or M.S. in Urban and Regional Planning

Students pursuing a B.S.E. in civil and environmental engineering may apply for admission to the joint B.S.E./master’s degree program with urban and regional planning during the second semester of their junior year. Graduates of the joint program with engineering have technical skills and an understanding of policy development and implementation, a combination of skills that prepares them for employment as public works directors, city engineers, transportation engineers, or in public utilities.

For information on B.S.E. requirements and the civil and environmental engineering program, see Bachelor of Science in Engineering (p. 1010) and Civil and Environmental Engineering (p. 1061) (College of Engineering) in the Catalog.

Joint J.D./M.A. or M.S. in Urban and Regional Planning

The Juris Doctor/Master of Arts or Master of Science is the planning school’s most popular joint degree. Its graduates typically seek employment as city managers, city attorneys, city planners, planning administrators, or land use and environmental law specialists in legal firms or advocacy organizations.

The joint J.D./M.A. or M.S. requires a minimum of 107 s.h. of graduate credit, including 72 s.h. for the J.D. and 35 s.h. for the M.A. or M.S. It normally is completed in four years. Completion of both programs separately requires a total of 134 s.h. and five years. For information about the J.D., see College of Law (p. 1215) in the Catalog.

Joint M.H.A./M.A. or M.S. in Urban and Regional Planning

Students interested in community and health planning may pursue a joint master’s degree offered by the School of Urban and Regional Planning and the Department of Health Management and Policy in the College of Public Health. This three-year program requires 75 s.h. of graduate credit and leads to an M.A. or M.S. in planning and an M.H.A. (Master of Health Administration). Completing the joint program takes one year less than completion of the two programs separately.

The health management and policy degree enables students to strengthen their credentials as health planners or expand their job options to include administrative positions in the health field as well as health planning jobs. Graduates of the joint program typically find employment in hospitals, state departments of health, and other private, nonprofit, or public health agencies. See Health Management and Policy (p. 1478) (College of Public Health) in the Catalog.

Joint M.S. in Occupational and Environmental Health/M.A. or M.S. in Urban and Regional Planning

Students interested in environmental health may elect to pursue a joint master’s degree offered by the School of Urban and Regional Planning and the College of Public Health. They earn an M.A. or M.S. in planning and an M.S. in occupational and environmental health. The joint program requires 65 s.h. of credit, including 35 s.h. earned in urban and regional planning and 30 s.h. earned in occupational and environmental health. The program may be completed in five semesters.

Graduates of the program typically find employment in the public health field, with state health and human services departments, or as health or environmental planners. See Occupational and Environmental Health (p. 1495) (College of Public Health) in the Catalog.

Joint M.S.W./M.A. or M.S. in Urban and Regional Planning

The School of Urban and Regional Planning and the School of Social Work offer a joint degree program for individuals interested in careers in social service delivery or human services planning. The program leads to an M.A. or M.S. in planning and an M.S.W. in social work. Up to 12 s.h. earned toward one degree may be applied to the other. It is possible to complete the program in three years, although some students may require an additional semester.

Graduates of this joint program find careers as human services planners for local planning agencies, nonprofit social service agencies, and state governments. See Social Work (p. 692) (College of Liberal Arts and Sciences) in the Catalog.
M.A. or M.S. in Urban and Regional Planning/Certificate in Transportation Studies

Urban and regional planning students who satisfactorily complete 18 s.h. chosen from a prescribed set of transportation courses may earn the Certificate in Transportation Studies; see Transportation Studies (p. 1203) (Graduate College) in the Catalog. Completion of the certificate is noted on the student's transcript.

The Transportation Studies Program is administered through the University's Public Policy Center.

Admission

Admission to the School of Urban and Regional Planning is open to students from any undergraduate major or concentration area. Applicants must meet the admission requirements of the Graduate College; see the Manual of Rules and Regulations of the Graduate College or the Graduate (p. 1117) College section of the Catalog.

Admission is based on Graduate Record Examination (GRE) General Test scores (verbal, quantitative, and analytical writing), letters of recommendation, previous academic performance, and a written statement of purpose. International applicants whose first language is not English are required to submit official TOEFL scores.

Applicants should submit an application form, GRE General Test scores, TOEFL score (for students whose first language is not English), recommendation letters, statement of purpose, and transcripts. For fall admission, applications should be submitted to arrive early in the year (preferably by January 15), although applications are accepted until July 15 (April 15 for international students). Applications for spring admission should be received by October 1 and no later than December 1. Fall admission is strongly preferred. Students applying for financial aid should submit their materials by January 15.

Financial Support

Students in the School of Urban and Regional Planning receive financial support from the program primarily from teaching or research assistantships and from contract or grant-funded assistantships. Assistantships typically require 10 hours of work per week under the direction of a faculty member. A few full or partial tuition scholarships also are available.

Students initiate applications for financial support, and awards are made on the basis of merit, experience, and interests. Assistantships may be renewed for a total of up to four semesters. The planning school has been successful in providing support to the majority of its students.

Students applying for financial support are encouraged to submit application materials and requests for support by January 15. Students who apply after that date are considered only as remaining funds permit. Financial support usually is not available for students beginning the program in the spring semester.

Courses

102:029 First-Year Seminar 1 s.h.
How railroads developed and helped develop the U.S. before declining as passenger carriers after World War II; continued importance of freight railroads to the U.S. economy, disrepair of Amtrak's passenger service; extension of high-speed rail technology in Europe and Asia has led to unfavorable comparisons with the U.S. situation; recent policy change in Washington is leading to renewed expectations for rail passenger services, including service between Iowa City and Chicago.

102:050 Cinema in the City 3 s.h.
Introduction to city issues and how planners help resolve those issues; range of urban issues faced by cities, including congestion, pollution, economic decline, sprawl, affordable housing, lack of sustainability, and equity; films, readings, directed small-group discussion.

102:100 Special Topics in Planning: Campus Planning 3 s.h.
Physical design and planning of a campus, with focus on the University of Iowa campus; origins of campus as an idea, key exemplars (e.g., Universities of Virginia and Chicago), key transitions in the campus planning, especially in relation to the city; the University of Iowa campus, with attention to its neoclassical, Gothic, modernist, and more contemporary design features; the 2008 flood and its implications for UI campus planning.

102:101 Planning Livable Cities 3 s.h.
Development of livable cities in the United States; economic, physical, environmental, and political forces that shape their growth; impact of planning, how it shapes the future of cities. Same as 044:136.
102:125 Environmental Impact Analysis
Environmental impact assessment methodologies; emphasis on cost-benefit-risk, cost-effectiveness and incremental analysis, and overlay and graphic techniques; optimal resource use, system simulation; field trips to local environmental control facilities. Prerequisites: 044:019. Same as 044:125.

102:126 International Perspectives: Xicotepec
Introduction to providing service to communities in underdeveloped countries through discipline-specific projects to improve community life in Xicotepec, Mexico; cultural and professional preparation for team work in an international environment; service-learning course in collaboration with Rotary International. Spring break in Xicotepec, Mexico.

102:128 Design Europe: Spatial Planning and Identity
Interaction between physical/spatial design and construction of identity in Europe; how spatial planning helps construct identities at local, national, and continental scales; how diverse communities and their concepts of identity influence spatial planning; what can be learned for planning in the United States, especially regarding city planning and Latino in-migration.

102:133 Transportation Economics
Overview of transportation markets--intercity, rural, urban; transportation modes--rail, highway, air, water, pipeline, transit; issues in finance, policy, planning, management, physical distribution, and environmental, economic, and safety regulation. Prerequisites: 06E:001 and 06E:002. Same as 044:133, 06E:145.

102:134 Regional and Urban Economics
Theory of location and regional development; central place theory; why cities exist and trade with one another; models of land use patterns, rents; empirical tests of models; policy applications. Prerequisites: 06E:001 and 06E:002. Same as 06E:135.

102:135 Environmental and Natural Resource Economics
Environmental and resource use problems; efficient mechanisms and other policies for environmental protection, management of common property resources. Prerequisites: 06E:001 and 06E:002. Same as 06E:133.

102:140 Planning for Sustainability
How planners are pursuing sustainable futures for cities and regions; green building, alternative forms of transportation, sustainable management of natural resources, renewable energy opportunities, urban form, natural hazard mitigation, waste management, smart growth; U.S. and international practice.

102:150 Water Resource Economics
Common world water scarcity and water quality issues; economics that provide valuable insights and tools and help contribute solutions to problems; surface water allocation, ground water allocation, surface water quality issues derived from point and nonpoint source pollutants, and water demand; linear and nonlinear programming, cost-benefit analysis, regression analysis (emphasis on maximum likelihood estimation), and cost avoidance techniques.

102:162 Transportation Demand Analysis
City planning procedures and traffic engineering techniques applied to transportation problems; trip generation, distribution, assignment, mode choice models; travel surveys, data collection techniques; arterial flow, intersection performance, parking; transit system analysis. Same as 053:176.
102:195 Public Transit Operations and Planning 3 s.h.
Bus, light and heavy rail, and paratransit modes; transit operations, planning, modeling and optimization, transit agency economics, transit finance, and evolving transportation policy; skills essential to planners and engineers who intend to work for a either planning agency, transportation provider, or a transportation or planning consulting firm; individual and group projects involving transit operations. Requirements: undergraduate or graduate standing in engineering, or graduate standing in urban and regional planning. Same as 053:167.

102:200 Analytic Methods in Planning I 1-3 s.h.
Methods used in planning and policy analysis; emphasis on application of statistical techniques and quantitative reasoning to planning problems; use of computers and data systems in planning analysis.

102:201 Analytic Methods in Planning II 2-3 s.h.
Integration of methods with the planning process; application of multiple regression, population estimation and projection, survey methods, time series analysis, industrial growth and change; presentation of results to decision makers and the public.

102:202 Land Use Planning: Law and Practice 4 s.h.
Legal, social foundations of land use planning; comprehensive planning, zoning and subdivision review; legal aspects of land use, environmental planning; ordinance drafting; staff report writing; citizen participation.

102:203 History and Theories of Planning 3 s.h.
History of urban planning in America as a reflection of social and economic forces; alternative planning philosophies, roles, and ethical choices open to planners.

102:205 Economics for Policy Analysis 3 s.h.
Principles of economics for planners; concepts and techniques of microeconomic analysis; income inequality; the role of government in the economy; tax and pricing policy; project evaluation; externalities.

102:208 Program Seminar in Planning Practice 1 s.h.
Planning process, roles of planners, professional ethics and standards. Repeatable.

102:209 Field Problems in Planning I 3 s.h.
Experience working on a two-semester project involving a current planning issue, usually for a client. Requirements: urban and regional planning graduate standing.

102:210 Field Problems in Planning II 3 s.h.
Continuation of 102:209. Prerequisites: 102:209. Requirements: urban and regional planning graduate standing.

102:211 Community Outreach Practicum 1-3 s.h.
Application of planning skills to community work by non-profit organizations in local area; urban planners contributing to their communities; community outreach.

102:214 Land Use Policy and Planning 3 s.h.
Environmental preservation, site development concepts, downtown revitalization, historic preservation, brownfields.

102:215 Applied GIS for Planners 3 s.h.
Analysis of Census of Population data using GIS software; data and analytical needs of urban planners; coverage of GIS topics to plan functions of GIS and spatial analysis, varied GIS software in a planning organization; structure of the Census.
102:216 Conflict, Negotiation, and Planning
Conflict within communities, and planners’ responses; networking, negotiating, mediating, coalition building, consensus building; case studies, role playing. Requirements: (for 102:216) 102:203. Same as 160:216.

102:217 Spatial Analysis in Planning
Data bases, GIS, planning support systems; spatial model building and use of spatial statistics; applications to substantive problems in transportation, environment, housing, economic development. Prerequisites: 102:215.

102:218 GIS for Local Government
Development, maintenance, and operation of an enterprise-wide Geographic Information System (GIS); implementation of a parcel-based data system model common to government entities; practical experience using data for land-use planning analysis.

102:219 Practicum
Full-time internship of at least five months with a planning-related organization. Requirements: urban and regional planning graduate standing.

102:220 Virtual Reality and Urban Development
Creation of terrain models from DEMs and CAD-based site plans, panoramas, incorporation of existing and proposed buildings into virtual reality models; use of VRML and presentation strategies, including digital movies.

102:222 Urban Design for Non-Designers
Principles of urban design and the importance of good, well thought out urban design; background in urban design for policy planners and non-designers; past, present, and future of urban design.

102:223 Financing Local Government
Financing of local government infrastructure through property taxes, bonding, impact fees, pricing, tax increment financing; institutional alternatives—downtown improvement districts, special districts, homeowners’ associations; fiscal disparities and regional finance; case studies. Prerequisites: 102:205.

102:225 Geodatabases and GIS
Geodatabase implementation in the management of large GIS data sets. Prerequisites: 102:215.

102:227 Shaping Spaces, Making Places
Structure of cities from historical and contemporary perspectives; elements that define the built-form character of cities, forces that shape urban spaces, techniques to transform spaces and places; presentations by urban designers; background in architecture or urban design theory not required.

102:232 Planning and City Administration
Relationship of planners and other local government personnel; how planning fits into city management; city management view of local political process, provision of city services, finance and budgeting, human resources, intergovernmental relations, how meetings are run, dealing with the public.

102:233 The Land Development Process
How land is developed; analysis of site suitability, preparation of subdivision plan, site plan review, development approval process, infrastructure and site preparation, negotiating local development politics; field trips. Prerequisites: 102:202.

102:235 Growth Management
Causes and consequences of urban sprawl, shortfalls in conventional land use planning; local and state growth management policies, techniques of policy implementation, positive and negative impacts of such policies; Smart Growth; emerging challenges. Prerequisites: 102:202.
102:237 Poverty, Planning, and Public Policy
Interconnectedness of causes of poverty; operation and outcomes of federal and state antipoverty programs; impact of local planning policies and programs on low income population; ways in which planners in public agencies or advocacy organizations can work to alleviate poverty.

102:242 Planning for Sustainable City--Regions
Understanding and improving the practice of urban environmental planning; techniques and politics of planning drinking water supply, sewage treatment, natural areas conservation.

102:243 Healthy Cities and the Environment
Foundations of environmental planning for healthy cities and communities; how urban form, air and water quality, and natural hazards affect environmental planning and health.

102:244 Global Perspectives on Environmental Planning
Environmental issues such as sprawl, loss of open space, metropolitan traffic congestion, inefficient resource management, limited use of renewable energy, natural disaster mitigation and preparedness; solutions drawn from international planning practice.

102:246 Environmental Policy
Environmental policy formation and politics; comparative international perspective on the United States’ experience.

102:247 Environmental Management
Environmental best management practices for sustainable management of natural resources; open space and habitat protection, prairie and wetland restoration, water supplies management, natural hazard mitigation, farmland protection.

102:248 Global Environmental Systems
Nonlinear dynamics in human-environment relationships; quantitative modeling of global environment processes; environment modeling for policy and land use planning; introduction to fundamentals of linked global-scale environment processes from a systems perspective, focus on historical and contemporary role of human activities in altering flows of energy and mass within the Earth system; hands-on simulation and group games to understand feedback loops in complex systems, with applications to land use, water, climate, ecosystems, and nutrient cycles across time and spatial scales; emphasis on quantifying effects of policies and planning on environmental change.

102:249 Sustainability Seminar
Focus of increasing interest for planning students and practicing planners; involves environmental effects, economy, social justice; discussion and investigation of sustainability practice applied to local and regional efforts of public and private entities; greater awareness and understanding of the effectiveness and resource requirements of local activities addressing sustainability; presentations by the instructor, local tours, guest lectures.

102:260 Transportation Policy and Planning
Institutional setting for transportation planning, evolution of domestic transportation policy, international influences, transportation modes and markets, current sources of transportation planning information, emerging policy issues.

102:263 Application Simulation to Transportation
Transportation system management and traffic engineering; application of real-time simulation and visualization. Prerequisites: 053:063 or 053:163. Same as 053:263.

102:264 Transportation Planning Process
Technical issues, political interface, citizen involvement, intermodal questions, public versus private roles; review and critique of transportation plans.

The University of Iowa College of Law, founded in 1865, is the oldest law school in continuous operation west of the Mississippi River. More than 650 students and a full-time faculty of around 50 are engaged at the college in a cooperative study of law, legal institutions, professional ethics, the role of law in public policy matters, and the intersection of law and other disciplines.

The college’s student/faculty ratio of 11-to-1 is one of the best in American legal education.

Through traditional Socratic classes, research seminars, closely supervised writing exercises, ambitious professional skills training programs, and clinical experiences, the college seeks to produce public-spirited leaders who will be rigorous thinkers, trusted advisors, forceful advocates, creative policy makers, and innovative scholars.

The Boyd Law Building, a 200,000-square-foot facility, provides a home for the college and its programs. Its spacious library, three courtrooms, clinic suite, building-wide audiovisual system, and extensive computer technologies are recognized as outstanding features in an educational facility specially designed for modern legal training.

The Iowa Law Library, one of the nation’s premier law libraries, has the largest collection of legal volumes and volume equivalents among all public law schools. Its staff numbers 32 full-time-equivalent library professionals and other personnel, and it provides comfortable seating for more than 700 patrons, with 441 private study carrels, each equipped with its own data port. The library boasts a fully computerized information retrieval system. The online electronic card catalog provides instant information about
The library also is on the University's wireless network.

The College of Law celebrates diversity. In 1967 it undertook one of the nation's first and most aggressive affirmative action programs aimed at attracting a more racially and ethnically diverse student body. The college's success in this continuing effort has resulted in a minority student population that makes up approximately 18 percent of its current student body (the State of Iowa's minority population is around 5 percent).

The faculty also is diverse. Among the college's full-time professors, five are from minority backgrounds, including African American, Asian American, and Hispanic American, and 17 are women. There are specialists in many area of the law, and four professors hold Ph.D. degrees in law-related disciplines in addition to their J.D. degrees.

The college offers a challenging curriculum that is carefully balanced between substantive courses, perspective offerings, examination of ethical values and professionalism, and skills-training programs, including a highly active in-house legal clinic. Iowa's writing program—one of the strongest among law schools nationwide—is an integral part of all students' academic experience. During both semesters of their first year, students take one small-section class taught by a full-time professor and one small-section course in legal analysis, writing, and research.

A requirement of four additional writing units at the upper level must be fulfilled with at least two units of faculty-supervised written work. The remaining two units may be completed through a range of options, including writing for one of the school's four law journals, participating in the clinical program, exercises in appellate advocacy, or specific seminars or independent writing projects.

The Writing Resource Center supports and builds upon classroom writing instruction and assists students with a broad range of writing tasks (see "Resources"/"Writing Resource Center" later in this section). The center and the writing program as a whole exemplify the personalized attention and dedication to individual learning for which the college is renowned in legal circles.

The college is proud of its four student-run scholarly journals. The Iowa Law Review has served as a scholarly legal journal since 1915, analyzing developments in the law and recommending new paths for the law to follow. It frequently is ranked among the top 20 legal periodicals in the country, based on the frequency with which it is cited.

The Journal of Corporation Law is the nation's oldest student-run legal periodical specializing in corporate law. It provides the legal and academic communities with high-quality articles on corporate issues and business law.

Transnational Law & Contemporary Problems addresses legal issues confronting the global community. Since it began publication in 1991, it has earned an excellent reputation based on its symposiums on issues such as world food policy and global environmental regulation.

The Journal of Gender, Race & Justice hosts a symposium at the college each year, attracting nationally renowned legal scholars and practitioners who discuss topics such as criminal justice, education, and critical race feminism. The journal publishes the papers presented at the symposium.

In keeping with its educational mission of encouraging the acquisition of broad social awareness and technical professional competence, the University of Iowa College of Law offers a strong program of study in the rapidly expanding fields of international and comparative law. It does so for three reasons: in an era of global interdependence, an effective lawyer must understand international law and foreign legal systems; as professionals and community leaders, lawyers familiar with international and comparative law are crucial to the formulation of public policy at all levels of society; and the study of international and comparative law provides an essential theoretical foundation for all lawyers by affording unique insight into the nature of law and legal process.

All College of Law students benefit from international exposure through association with students in the college's Master of Laws program in international and comparative law. LL.M. students take most of their classes with J.D. students. In addition, each year foreign-trained law professors and jurists pursue research in the Law Library; they also may audit or speak in classes.

The journal Transnational Law & Contemporary Problems offers students a law review experience dedicated to international issues, and the college fields a team every year in the Philip C. Jessup International Moot Court Competition. Students also have opportunities to get involved with two faculty-run centers, the University of Iowa Center for Human Rights and the University of Iowa Center for International Finance and Development, as well as student groups such as the International Law Society and the Iowa Campaign for Human Rights.

Over the years, the college has enjoyed great success in preparing women and men to be professional and civic leaders. In the 20th century, Iowa graduates served as U.S. senators and representatives, state governors, and presidents of the American Bar Association, of major universities, and of the country’s largest corporations. Iowa also has been a leader in preparing American law teachers. The college is resolved to continue its traditional role of training future lawyers for positions of professional and community leadership in the 21st century.

Professional Programs (J.D., LL.M.)

- Juris Doctor
- Master of Laws in international and comparative law

The College of Law collaborates with a variety of University of Iowa graduate programs to offer joint J.D./graduate degree programs. See "Joint J.D./Graduate Degrees" later in this section.

Full-Time Policy

The faculty believes that students receive a better legal education when they devote substantially all of their time to educational pursuits. For this reason, students are expected to pursue their law training full time. This policy is consistent with the accreditation standards of the American Bar Association and the Association of American Law Schools.

In extraordinary circumstances, it may be possible for students to enroll for fewer than 10 s.h. per semester. Students who believe they may be unable to attend full time should contact the dean’s office before registering for classes.

Entrance Date

Approximately 195 J.D. students enroll in late August, at the beginning of the fall semester. All students attend courses full time during fall and spring semesters and may attend the summer term at any point during their academic careers. Entrants can expect to graduate no earlier than 27 months after beginning law study.

Admission to the Iowa Bar

A rule adopted by the Iowa Supreme Court requires all law students who intend to apply for admission to the Iowa Bar to register that intention with the court by November 1 of the year they begin law school. Details are available from the College of Law registrar or the clerk of the Iowa Supreme Court.

Juris Doctor

The Juris Doctor requires 84 s.h. of credit. All entering students are required to take all courses designated as first-year courses and may not register for different courses or fewer semester hours without the associate dean’s permission. No student may be enrolled during any fall or spring semester for more than 15 s.h. applicable to the J.D. or for more than 12 s.h. during any two adjacent summer sessions.

In order to be eligible to be granted the J.D., a student must:

- receive credit for 84 s.h. earned in required and elective courses;
- take and complete all required courses;
- satisfy the writing requirements;
- complete the course of study required for the degree in no fewer than 27 months and no more than 84 months after commencing law study at the College of Law or at a law school from which transfer credit has been accepted;
- achieve a cumulative g.p.a. of at least 2.10 (a C average); and
- satisfy the requirement of receiving "substantial instruction in other professional skills generally regarded as necessary for effective and responsible participation in the legal profession," as set forth in ABA accreditation Standard 302(a)(4) and ABA Standard Interpretations 302-2 & 302-3.

Receiving credit in a course is dependent upon successful completion of a final examination, or all assigned work, or both. In order to take the final examination, students must satisfy all requirements established by the instructor, including class attendance, written work, special readings, oral reports, and so forth.

First-Year Curriculum

One of the distinctive benefits of law study at Iowa is the College of Law’s focus on providing students with a foundation in basic skills that will support more advanced study and professional work. The first-year curriculum emphasizes careful reading, essential writing skills, legal research, and argumentation. Students concentrate on developing analytical skills (for example, reading and understanding judicial opinions), gain a sense of the role of legal institutions in society, and focus on developing good writing and research skills.

All first-year students take 091:130 Legal Analysis Writing and Research I and 091:131 Legal Analysis Writing and Research II.
Writing and Research II (LAWR), a two-semester, 4 s.h. course designed to equip them with effective skills in oral and written communication, legal research, and analysis. LAWR is staffed by full-time faculty members with expertise in teaching legal research and writing. Class size is small, with around 20 students in each section of the course.

LAWR helps students develop legal analysis skills gradually. It teaches the value of critical reading, how to analyze facts and frame legal issues, how to determine which facts are legally significant, and how to extract legal rules from judicial opinions. As the year progresses, students learn how to generate arguments and counter arguments, and how to interpret facts in order to predict the likely outcome of a client’s case. They also learn varied methods of legal analysis, including precedential analysis and analysis by analogy.

The first-year program emphasizes writing in small increments, with short assignments, frequent feedback, and revisions of written assignments. Because students will eventually practice in a range of legal settings, the program exposes them to varied forms of written documents, such as memoranda, trial briefs, client letters, motions, and appellate briefs, and provides instruction in appropriate formats for the varied documents (e.g., questions presented, argument headings).

LAWR uses peer review, requiring students to assess, discuss, and critique their peers’ writing assignments. This cooperative process helps students gain insight into their own legal writing abilities and learn to appreciate different approaches to the same task. It also prepares them for the experience of collaborating as practicing lawyers.

Students begin to learn about research early in the first year, completing increasingly complex research tasks as the year progresses. LAWR reinforces research techniques covered in the classroom by integrating them into written assignments. It also teaches students the fundamentals of legal research by requiring hands-on library workshops.

First-year courses are as follows. Entering first-year students are expected to take all first-year courses and may not register for different courses or fewer hours without the associate dean’s permission.

A mandatory curve is applied to the grade distribution in all courses.

Upperclass Curriculum

In the second and third years, students take courses in a broad array of substantive areas of the law, with focus on fact gathering, interviewing, counseling, drafting, transaction planning, negotiation, and litigation. They also concentrate course work or writing and research opportunities in particular areas of interest.

Very few common requirements exist in the second and third years. All students must take 091:232 Constitutional Law II, a course in professional ethics, and a skills course.

Writing Requirement

All students must earn four upper-level writing units in order to graduate. At least two of the four units must be earned under direct faculty supervision, in courses, seminars, research projects, or legal clinical work. The remaining two may be earned through a combination of courses and activities that carry writing credit, including 091:402 Moot Court Board, advanced appellate advocacy activities, and journals, including the Iowa Law Review, the Journal of Corporation Law, the Journal of Gender, Race & Justice, and Transnational Law & Contemporary Problems.

Concentrated Study Opportunities

Students may pursue their interest in a particular subject area by selecting appropriate course work and independent research projects. For example, in the intellectual property and competition law focus area, students may take several courses: 091:208 Antitrust Law (3 s.h.), 091:283 Copyrights (3-4 s.h.), 091:286 Introduction to Intellectual Property Law (3-4 s.h.), 091:324 Patent Law (2-4 s.h.), 091:369 Trademarks and Unfair Competition Law (2-4 s.h.), 091:608 Advanced Topics in Intellectual Property, 091:604 Patent Prosecution Seminar (3-4 s.h.), 091:241 Business Associations (3-4 s.h.), 091:306 Cyber and Electronic Law (2-3 s.h.), 091:355 Securities Regulation, 091:618 Cultural Property/Heritage, and 091:624 Cyberspace Law Seminar.

Seminars

Students should direct questions about a seminar’s requirements to the College of Law registrar or the instructor before the seminar begins, because they may not be permitted to drop the class after it meets the first time.

Seminars usually offer up to 4 s.h., including up to two writing units. Seminar formats vary widely; consult the College of Law Guide to Courses and semester registration materials for details. Students are graded on the basis of a research paper, and at the instructor’s discretion, for class participation and other seminar requirements.

A common seminar format consists of a class portion for 2 s.h., and a writing portion for 2 s.h. Reduction of credit for seminars requires the instructor’s consent. In some seminars, the instructor may permit the student to enroll for the class portion but not the writing portion. The students’ performance in the class portion is evaluated on the same basis as for other courses—by examinations, papers, class participation, or other methods at the faculty member’s discretion. Students must obtain the instructor’s consent before registering.

Papers produced for seminars may be eligible for entry in competitions sponsored by varied groups. Cash prizes frequently are available. Competition announcements are posted on the bulletin boards outside the college’s Writing Resource Center.

Clinical Programs, Internships, Clerkships, Externships

Students who have completed the equivalent of three semesters toward the J.D. (at least 39 s.h.) are eligible to apply their theoretical knowledge to real cases and projects under the supervision of faculty members and other attorneys through participation in the College of Law’s Clinical Law Programs.

Around 30 students participate in the in-house program each fall and spring semester and each summer session. They may represent individual and organizational clients in a variety of areas, including immigration, domestic violence, criminal defense, consumer law, disability, civil rights, employment law, and general civil practice. Students also may provide estate planning, document drafting, and other transactional services or work on policy, legislation, and other systemic matters.

Other students may enroll in externships in Iowa City and the surrounding area, where they act as staff attorneys, assisting in all phases of the legal process. Typical placements include the City Attorney’s Office, the Human Rights Commission, and Student Legal Services in Iowa City; the federal public defender and Kids First in Cedar Rapids, Iowa; Iowa Legal Aid; and HELP Legal Services and the U.S. Attorney’s Office in Davenport, Iowa. Also available is a clinical semester, in which students spend an entire semester in the Iowa Attorney General’s Office, the U.S. Attorney’s Office, the Youth Law Center, or the federal court, all in Des Moines.

Some students are placed in judicial externships, which provide opportunities to work closely with a federal district court judge or state appellate judge. Students register for 091:399 Judicial Externship and earn 9 s.h. per semester; in some cases, they may arrange to earn 15 s.h. with an independent writing component. Under the supervision of the judge and the judge’s staff, the student researches and drafts a wide variety of legal memoranda, orders, and opinions. The extern also assists in hearings and performs other duties associated with a judicial clerkship. Each judicial extern meets weekly with a faculty supervisor to discuss the externship work in chambers and takes part in biweekly classroom discussions with other externs.

Judicial externs must have strong research and writing skills and must be able to produce acceptable work under tight deadlines. Externs conduct much of their work independently. Only students who are able to meet these requirements should apply for judicial externships.

Students may earn a maximum of 15 s.h. in the Clinical Law Programs and a maximum of 20 s.h. for clinic and non-law courses offered in other University of Iowa colleges.

The College of Law also is involved in programs that do not offer academic credit. Each summer it participates in the County Attorney Internship Program, through which students work as paid employees for county attorneys throughout the state. The college also helps place students in a variety of unpaid clerkships and internships nationwide that provide insight into the workings of the legal system.

Academic Advising

The associate dean for academic affairs works with the dean on academic programs and issues of the law school.

The associate dean of students provides academic advice and counseling to students; advocates for student concerns; offers information and makes referrals for students with professional, personal, or family problems; facilitates operation of the student discipline system; and arranges reasonable accommodations for disabled students. The associate dean of students also advises law students pursuing combined degrees in University of Iowa graduate programs and serves as the liaison with those programs.

Each year one or two tenured faculty members are selected by the Iowa Student Bar Association to serve as College of Law ombudspersons. Students who have a problem or grievance should seek an ombudsperson’s help. All complaints are handled in strict confidence.

The College of Law registrar is in charge of student record keeping and should be students’ first recourse for information about course enrollment, scheduling, combined program status, student certification for state bar applications, and progress toward graduation.

The Student Services Committee oversees coordination and periodic review of how the college provides academic and curricular counseling to law students. The committee reviews and coordinates the college’s efforts to provide information, offer services and programs, and make referrals regarding its students’ mental and emotional health. The committee has oversight for assignment of faculty academic advisors to law students, for matters of faculty/student collegiality, and for the Academic Achievement Program.

Academic Achievement Program

The College of Law Academic Achievement Program (AAP) helps students achieve their potential as they go from successful undergraduate careers to the unique challenges of law study. Although AAP focuses on helping first-year students, its programs are open to all.

AAP presents a variety of programs, including a fall-semester lecture series for new students. Examples of content areas include time management for law study, developing effective study groups, outlining and organizing class notes and course materials, taking essay exams, and answering multiple choice tests. Several weeks before exams, a voluntary practice exam is administered.

Spring semester programming responds to special challenges of the second semester, including reviewing and learning from fall exams, refining study habits, preparing for exams, and other matters.

In addition to offering group programs, AAP provides individual help with study skills. When personal issues affect a student’s concentration or studying, the program provides direct help and refers students to University and community support resources.

Joint J.D./Graduate Degrees

The college has developed joint degree programs with a number of University of Iowa graduate programs through the Graduate College, under which students pursue degrees simultaneously in both colleges.

Joint degree students may count up to 6-12 s.h. earned for the graduate degree toward the 84 s.h. required for the J.D., providing the courses are relevant to both degrees and the credit is earned after admission to the joint degree program and after matriculation at the College of Law.

Separate application to each degree program is required. Applicants must be admitted to both programs before they may be admitted to the joint degree program. Applicants to graduate programs must meet the admission requirements of the Graduate College; see the Manual of Rules and Regulations of the Graduate College or Graduate (p. 1117) College section of the Catalog.

Graduate departments establish their own requirements for the joint degree program, including the number of semester hours earned for the J.D. that may be counted toward the graduate degree.

The College of Law offers joint graduate programs with the following academic units and programs: the Tippie College of Business (p. 775) and its Departments of Accounting (p. 782), Economics (p. 802), and Management and Organizations (p. 834); the Schools of Journalism and Mass Communication (p. 514) and Social Work (p. 692) and the Departments of American Studies (p. 50), Anthropology (p. 63), Chemistry (p. 172), English (p. 304), History (p. 460), Philosophy (p. 616), Political Science (p. 638), Religious Studies (p. 670), Sociology (p. 709), and Spanish and Portuguese (p. 722) (College of Liberal Arts and Sciences); the Departments of Educational Policy and Leadership Studies (p. 909) and Rehabilitation and Counselor Education (p. 950) (College of Education); the Schools of Library and Information Science (p. 1170) and Urban and Regional Planning (p. 1205) (Graduate College); the Carver College of Medicine (p. 1261); and the Master of Public Health Program (p. 1486) (M.P.H. degree) and the Department of Health Management and Policy (p. 1478) (College of Public Health).

Many departments have advisors for their joint programs. For more information, consult the associate dean of the College of Law and the individual academic units.

Students in joint degree programs pay tuition for only one of the two programs—the one with the higher tuition.

Master of Laws

The Master of Laws (LL.M.) program in international and comparative law is an important component of the College of Law’s international approach to legal education. The program is designed for graduates of J.D. programs in the United States who wish to deepen their understanding of international and comparative law, including the law pertaining to international business transactions, and for foreign-trained jurists who wish to receive advanced training in these areas or a comparative orientation to and specific training in U.S. law and legal institutions.

The LL.M. program admits 10-15 students per year, allowing each student to receive substantial attention from the faculty. Admission is competitive.

The LL.M. requires a minimum of 24 s.h. earned in College of Law courses that include a strong focus on international and comparative law. With their advisor’s approval, LL.M. students may count up to 6 s.h. of law study abroad, or non-law graduate-level courses or externships, toward the degree.

LL.M. students take courses (except 091:506 LL.M. Tutorial and 091:657 LL.M. Seminar) together with J.D. students, from the law school’s rich offerings on U.S., international, and comparative law. This method of instruction ensures that the foreign-trained students have an effective comparative experience through broad contact with U.S. law students and professors, and the U.S. students benefit similarly from close contact with the foreign-trained lawyers.

LL.M. applicants who are graduates of U.S. law schools must have been granted a J.D. from a school that is a member of the Association of American Law Schools or is approved by the American Bar Association. Graduates of foreign law schools must have completed the basic course of university studies that qualifies them to sit for the bar examination (e.g., the French maîtrise, the German first state bar examination). If the home country bar exam does not require a specific degree, applicants should be experienced members of the bar or have completed the equivalent of the first university degree in law. Applicants without a degree from a four-year English-language university must score at least 580 (paper-based), 237 (computer-based), or 92 (Internet-based) on the Test of English as a Foreign Language (TOEFL). Applicants who score lower than 600 (paper-based), 250 (computer-based), or 100 (Internet-based) may be required to take English language course work upon entering the University.

All applicants must present evidence of high academic potential, such as high class rank in their previous law studies; strong recommendations, especially from law professors who supervised their work in classes or seminars; and challenging professional work experience. The College of Law relies heavily on academic references to assess applicants’ credentials. Because U.S. applicants and all others with first-language fluency in English are required to produce a substantial publishable paper in the program, these applicants must show evidence of ability to carry out complex research and writing projects.

Cocurricular Programs

Students may earn a maximum of 6 s.h. of the 84 s.h. required for the J.D. through participation in the college’s rich cocurricular programs and/or non-law classes.

Moot Court

The Moot Court appellate advocacy programs familiarize students with writing appellate briefs, acquaints them with citation form, develops research skills, and strengthens persuasive ability in oral argument at the appellate court level.

Each academic year, the Moot Court office administers 091:210 Appellate Advocacy I in the fall semester, and two Moot Court competitions in the spring semester. Students who rank in the top scoring positions of Appellate Advocacy I are eligible for the advanced competitions in the spring semester. Advanced competitions include 091:404 Van Oosterhout Baskerville Moot Court Competition and 091:430 Jessup International Moot Court Competition.

The appellate advocacy program is administered by the Moot Court Board, which consists of student judges and an executive board.

Trial Advocacy

The Trial Advocacy Program (091:370 Trial Advocacy) is a student-run, faculty-supervised program in which students develop and refine skills used to prepare and try civil and criminal cases. The heart of the program is the 2 s.h. course in trial advocacy taught by law school faculty, federal and state judges, and experienced trial attorneys. Students are on their feet during most class sessions, practicing the arts of jury selection, opening statement, direct and cross examination, introduction of exhibits, use of expert testimony, and closing argument. The course culminates with a full-scale trial—from the filing of pretrial motions to the rendering of a jury verdict—conducted by student cocounsel before a visiting judge and a jury of laypersons.

The Stephenson Competition is named after Judge Roy L. Stephenson, a U.S. District Court and Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals judge and a 1940 graduate of the College of Law. Students who demonstrate superior ability in advocacy skills during the trial advocacy courses participate in a series of mock trials judged by local members of the bench and bar. Individuals selected from the competition represent The University of Iowa in the national trial competition.

Journals

IOWA LAW REVIEW

Since its inception in 1915, the Iowa Law Review has served as a scholarly legal journal, noting and analyzing developments in the law and suggesting future paths for the law to follow. Students have managed the Review since 1935, editing and publishing articles by professors and students. The Review is published five times annually and is staffed by second-year student writers and third-year editors. The Review also publishes the Iowa Law Review Bulletin, an online companion that features responses to the pieces published in the Review. To learn more, visit the Iowa Law Review web site.

JOURNAL OF CORPORATION LAW

The Journal of Corporation Law is the nation’s oldest and most cited student-published legal periodical specializing in corporate law. The journal’s scope includes antitrust, intellectual property, labor law, securities, taxation, employment discrimination, insurance, products liability, and regulated industries, as well as traditional corporate topics. Selected articles submitted from practitioners and academics are published in each of four annual issues. Several student articles also are selected for publication.

All students who have completed two semesters of class work are eligible to write for the journal. Students who have achieved third-year status at the College of Law are eligible for selection to the journal’s editorial board and may receive additional academic credit. They also may be eligible for a monetary stipend. See the Journal of Corporation Law web site.

JOURNAL OF GENDER, RACE & JUSTICE

The Journal of Gender, Race & Justice pushes at the boundaries of traditional legal scholarship and theory in its focus on social justice issues. Each spring the journal hosts a live symposium, bringing nationally renowned legal scholars and practitioners to the College of Law to discuss topics regarding the relationships among the law and race, gender, sex, sexual identity, economic class, ability, and other identity characteristics. The journal publishes the papers presented at the symposium. Each issue also includes articles written by Iowa law students.

All students completing two semesters are eligible to write for the journal. Students who have third-year standing at the College of Law are eligible for a position on the editorial board. First-year students also may participate in the journal. To learn more, visit the Journal of Gender, Race & Justice web site.

TRANSNATIONAL LAW & CONTEMPORARY PROBLEMS

Transnational Law & Contemporary Problems (TLCP) is produced three times a year by Iowa law students. TLCP content includes matters that are of interest to the international and comparative law community and that are not commonly found in other journals and reviews. The journal features symposia with articles by distinguished legal scholars and practitioners; living history interviews with people of international accomplishment; and articles reviewing foreign legislative developments, treaties, conventions, and other international agreements. The journal also publishes articles written by Iowa law students and sponsors an internationally-advertised student writing competition each year. The journal annually organizes and sponsors a symposium on a contemporary international issue. Past conference symposia topics include climate change, international subprime mortgage crisis and war crimes.

Law students who have completed at least two semesters may earn up to 2 s.h. of credit by writing for TLCP. Highly qualified students who complete the writing and secondary hour requirements may be chosen to fill an editorial position, for which they earn additional credit. They also may be eligible for a monetary stipend. For more information, visit the Transnational Law & Contemporary Problems web site.

Study Abroad

A consortium of six American law schools, coordinated through The University of Iowa College of Law, offers an annual study abroad program in which students attend a spring semester at Florida State University’s London study center. There they study American and English law with faculty from the American schools and the University of London. Students participating in the program register for 660:824 London Law Consortium.

The College of Law also offers up to 8 s.h. of credit for intensive course work at Arcachon, France, in conjunction with the University of Bordeaux. Courses are offered for four weeks in May and June and are taught in English by professors from Iowa and Bordeaux. Application deadline is February 1. Students participating in the program register for 660:823 Program in Comparative Law in Bordeaux, France.

Two Iowa law students may attend the Bucerius Law School in Hamburg, Germany, each fall semester in an exchange program with that school. Students earn 12-15 s.h. of credit through course work taught in English.

Two students may attend the Universidade Católica Portuguesa School of Law (Lisbon Campus) each fall semester in an exchange program. Students earn 12-15 s.h. of credit through courses taught in English.

Three students each year may participate in an exchange program at the Radboud University in Nijmegen, The Netherlands, during fall and spring semesters. They earn 12-15 s.h. of credit in courses taught in English.

Academic Recognition

Order of the Coif

The Order of the Coif, a national legal honor society, has a chapter at The University of Iowa. The order is dedicated to scholarship and advancement of high ethical standards in the legal profession. Membership is drawn from the top 10 percent of the graduating class. Initiates are selected by the faculty after graduation.

Prizes and Awards

Hancher-Finkbine Medallions are awarded each year by the University to outstanding graduates; honorees are chosen from nominations made by University departments and colleges based on learning, leadership, and loyalty.

The Philip G. Hubbard Human Rights Award is presented each year by the University to recognize outstanding contributions to human rights and equal opportunity, as described in the University’s Human Rights Policy.

The Sandy Boyd Prize is presented to the student who has demonstrated outstanding ability and creativity in the development of written legal scholarship.

The Alan I. Widiss Faculty Scholar Award is presented to the student who has made an especially outstanding and distinctive contribution to the development of written legal scholarship.

The Randy J. Holland Award for Corporate Scholarships is presented to the student who has written an outstanding scholarly paper in the area of corporate law.

The Robert S. Hunt Legal History Award is presented to a student who has written an outstanding scholarly paper in the field of legal history.

The Donald P. Lay Faculty Recognition Award is presented to the student who has made distinctive contributions to the College of Law’s cocurricular, community, or education programs.

The Iowa State Bar Association Prize is presented to the student who possesses the attitude, ability, and other qualities that indicate success as a future leader of the bar association.

The Antonia "D.J." Miller Award for Advancement of Human Rights recognizes outstanding contributions by a student to the advancement of human rights in the law school community.

The Dean’s Achievement Award is presented each year to a student, who, through his or her achievements, has exemplified, promoted, or contributed to cultural, racial, or ethnic diversity in the law school.

The National Association of Women Lawyers Award is presented to a law student who contributes to the advancement of women in society and women in the legal profession and who also has attained high academic achievement.

The Erich D. Mathias Award for International Social Justice is presented to a student who has made an outstanding contribution or demonstrated commitment to attaining international social justice.

The John F. Murray Award recognizes the student with the highest academic standing in the graduating class.

The ALI-ABA Scholarship and Leadership Award is presented to a student who represents an outstanding combination of scholarship and leadership, the qualities embodied by the American Law Institute and the American Bar Association.

The Russell Goldman Award recognizes the student who has demonstrated the most improved academic performance after the first year.
The Iowa College of Law Appellate Advocacy Award is presented to a student for outstanding achievement in and service to the appellate advocacy program.

The Iowa Academy of Trial Lawyers Award is presented to a student for outstanding achievement in the Roy L. Stephenson Trial Advocacy Competition.

The International Academy of Trial Lawyers Award is presented to a student who has demonstrated distinction in trial advocacy skills.

The Michelle R. Bennett Client Representation Award recognizes outstanding service in the college’s clinical law programs.

The ABA/BNA Award for Excellence in the Study of Intellectual Property is presented to a student who has demonstrated excellence in the study of intellectual property law.

The American Bankruptcy Institute Medal for Excellence in Bankruptcy Studies is presented to a student who has demonstrated excellence in the field of bankruptcy.

The Joan Hueffner and Stephen Steinbrink Real Estate Law and Property Award is presented to a student who has demonstrated excellence and promise in the field of real estate law.

The Alternative Dispute Resolution Society promotes awareness of varied alternative dispute resolution processes, including arbitration, mediation, and other forms of negotiation; explores legal and other careers in alternative dispute resolution; and equips students with the knowledge and practical skills necessary for effective participation in alternative dispute resolution.

The American Association for Justice promotes justice and fairness for injured persons, safeguards victims’ rights, and strengthens the civil justice system through education and disclosure of information critical to public health and safety. The University of Iowa chapter provides prospective plaintiff attorneys with opportunities to network with established attorneys, attend conventions and continuing legal education (CLE) meetings, participate in a trial advocacy competition, and more.

The American Constitution Society (ACS) is a new nonpartisan organization whose goal is to foster discussion of important issues of law and policy.

The Asian American Law Students Association (AALSA) seeks to instill greater awareness among law students of the needs of the Asian American community, and to encourage a greater commitment toward meeting those needs.

The Iowa chapter of the Black Law Students Association (BLSA) focuses on the relationship of black attorneys to the American legal structure and works to foster an attitude of professional competence. BLSA strives to promote the needs and goals of black law students, instill a greater awareness among law students of the needs of the black community, and encourage a greater commitment toward meeting those needs. The chapter seeks involvement in the local community and in recruitment programs. Membership is open to all students who support the association’s goals.

The Christian Legal Society maintains a Christian law fellowship at the College of Law whose mission is to enable its members to love their Lord and to love their neighbors as themselves.

The Environmental Law Society provides an educational forum for environmental law topics. During spring semester, the organization sponsors a lecture series featuring professors and experts in environmental law. The group also provides limited legal research and counseling services for attorneys, organizations, and citizens who have questions concerning environmental law. Membership is open to all College of Law students.

The Equal Justice Foundation (EJF) supports public interest law concerns, with emphasis on promoting equal access and adequate representation in the courts and other forums for citizens and citizens’ groups. The University of Iowa chapter’s professional activities are aligned with those of the national organization. They include work in varied legal activities statewide; College of Law activities, including coordination with other student organizations to provide the college with a better public interest support base; promotion of public interest career opportunities; and provision of information about public interest activities and concerns. Membership is open to all College of Law students.

The Federalist Society fosters critical thought and debate about the application of conservative and libertarian principles to the law. Its mission is to promote, advocate, and defend its founding principles and further their application through its activities, which are aimed at reordering the legal system’s priorities to place a premium on individual liberty and the rule of law, and restoring recognition of those principles among law students, faculty members, lawyers, and judges.

The Intellectual Property Law Society (IPLS) promotes exploration of traditional areas of intellectual property law (patent, trademark, copyright) and related areas such as antitrust and entertainment law. The society provides a forum for faculty and student discussion of contemporary issues relating to intellectual property law and its practice; fosters interaction between law students and intellectual property law practitioners through a mentor program that pairs members with intellectual property law practitioners; and offers symposia. All members of the University community are welcome to attend a Society meeting or symposium.

The International Law Society aims to increase student and faculty awareness of international law and related issues. The society’s brown bag lunch lecture series and annual spring conference expose students and faculty to a wide variety of contemporary legal issues surrounding the study and practice of international law. Members also work to support the activities of the University of Iowa Center for Human Rights; promote the Iowa-Arcachon, France, summer program in comparative and international law; participate in the annual Philip C. Jessup International Moot Court Competition; and bring together faculty members and students who share an interest in international affairs.

The Iowa Campaign for Human Rights (ICHR) promotes human rights awareness and education at the College of Law, among University of Iowa students, and across the Iowa City community.

The Iowa Student Bar Association (ISBA) acts as the College of Law’s student government. Governed by an executive council, the association provides a collective voice for the student body and a source of organization and funding for a variety of college activities and programs. Law students may get involved with the association by serving as class representatives or on faculty-student committees, which deal with admissions, curriculum, financial aid, placement, and so forth. The association presents speakers, sponsors events with other organizations, publishes a newsletter, and sponsors social events. Its legal guardian program assigns entering law students to upperclass students, who provide encouragement and information.

The J. Reuben Clark Law Society emphasizes three basic values and attitudes toward the practice of law and the place of law in modern society: public service, loyalty to the rule of the law and the Constitution of the United States, and appreciation for the religious dimension in American society and in lawyers’ personal lives.

The Jewish Law School Association (JLSA) strives to provide social, educational, religious, political, cultural, and professional resources and opportunities for all Jewish law students at Iowa. The society educates and involves its members in the social, moral, and ethical obligations of the profession; plans and implements programming to facilitate a sense of community among Jewish law students; and raises awareness of Jewish cultural and educational issues at the college.

The Latino/a Law Student Association (LLSA) promotes viable changes within existing legal institutions in order to develop constructive legal and community programs, produce competent and effective Latino and Latina attorneys, and utilize available resources—activities necessary to safeguard and advance the rights and opportunities of oppressed peoples. To achieve these goals, LLSA recruits for the law school. LLSA’s philosophy is that national unity is fundamental for the collective awareness needed to bring about progressive policies in legal education. The association welcomes all students.

Law Students for Reproductive Justice (LSRJ) is committed to increasing education and professional training in reproductive rights law. The society supports Iowa law student activism, advocacy, and networking in order to ensure that new lawyers can successfully defend and expand family planning rights and reproductive freedoms.

The Legal Cinema Studies Society provides regular screenings of fiction, nonfiction, and international films addressing legal issues and the legal profession. Each screening is followed by a discussion section that addresses relevant legal issues and examines pop culture expressions of the world of law and lawyers. The society’s membership is intended for College of Law students, but the group welcomes all who wish to attend screenings and discussion sections.

The Middle Eastern Legal Student Association (MELSA) aims to increase student and faculty awareness of issues pertaining to the Middle East and how they affect the legal profession.

The Native American Law Students Association (NALSA) promotes awareness of legal, political, cultural, and social issues that affect Native Americans, Alaskan Natives, Native Hawaiians, and other indigenous peoples. NALSA also seeks to promote the study of federal Indian law and provides a forum for the exploration of issues in tribal sovereignty, natural resources, family law, trust obligations, and cultural identity.
The Organization for Women Law Students and Staff (OWLSS) aims to address the changing needs and problems of women in the legal profession and to develop, recommend, and implement new programs, especially those that meet the needs of women at the College of Law. It also sponsors programs of interest to the general law school community. OWLSS has sponsored fall recruitment of prospective women law students, a safety-in-numbers program, brown bag lunches with guest speakers, sponsorship of members to the annual National Women and the Law Conference, a support network, a regular newsletter, and joint programs with women student groups in medicine and dentistry. Membership is open to all College of Law students, faculty members, and staff members.

The Outlaws provides a common forum for gay, lesbian, bisexual, and transgendered persons interested in the law, and promotes a climate of mutual support, protection, and professional advancement. Membership is open to all College of Law students and faculty members.

Founded in 1902, Phi Alpha Delta (PADS) is the nation's oldest and largest law fraternity. It was the first law fraternity to remove membership restrictions based on race, color, creed, national origin, and grade-point average. Iowa's Hammond Chapter was established in 1908 and became the first PADS chapter to accept students of all races and religions. It participates in fund-raisers and other service projects to benefit local and national service organizations. Membership is open to all College of Law students.

Phi Delta Phi (PHIDS) promotes the highest standards of ethics and professionalism in law schools and the legal profession. Since its establishment in 1869, the fraternity has initiated more than 200,000 members. It has more judges, American presidents, governors, senators, representatives, and cabinet members among its membership than does any other legal fraternity.

The Pro Bono Society exists to reinforce the value of public service and volunteerism in the legal profession. Membership in the Pro Bono Society is earned through objectively measured activities during the academic year. Iowa law students who complete and report 15 hours of voluntary public service in each of two consecutive semesters are considered for membership. Time donated to a charitable or public service cause, which may be law-related or not, is considered voluntary public service; the requirement is interpreted broadly, so that students may volunteer in an area of interest to them. Members receive a certificate of membership and are invited to attend the annual recognition dinner. The society is a project of the Iowa Student Bar Association.

The Society for International Human Rights at Iowa (SIHRLI) brings together College of Law students who share an interest in the study of international human rights issues. Members support other law students' efforts to incorporate this interest into their future legal careers.

The Sports Law Society connects College of Law students interested in sports law with professionals in the sports industry. Membership is open to all College of Law students.

Admission

Undergraduate Education and Law School

Applicants for admission to The University of Iowa College of Law must complete all requirements for the baccalaureate degree before beginning law school. In addition, the baccalaureate degree must be earned from an undergraduate institution that is accredited by an accrediting agency recognized by the Department of Education. This is in line with standards that are set by the College of Law's primary accrediting agency, the American Bar Association.

Fulfillment of the basic requirements does not guarantee admission. The College of Law Admissions Committee selects applicants it deems best able to help the college fulfill its primary mission of providing a high quality legal education in a diverse and stimulating environment and preparing students to serve as leaders in their professional and civic communities. Some additional consideration is given to applicants who are residents of Iowa.

The services that College of Law graduates are called upon to perform are so varied, and the possible fields of endeavor so broad and diverse, that the college prescribes no uniform undergraduate program for those planning to enter law school. With the assistance of faculty advisors, each student should develop an undergraduate program that explores and develops that student's particular intellectual interests. Reading, writing, research, public speaking, critical thinking, and a healthy respect for the historical perspective are important academic skills for students considering law school.

Iowa strongly endorses the three basic objectives recommended by a committee of the Association of American Law Schools: education for comprehension and expression in words; education for a critical understanding of the human institutions and values with which the law deals; and education for greater power in thinking. Anyone thinking of attending law school should keep these objectives in mind while planning an undergraduate course of study.

The association’s recommendations emphasize that undergraduate education of students for a full life through liberal education is far more important than education directed too pointedly toward later professional training and practice. Students are urged not to sacrifice broad perspective for detailed specialization.

Selection of Applicants

The college uses multiple criteria in evaluating applicants for admission. Part of the entering class is admitted under a “presumptive admit” process, in which the faculty admissions committee admits students primarily, but not solely, on the strength of their numbers, namely the cumulative undergraduate grade-point average and LSAT score (see “Law School Admission Test” below). Before admission offers are made, each applicant’s complete file is reviewed to ensure that the overall record suggests the applicant’s suitability for admission, in keeping with the primary mission of the law school.

Although undergraduate academic record and performance on the LSAT are both important admission criteria, the college recognizes that in some circumstances they do not accurately reflect an applicant’s potential to succeed in the study of law, develop skills as a leader, enrich the learning environment of his or her fellow students, and serve the public interest as a lawyer.

To evaluate applicants’ total suitability for admission, the college has developed a “numbers-plus” admissions policy, under which part of each entering class is admitted. Under the “numbers-plus” policy, undergraduate record and LSAT scores are supplemented by nonquantifiable factors that may provide insight to an applicant’s overall potential for success in the study and practice of law.

For example, an applicant who can substantiate that his or her standardized test scores are not predictive of academic performance in law school may receive proportionately greater consideration from the committee for his or her grade-point average. Other factors the committee may consider include special academic or professional abilities not reflected in the grade-point average, disability or serious health factors that affected prior academic performance, extracurricular activities, exceptional school-year work commitments due to family financial circumstances, postbaccalaureate academic success (including graduate study), law-related employment experience, public service commitment, leadership in groups historically underrepresented in the legal profession, educational or socioeconomic disadvantage, native language other than English, unusual motivation or perseverance in overcoming obstacles to law study, and any other information the committee considers relevant to the applicant’s potential for law study.

Candidates who wish to bring such factors to the committee’s attention may do so by including addenda and other documentation with their applications.

Entrance Date

Admission is for August. Applications are accepted beginning September 1 of the year before admission, with an application deadline of March 1 in the year of admission. Because the college has a rolling admissions process, applicants are encouraged to submit their applications as early as possible.

Each application must include an application fee, which is nonrefundable. Students from disadvantaged backgrounds who cannot afford the fee should apply for a waiver. If you seek a waiver, you must submit a written request and a recent FAFSA or income tax statement along with your application.

For additional information, contact the College of Law Office of Admissions, c/o College of Law, The University of Iowa, Iowa City, IA 52242-1113.

Application Process

LSDAS REPORT AND TRANSCRIPTS

The University of Iowa College of Law participates in the Law School Data Assembly Service (LSDAS). Applicants must register for this service through the Law School Admission Council (LSAC); foreign-educated applicants are exempt from this requirement. Prospective law applicants can find the information they need to complete their application for admission to the law school in the council’s free, annual publication, Law School Admission Information Book, and on LSAC’s web site. It takes approximately three weeks from the time the College of Law requests the LSDAS report until it arrives.

Applicants whose fall course work does not appear on the Law School Data Assembly Service report should send an official transcript of that course work to the LSDAS.

Applicants are responsible for submitting an official transcript from each college or university they have attended to Law School Admission Council, Box 2000, Newtown, PA 18940-0998.

Each applicant’s undergraduate institution must forward the applicant’s class rank or the grade distribution for the applicant’s class to the College of Law, if such information is available. Information about class rank is helpful in the application process, but not required. Currently enrolled or former University of Iowa students need not provide this information.

Before classes begin, every applicant who accepts admission to the College of Law must file official transcripts showing conferral of degree with the University’s Office of Admissions.

LETTERS OF RECOMMENDATION

The college requires applicants to submit at least two, but not more than three, letters of recommendation. Recommendations from professors or others who can comment on the candidate’s critical thinking, writing skills, and potential for success in law school are particularly welcome.

The college participates in the Letter of Recommendation Service offered by the Law School Admission Council. A letter of recommendation form can be downloaded on the council’s web site. Individuals writing letters of recommendation should send their letters, with the required forms, to Law School Admission Council, P.O. Box 8508, Newtown, PA 18940-8508.

LAW SCHOOL ADMISSION TEST

Applicants for admission must take the Law School Admission Test (LSAT). The test is given several times each year and may be taken at numerous locations in the United States and abroad. Test application forms may be obtained from the Law School Admission Council.

Applicants are urged to take the test no later than the fall preceding the fall semester for which they are applying. Applicants’ LSAT scores may not be available until approximately four weeks after their test date.

The February test date is the last one that the admissions committee can consider for applicants requesting admission the following fall. Scores more than five years old are not accepted.

Applicants whose first language is not English must take the Test of English as a Foreign Language (TOEFL) or the International English Testing System (IELTS) exam.

DEFERRALS

Admission is for the year of application; deferrals are granted only in extraordinary circumstances.

DEPOSIT UPON ACCEPTANCE

All applicants must make a nonrefundable deposit of $250 (U.S.). Fall entrants accepted before March 15 must submit the deposit by April 1; those accepted after March 15 have two weeks to submit the deposit.

Fall entrants must pay a second nonrefundable deposit of $150 (U.S.) by June 1.

For those who enroll, the deposit is credited toward tuition and fees. All accepted applicants, including recipients of scholarships, fellowships, and loans, are required to pay the deposit. Applicants who fail to make the deposit by the specified time forfeit their place in the entering class.

Financial Support

The College of Law administers its substantial scholarships and fellowships to advance the goals of its selective admission policy. Work-study funds and loans are awarded on the basis of need or merit to provide access to legal education for the talented and diverse students admitted to the college. A number of part-time employment opportunities also are available to upper-level students.

Inquiries regarding financial aid should be directed either to the University’s Office of Student Financial Aid or to the College of Law Office of Financial Aid.

All financial aid information is subject to change without notice.

Application for Financial Aid

Eligibility for financial aid is based on need established by completion of the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) and the required supporting documents. The FAFSA should be completed online at www.fafsa.ed.gov after January 1 each year and should be completed as soon as possible thereafter, since some financial aid is subject to the availability of funds.

Although financial aid awards are not made until after applicants are admitted to the College of Law, applicants should not wait for the notice of admission before filing the FAFSA. Admitted students who provide the required documents are informed of their eligibility for financial aid on the award notification letter. Students must reapply for aid every year.

Applicants are urged to investigate other sources of aid. Public libraries, private and civic organizations, and the Internet are excellent sources for information about financial aid resources.

Scholarships, Fellowships

MERIT-BASED SUPPORT

All students admitted to the College of Law are considered for merit-based scholarships and fellowships based on their academic achievement. A separate application is not required. Recipients are notified by letter. Awards may range from $500 to full tuition with a research assistantship component in upper-level years.

NEED-BASED SCHOLARSHIPS

All admitted students who file a Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) and required supporting documents are considered automatically for need-based scholarships. Recipients are notified by award letter. Awards may range from $500 to full tuition.

IOWA LAW SCHOOL FOUNDATION SCHOLARSHIPS

The University of Iowa Law School Foundation Scholarships include scholarships based on need, merit, or a combination of need and merit. These scholarships are available to a limited number of students who meet the criteria established by the scholarship donors. All admitted students are considered for the merit-based scholarships, and all admitted students who file the FAFSA and required supporting documents are considered automatically for the need-based scholarships. A separate application is not required. Recipients are notified by award letter. Awards may range from $500 to full tuition.

LAW OPPORTUNITY FELLOWSHIP

The College of Law is committed to affording opportunity for a legal career to persons historically underrepresented in the legal profession. The Law Opportunity Fellowship Program was established by the University to provide access to law school for students from groups and backgrounds historically underrepresented within the legal community. Among criteria considered in awarding the fellowships are educationally and/or socioeconomically disadvantaged backgrounds, leadership potential, academic merit, and importance of the fellowship award to the student’s financial ability to attend law school.

The Law Opportunity Fellowship may provide up to full tuition for three years and the opportunity to hold a research assistant position for the second and third years. All admitted students who file the FAFSA and required supporting documents are considered for the Law Opportunity Fellowship. A separate application is not required. Recipients are notified by award letter.

Employment

The College of Law does not employ students during their first year of law school, due to the intensive course schedule. In no event may a full-time student work more than 20 hours per week.

RESEARCH ASSISTANT POSITIONS

Research assistant positions are available with many faculty members for second- and third-year students. Students classified as nonresidents who hold one-quarter-time research assistantships (10 hours per week) automatically qualify for resident tuition status during the semester(s) in which they serve as research assistants.

UI PART-TIME EMPLOYMENT

The University offers a variety of part-time employment positions for students. Students do not need to apply for financial aid in order to work in these positions. Information about part-time employment is available from the University’s Office of Student Financial Aid.

FEDERAL WORK-STUDY PROGRAM

The Federal Work-Study Program provides a need-based employment opportunity for a limited number of students in their second and/or third year at the law college. College Work-Study may reduce the student’s William D. Ford Federal Direct Loan eligibility. Students must demonstrate financial eligibility for work-study through the FAFSA and its required documents.

Loans

All admitted students who file the FAFSA and required supporting documents are considered for the University of Iowa Law Foundation Loan, the Federal Perkins Loan, and the William D. Ford Federal Direct Loans.

IOWA LAW SCHOOL FOUNDATION LOAN, FEDERAL PERKINS LOAN

These are low-interest loans based on exceptional financial need. Interest does not accrue and payments are not required until the student is no longer enrolled at least half-time in school.
FEDERAL DIRECT FORD/STAFFORD LOANS AND FEDERAL GRADUATE/PROFESSIONAL PLUS LOANS

The Federal Direct Ford/Stafford Loans (subsidized and unsubsidized) and the Federal Graduate/Professional PLUS Loans are funded by the federal government. The three loan programs may have different interest rates and interest subsidies based on eligibility as determined by the FAFSA and other required documents, and based on the annual maximum loan amounts. Interest on the Unsubsidized Direct Stafford Loan and the Graduate/Professional PLUS Loan accrues while a student is in school, but principal and interest payments may be deferred while a student is in school. Eligibility for the Graduate/Professional PLUS Loan also includes a determination that the applicant does not have an adverse credit history.

Academic Rules and Procedures

Transfer Credit

No more than 30 s.h. may be transferred to Iowa from another law school. To qualify for transfer credit, courses must have been completed at a law school accredited by the American Bar Association. Grades received at another law school are not counted in calculating the cumulative grade-point average.

Courses Taken Before Admission to the College of Law

Students may not count toward the J.D. any credit they earned in courses they took before matriculating at the College of Law, with the exception of transfer students from other law schools.

Courses Taken Outside the College of Law

Students who take courses outside the College of Law must first obtain permission from the associate dean. If “special permission of the instructor required” is indicated on ISIS (Iowa Student Information Services web site), the student also must obtain the instructor’s signature.

Students not enrolled in a joint degree program may apply toward the J.D. a maximum of 6 s.h. earned in courses outside the College of Law or through cocurricular hours. Such courses are approved only if they contribute directly to the professional competence of an attorney or broaden the student’s understanding of law, the legal process, or any particular legal subject. More information about limitations on accreditation of non-College of Law courses is available from the associate dean.

Courses Taken at Another Law School
After Enrollment at Iowa

With the permission of the dean, enrolled students may receive credit for courses taken and passed at other law schools accredited by the American Bar Association, up to a maximum of 30 s.h.
Grades of C and higher are reflected on the student’s transcript as credit for the designated semester hours.

Externships and Summer Legal Placements

Students may earn academic credit for externships with nonprofit or governmental organizations throughout the United States, and in some circumstances, abroad. Externship credit counts toward the maximum of 20 s.h.
that may be earned for clinical work, nonclinical externships, and non-law classes. Students may earn credit for only one nonclinical externship during their law school tenure, no matter what amount of credit that externship carries.

Most externships are done during summer, with students registering for 091:395 Summer
Legal Placement in order to earn 3 s.h. of credit.
Students must spend at least 150 hours on site.
They are assigned to a section supervised by a faculty member, who conducts a virtual seminar for the section’s students during the externship.
The faculty supervisor also conducts regular conferences with individual students (usually by telephone) and reviews their written reports on the work in progress.

Some summer externships offer 6 s.h. of credit.
Students in these externships register for 091:267
Legal Externship. They must arrange their own faculty supervision and are required to write a 40-page research paper that satisfies the faculty-supervised writing project requirement for the J.D.
degree. A faculty site visit also is required.

Externships also may be scheduled for the fall or spring semester. In unusual circumstances, externships for up to 15 s.h. of credit may be approved.

Students considering externships are responsible for initiating contact with appropriate sponsoring organizations and for securing an externship position. The College of Law Career Services Office offers assistance with arranging externships.
Information also is available at Legal Externships on the college’s web site.

Applications for summer externships are due by April 1, except in extraordinary circumstances.
Students interested in externships should contact the College of Law Career Services Office.

Grading Policy

The College of Law has adopted a numbering system for grading, effective for students who entered the college in May 2004 and later.

A numerical grade is assigned to each student in each course, except as otherwise provided (e.g., for courses graded pass/fail, for courses that continue during the following term, for grades of incomplete). Grades are recorded in the University's permanent record.

The highest grade awarded at the College of Law is 4.3, the lowest 1.5. No academic credit is given for grades below 1.8 or for grades of “fail.”

Numerical grades may be translated into a letter grade as follows.

- 4.3–4.2 = A+
- 4.1–3.9 = A
- 3.8–3.6 = A-
- 3.5–3.3 = B+
- 3.2–3.0 = B
- 2.9–2.7 = B-
- 2.6–2.4 = C
- 2.3–2.1 = C-
- 2.0–1.8 = D
- 1.7–1.5 = F

Professors may disenroll students for cause or reduce grades for inappropriate academic conduct, for example, plagiarism. Such measures are subject to appropriate due process.

With the dean’s permission, a student may retake a course in which he or she has received a failing grade. The second grade is recorded either as pass—a grade of 2.1 or higher—or fail and is not used in computing the student’s cumulative grade-point average. Rather, the first grade received for the course remains on the transcript and is used in computing the grade-point average.

If the course being retaken is sectioned, the dean designates the section to which the student will be assigned.

The faculty has adopted a mandatory grade curve for all courses.

Pass/Fail Grades

Credit for certain courses is offered only on a pass/fail basis. In the case of a failing academic performance in a pass/fail course, the faculty supervisor or instructor may assign a failing numerical grade, i.e., between 1.7 and 1.5. Individual faculty members may allow students to withdraw from a course rather than receive a failing grade.

Miscellaneous Grading Marks

Marks other than pass, fail, and numerical grades are as follows.

- R means registered. It indicates that a student has completed the first half of a year-long program, such as a seminar or journal, for which a grade cannot be assigned until the second half of the program has been completed.
- W means withdrawn. It carries no course credit and is not used in computing the cumulative grade-point average.
- I means incomplete. It carries no course credit toward a degree until it is changed, nor is it used in computing the cumulative grade-point average. A mark of I may be reported only in exceptional cases and only if the unfinished part of the work is small and is unfinished for reasons acceptable to the instructor, and if the student’s standing in the course is satisfactory. Students remove an incomplete by completing the unfinished work during their next period of residence.

Class Ranking

Students in the top 10 percent in each class may be informed of their exact rank; grade-point averages at the 12.5 percentile and 37.5 percentile are posted.

Students are ranked following the fall semester and spring semester each year. Final class standing is determined each August and is available in September. It includes students who completed all graduation requirements in August, May, and the previous December. For purposes of ranking underclass students, the same system is used, based on the expected graduation date.

Release of Transcripts

A student’s grades are not given to persons outside the College of Law, including prospective employers, without written permission of the student.

Class Attendance and Preparation

Students must attend classes regularly and punctually. They must be prepared to participate in class discussions. A student may be dropped from a course or failed, at the discretion of the instructor, for excessive absence or for repeated lack of adequate preparation. In addition, students are expected to attend special class meetings and be punctual in submitting course assignments, in accordance with ABA Standard 304(d).
Colleges and Other Academic Units

Examination Policy

One examination is given in each course, with few exceptions. Before taking an exam, each student is assigned an identification number for that exam, to ensure anonymity in grading. Students must write their examination number on scratch paper and any other materials that are distributed at the start of the examination and collected at its conclusion. The instructor submits a grade for each identification number. The grade is kept on file for two years at the College of Law.

To preserve anonymous grading, students must not identify themselves and must not place their name on the examination answer or other materials that the instructor might see. They also may not discuss the examination with their instructors until the exam has been graded and the grades released. Students who have questions should pose them to a proctor during the examination or to the College of Law dean of students or registrar after the exam.

Students may be offered the option of taking some exams on their personal laptops. Each course’s instructor determines whether this option is available for his or her specific course.

Students who have more than one examination scheduled for the same day, two consecutive exams (i.e. Wednesday afternoon, Thursday morning), or exams four days in a row may schedule a make-up time for one of the exams. Students who have exams three days in a row may reschedule one only with permission of the instructor.

Students are expected to take the exam on the next scheduled makeup date immediately following the regularly scheduled exam. Whenever possible, the dean sets aside one to three days as an upperclass study period between the end of regular classes and the first regularly scheduled upperclass exam. See the College of Law Student Handbook for all policies related to examinations.

Exam Accommodations for English Language, Physical, or Medical Reasons

A student who is at a substantial disadvantage in taking an exam within the specified time limit because he or she does not have English as a primary language or because he or she has a physical or recognized medical disability may be granted additional time to complete the exam commensurate with the extent of the disadvantage. A student seeking such additional time must make a request to the dean of students by the deadline announced each semester, unless the disability comes into existence after that deadline has passed, stating the nature of the disability and the examination(s) for which the student seeks additional time.

An undergraduate degree from an English-language college or University is considered evidence that the student is not qualified to be granted extra exam time due to not having English as a primary language. When additional time is granted, it generally is reduced each semester as the student becomes more proficient in English.

Program Accommodations for Students with Disabilities

The College of Law is committed to making all of its programs, activities, and services accessible to students with disabilities. In compliance with the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 and Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, it strives to provide equal access to all academically qualified students and does not discriminate against students on the basis of disability. The college provides reasonable accommodations to students with disabilities, commensurate with the nature and extent of the disability and consistent with federal law, state law, and policies of The University of Iowa and the College of Law. Students may request accommodations for any University of Iowa sponsored curricular, cocurricular, or extracurricular program, including those in the College of Law.

The College of Law’s cocurricular and extracurricular programs include, but are not limited to, Appellate Advocacy I, Trial Advocacy Board, the Iowa Law Review and its editorial board, Moot Court Board, Advanced Moot Court Competition, Van Oosterhout-Baskerville Moot Court Competition, National Moot Court Competition, The Journal of Corporation Law and its editorial board, Transnational Law & Contemporary Problems and its editorial board, The Journal of Gender Race & Justice and its editorial board, Jessup International Moot Court Competition, and Jessup International Law Moot Court team.

Withdrawal and Leave of Absence

First-year students who withdraw during the academic year or who fail to reenroll for the second semester must apply for reentry to the College of Law. They must compete with other applicants for a place in the first-year class for the year in which they wish to return. For each readmission application, the reason for the withdrawal and the quality of work done before withdrawal or failure to reenroll is considered. For admission purposes, individuals who have earned fewer than 27 s.h. of credit at the time of withdrawal or failure to reenroll are considered first-year students.

Second- and third-year students who fail to enroll for any semester during the academic year and who have not been granted a leave of absence by the dean of students must obtain permission from the Admissions Committee if they wish to reenroll. Requests for permission to reenroll must be submitted no later than 90 days before the opening of classes for the semester or summer session in which the student seeks to reenroll.

The dean of students may grant a second- or third-year student a leave of absence for up to one year, if the student shows good cause. First-year students may be granted leaves of absence only under extraordinary circumstances, such as a medical or family emergency, or as a reasonable accommodation for a disability.

Students who withdraw from the College of Law after they have paid tuition are entitled to a pro rata refund of that tuition depending on the effective date of their withdrawal. Consult with the College of Law registrar or college’s Office of Financial Aid for details.

Student Conduct

Students are expected to act in a manner appropriate at a professional school. An act or omission that is dishonest or designed to take unfair advantage may subject a student to sanctions as serious as expulsion from school. Misconduct policies and procedures are published annually in the College of Law Student Handbook.

Research Centers and Programs

Participation in research centers and outreach programs is an important part of the College of Law’s service to professional and civic communities. The college was home to the nation’s first agricultural law center. Since that center’s closing, several new centers and institutes have been founded in diverse fields such as child and maternal health care, disability law and policy, human rights law, not-for-profit entities, public affairs, and public international finance. These programs enjoy increasing national and international recognition for their specialized research projects and service activities. Several have enjoyed success in attracting competitive grants from state, federal, and private sources.

Innovation, Business, and Law Center

The Innovation, Business, and Law Center is an interdisciplinary teaching and research venture that brings together faculty members who teach and study problems of business, technology, innovation, regulation, and legal policy from diverse perspectives. The center’s purpose is twofold: to offer an innovative curriculum and outstanding legal training in areas pertaining to government regulation of entrepreneurship, innovation, and management of resources; and to encourage creative individual and collaborative interdisciplinary research in these areas.

Program in Law and History

The Program in Law and History, founded in 2009, builds on The University of Iowa’s tradition of scholarship and teaching in the field of legal history. Faculty members from law, history, and other disciplines are affiliated with the program. As part of its work to foster continued research and teaching at the intersection of law and history, the program presents a series of legal history workshops and the Donald Sutherland lecture in legal history; promotes awareness of the College of Law’s extensive library resources in legal history; and promotes the teaching of legal history.

University of Iowa Center for Human Rights

The University of Iowa Center for Human Rights was founded in 1999 as an outgrowth of the University’s year-long commemoration celebrating the 50th anniversary of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. The center’s mission is to promote and protect human rights at home and abroad by providing distinguished multidisciplinary leadership in human rights research, education, and public service. Its focus includes all categories of human rights, from first-generation civil and political rights, to second-generation economic, social, and cultural rights, to third-generation group or community rights.

University of Iowa Center for International Finance and Development

The University of Iowa Center for International Finance and Development is a project to help laypersons understand the often impenetrable world of international finance and development. The center’s web site features a 300-page e-book, written by a University of Iowa law professor and a group of his students, that explains the complex world of international finance and development in plain language. It also offers related news, issues discussions, briefing papers, frequently asked questions, and links to other useful sites.

Institute of Public Affairs

The Institute of Public Affairs provides services and information to help maintain and strengthen the effectiveness of Iowa’s local governments. Efforts include facilitation of goal setting and strategic planning, public policy and organizational assistance, professional development and training, timely and topical conferences and workshops, publications, outreach, and linkage with other University programs and activities. The Institute provides training for newly elected mayors and council members through a municipal leadership academy and publishes the Iowa Municipal Policy Leader’s Handbook for city officials. It also holds the annual Iowa Municipal Management Institute, a professional development conference for city and county managers and administrators in Iowa.

Larned A. Waterman Iowa Nonprofit Resource Center

The Larned A. Waterman Iowa Nonprofit Resource Center was created in 2000 to help nonprofit organizations throughout Iowa. The interdisciplinary center works to increase accessibility to educational and service programs focused on strengthening nonprofit organizations. It collaborates with government agencies, nonprofit organizations, and educational institutions. It also introduces students to the nonprofit sector and develops their sense of public and community service.

Law, Health Policy & Disability Center

The Law, Health Policy & Disability Center is an emerging leader in law, technology, education, and research. Its aim is to improve quality of life for persons living with disabilities. Based at the University of Iowa College of Law, the center concentrates on public policy and its impact on persons with disabilities, with emphasis on employment, self-determination, and self-sufficiency.

National Health Law and Policy Resource Center

The National Health Law and Policy Resource Center promotes laws and public policies that foster and facilitate accessible, affordable, high-quality health care for all Americans, particularly members of vulnerable and disadvantaged populations. It provides a nonpartisan forum for informed dialogue on health law and policy issues, based on the best available data and information, between academics, practitioners, and public policy makers. It conducts the Program on Aging and the Program on Maternal and Child Health and maintains the Conflict Management Institute. Its activities include an information clearinghouse, research and demonstration projects, education and training, and technical assistance and consultations.

Facilities and Resources

Boyd Law Building

The Willard L. Boyd Law Building exemplifies Iowa’s continuing commitment to legal education and the legal profession. The large, circular structure reflects the special character of the Iowa law school and allows the college to operate in a physical environment in which every square foot of space is designed to promote the college’s academic and professional programs.

Classrooms in the Boyd Law Building provide an atmosphere conducive to the college’s goals. They are air conditioned, carpeted, and properly lit. The building’s largest classroom seats only 100 people. Small seminar rooms and special-purpose learning areas are distributed throughout the building, permitting students and faculty members to work together in close professional interaction. The newly renovated clinic suite functions as a teaching law firm, offering ease of access, usability, and visibility. The student lounge, faculty lounge, and faculty offices are located on the same floor, encouraging interaction between students and faculty members.

Iowa Law Library

The centerpiece of the Boyd Law Building is the University of Iowa Law Library, which occupies space on four floors and is one of the major repositories of legal materials in the United States. Iowa’s collection, containing 1,298,646 volumes and volume equivalents, is ranked second in the number of volumes and volume equivalents and second in the number of titles among all U.S. law school libraries. The collection covers a full range of Anglo-American, foreign, international, and comparative law; contains in-depth collections on law of the United States and of every state and territory; and has extensive holdings of early English legal source materials. Since 1968 the library has been a selective Federal Documents Depository.

The Law Library has an open-stack policy that makes its collection accessible to all patrons, who are served by a full staff of professional librarians. The Westlaw and LexisNexis computerized information retrieval systems are available for training and research activities, and a full range of legal and nonlegal databases are available through the online catalog.
The library’s entire collection is cataloged on the University’s InfoHawk database, including the collection of U.S. government documents. InfoHawk also features an automated circulation system for checking materials out of the library. The library uses OCLC (Online Computer Library Center) for online cataloging and interlibrary loan.

Iowa Legal Studies Workshop

The Iowa Legal Studies Workshop gives authors at the College of Law an opportunity to receive constructive, critical analyses of their written work. The workshop draws inspiration for its format from the Iowa Writers’ Workshop. It welcomes law faculty at all ranks and from all areas of expertise as well as faculty from other colleges across the University.

Writing Resource Center

The Writing Resource Center is dedicated to strengthening law students’ command of writing skills central to the study and practice of law. The first writing center in the country established specifically for a law school community, the Writing Resource Center serves as an extension of the classroom and supplements the college’s first-year legal writing, analysis, and research program. Members of the Writing Resource Center staff help law students with a broad range of writing, including class assignments, seminar papers, law journal articles, and symposium presentations. They also assist students with résumés, application letters, and writing samples. In addition to helping students with general writing skills in one-on-one tutorial sessions, the center’s staff members train editors in editing skills, set up individualized programs of study, offer grammar and style workshops, provide guidance on avoiding plagiarism, and suggest strategies for overcoming writer’s block and adapting material for varied audiences. The Writing Resource Center is staffed by writers, including graduate students enrolled in the Iowa Writers’ Workshop, second- and third-year law students, lawyers, and a director who holds a Ph.D. in the area of writing instruction.

Career Services Office

The College of Law Career Services Office provides career planning and job search assistance to law students. Each year the office sponsors a comprehensive series of programs on career options and job search skills. It also maintains a library of resources and provides individual advising by professional staff. Job search assistance also is available to alumni. The special rigor that characterizes Iowa’s distinctive brand of legal education attracts a wide variety and growing number of recruiters to campus each year. During a typical academic year, approximately 150 employers send representatives to Iowa City to conduct job interviews, and many more firms use the college’s Career Services Office to search for prospective employees through written inquiries and off-campus interviews.

Iowa graduates traditionally have had excellent success in finding employment; usually, more than 98 percent are employed within a few months of graduation. The career services staff is happy to talk with prospective students regarding the college’s programs and the success of its graduates.

Bookstore

The College of Law has its own bookstore, which carries all assigned texts and materials for law classes. It also stocks a variety of professionally prepared outlines, hornbooks, and other study aids, as well as a limited selection of school supplies and merchandise, including pens, notebook paper, binders, computer disks, exam software, stamps, t-shirts, and sweatshirts. The bookstore also can make change.

Photocopied handouts and teaching materials assigned by course instructors are available through the bookstore.

Students may charge costs for books, class materials, supplies, and merchandise directly to their University accounts. The bookstore does not accept credit cards.

Information Technology

Since electronic information technologies are vital in legal and business work, the College of Law encourages all law students to become proficient with computers. Access to word processing software also helps law students draft the many papers, articles, and other manuscripts that are a regular part of the law curriculum. The college has installed 41 personal computers attached to a local area network for use by its students. Students also are encouraged to purchase personal computers and Microsoft Windows software, if possible, and to use them in connection with their law school work.

The law college provides network and Internet access from all student library carrels. To participate, law students supply their own laptop computers, which must meet required specifications. Specifications are available from the Law Library computer support office. Wireless Internet access is available throughout the Boyd Law Building.
The college’s computers are loaded with WordPerfect and Microsoft Office software, and the college provides training for and access to the two major online computer research databases, West Publishing Company’s WESTLAW and Mead Data’s LEXIS. Once students complete the training, they have unlimited free access to these services at home via their own PCs and on the student and public workstations in the Law Library.

The Law Library also provides CD-ROM workstations that allow access to databases in CD-ROM formats. Some of the titles available are United Nations documents, complete from 1945; Index to Legal Periodicals; TIARA, a database containing treaties; and numerous U.S. government documents published on CD-ROM.

The University provides free e-mail accounts to its students, faculty, and staff through its Information Technology Services office (ITS). Students can sign up for e-mail accounts online or at the ITS offices in University Capitol Centre. ITS advises University of Iowa students, faculty, and staff on computer hardware and software needs and can provide information about educational discounts on some purchases. ITS also offers a wide variety of free computer short courses throughout the year. For information on computing resources at the University, consult the Information Technology Services web site.

Copy Services

Networked copy machines are available on each floor of the Law Library. Students may set up a copying account at the circulation desk. They also may use networked printers in the library and charge them to their University account. A University-operated copy service on the first floor of the Boyd Law Building provides high-volume, high-quality copying. Prices are comparable to those at commercial concerns, and students may charge copying to their University accounts.

Legal Aid for Students

Students in need of legal assistance may consider turning to the University’s Student Legal Services. The Legal Services Corporation of Iowa also provides civil representation to indigent clients.

College of Law Events

Parents and Partners Day

Each fall, the parents, spouses, and friends of all students are invited to the campus for activities sponsored by the Iowa Student Bar Association and the Iowa Law School Foundation. Past activities have included a simulated class, a brunch, an auction, and a tour of the college. The weekend is a good opportunity for families and friends to see what the life of a law student is really like.

Supreme Court Day

The College of Law hosts the Iowa Supreme Court on The University of Iowa campus each fall. Third-year students present oral arguments in a moot case to the court, and faculty members host receptions at their homes for the justices, attorneys, and students, providing an opportunity for informal visits with members of the court.

Iowa Law School Foundation

During the three years that students spend at the College of Law, many of the classes, programs, and projects in which they participate are partially or totally supported by private gifts from law alumni and friends.

The Iowa Law School Foundation was created by the 1952 graduating class to promote close relations between the college and its alumni and to solicit gifts for scholarships, faculty support, and other projects that benefit the college.

Foundation funding benefits faculty positions, student scholarships, loans, research assistantships, guest speakers, and student orientation activities; the clinical law, Moot Court, Trial Advocacy, and Client Counseling programs; and the student-edited law journals. It also helps support Iowa Advocate, the law school’s alumni magazine. Published once a year, the magazine features articles and news about the college and its alumni, faculty, and students.

In order to support these programs and activities, the Iowa Law School Foundation actively solicits contributions from the college’s approximately 9,900 alumni.

Courses

The following list includes all approved College of Law courses. The college does not offer each course every year. For information on current course offerings, consult the College of Law registrar. The College of Law Guide to Courses contains a list of courses that have been offered within the past two academic years. It also lists courses the college expects to offer during the next academic year.

National security powers of the federal government in national and international emergencies and crises; constitutional and statutory framework within which national security powers are exercised; conflicts between national security powers and individual rights, war powers and the rules of engagement, apprehension of foreign aliens through extradition or force; military tribunals and indefinite detentions of suspected terrorists, government practices in withholding information from the public and extracting critical information through extraordinary conduct, imposition of obligations on the United States under international law.

091:666 Notable American Trials: Trial Skills arr.
Trial skills and strategy; real trial transcripts, contemporary accounts of the selected trials, secondary literature evaluating what actually happened in the courtroom and relevant history; skills of opening and closing argument, voir dire, direct and cross examination, witness selection, use of exhibits.

Topics relating to nonprofit organizations; may include formation and dissolution of nonprofit organizations (NPOs), internal governance and external regulation, accountability and ethics, tax issues, self-regulation in the nonprofit sector, categories of nonprofits (e.g., religious organizations, philanthropic foundations, charitable trusts, mutual benefit societies), international and comparative perspectives on nonprofits and nongovernmental organizations (NGOs); research and writing seminar.
091:671 Selected Topics in Health Care Law
Examination and analysis of issues relating to the delivery of health care; topics may include doctor/patient relationship, financing of health care, public health issues, bioethics issues; preparation and presentation of papers in seminar.

091:672 Selected Issues in Family Law
In-depth look at an issue or set of issues in family law; relevant cases, statutes, scholarship; class visits or on-the-job observations with community members who play roles in the family law process being examined.

091:673 Federal Criminal Sentencing
Sentencing as a key stage of the criminal justice system; purposes of sentences, guilty pleas, and plea bargaining; procedural rights during the sentencing process; types of sentencing statutes, federal guidelines, and the federal death penalty; supervised release, probation, and revocation of supervised release and collateral; consequences and sanctions.

091:674 Poverty Law
Governmental responses to poverty in the United States; federal, state, and local social welfare programs for low-income persons; policy issues, history of welfare provision; state responses to federal welfare devolution, women and welfare, immigration.

091:677 Selected Topics in Consumer Law
Topics relevant to broad issues in consumer law--effects of deregulating the consumer credit industry, rapid growth of consumer borrowing in other nations, merits of proposed policy reforms in consumer law; may include credit cards, usury regulation, disclosure requirements for consumer transactions, unfair and deceptive practices lawmaking, expansive uses of credit reporting; focus intersection of economic, social, and political consequences of current approach to consumer law; interdisciplinary perspectives. Recommendations: course in consumer law, debt transactions, or bankruptcy.

091:679 State Constitutional Law
Power of state courts to independently interpret state constitutional provisions that are identical or similar to the federal counterparts; various approaches taken by state courts with respect to this issue; in-depth analysis of cases where a state court has departed from the federal interpretation. Prerequisites: 091:232.

091:680 Supreme Court Seminar
Supreme Court practice, procedure, jurisdiction; the art of opinion writing; in-depth analysis of cases on the court’s pending docket; writing briefs, conducting research, conferencing cases sitting as a mock Supreme Court, assigning and preparing opinions, soliciting votes of colleagues; preparation of two opinions.

091:683 Rethinking Public International Law
Major transformations of public international law; how to integrate human rights into a system designed to secure world peace; transformation of laws of war; emergence of new sites of authority (supranational, international); blurring of line between public international law and constitutional law; conflicts of interpretation in relations between major players (United States, European and Asian countries).

091:684 The Future of Public Law
Addresses slowly developing sense of crisis in public law worldwide, arising from attempt to use a model of law as an autonomous force in society that arose in the development of Western legal traditions as a way of resolving private disputes and only later applied to resolution of disputes between private citizens and the state; how this model is called upon to resolve disputes of great political salience involving various state or supra-national actors increasingly in the modern world; can public law provide what is expected of it, and is public law an experiment that has run its course?

091:685 Seminar: Religion and Law
3-4 s.h.
The role of law in ongoing conflicts over the relationship between religion, morality, and society in the United States. Same as 032:240.
091:693 Transitional Justice

How states resolve and manage tensions between objectives of social peace, justice, reconciliation (e.g., redress past abuses of basic rights); judicial and nonjudicial responses, including criminal prosecution, truth-seeking initiatives, private lawsuits for compensation from wrongdoers, monetary reparations by states to victims, displacement of perpetrators from prominent positions; strengths and weaknesses of each approach and conditions under which an approach is suitable, examined through countries including South Africa, Peru, Chile, Argentina, Rwanda, Sierra Leone, former Yugoslavia; how methods increasingly are combined to achieve comprehensive societal remediation in aftermath of abuse.

Law Study Abroad

660:823 Program in Comparative Law in Bordeaux, France

Intensive course work in France taught by professors from Iowa and France. Five-week courses in May and June.

660:824 London Law Consortium

Study abroad program for students from seven law schools (Iowa, Georgia, Utah, Kansas, Missouri-Columbia, Indiana-Bloomington, Chicago-Kent); American and British law taught by faculty drawn from the seven schools and British universities; clinical law program, work with British barristers and solicitors.

The Roy J. and Lucille A. Carver College of Medicine is an integral part of The University of Iowa. It contributes to the education of several thousand University students, is home to ground-breaking research in a wide array of disciplines, and provides a statewide educational health care resource.

The Carver College of Medicine is the only college in Iowa that offers a curriculum leading to the Doctor of Medicine. It also offers a Bachelor of Science in clinical laboratory sciences, nuclear medicine technology, and radiation sciences (see "Undergraduate Programs" later in this Catalog section) as well as Master of Science and Doctor of Philosophy degrees in several disciplines, the Master in Medical Education, the Master of Physician Assistant Studies, and the Doctor of Physical Therapy (see "Graduate Programs" later in this section).

Doctor of Medicine and other health science students have a number of opportunities to gain experience in private medical offices and community hospitals. M.D. graduates may pursue further training in the specialties of family medicine, internal medicine, surgery, and pediatrics at one of 10 University of Iowa-affiliated residency programs in six Iowa cities. In addition, they have access to two transitional-year programs.

The college also participates in the education of students in the Colleges of Dentistry, Nursing, Pharmacy, and Public Health and in the life-sciences and health-related programs of the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, the College of Engineering, and the Graduate College.

Health professionals from throughout the Midwest take part in the college’s year-round program of continuing medical education. They update their knowledge and skills through refresher courses, clinics, and conferences. The college also offers a variety of services in support of Iowa physicians and community hospitals.

In addition to providing education and resources for physicians and other health care organizations, the college addresses broad public issues of distribution and organization of health care services. Its faculty members advise and serve on national, state, and regional health planning councils, health boards, and various health agencies; some faculty members also take part in the University’s Center for Health Services Research.

Accredited by the Liaison Committee on Medical Education of the American Medical Association and the Association of American Medical Colleges, the Carver College of Medicine meets the requirements of all state licensing boards. Its M.D. diploma admits the holder to all privileges granted to graduates of all medical colleges before such boards. All other professional programs administered by the college are accredited by their respective accrediting bodies.

Professional Program (M.D.)

The Doctor of Medicine is a four-year program that prepares students to practice primary care medicine and to pursue further education and training in specialized areas of medicine. For a description of the M.D. curriculum and information about admission to the program, financial support, and academic rules and procedures, see Doctor of Medicine (p. 1300) in the Catalog.

Undergraduate Programs

The Carver College of Medicine offers a Bachelor of Science with majors in clinical laboratory science, nuclear medicine technology, and radiation sciences. The clinical laboratory sciences major is offered through a partnership with the University of Nebraska Medical Center. Each program offers a certificate of completion in addition to the bachelor’s degree. See Clinical Laboratory Sciences (p. 1296), Nuclear Medicine Technology (p. 1339), and Radiation Sciences (p. 1386) in the Catalog.

Undergraduate study in the Carver College of Medicine is guided by the following academic rules and procedures.

Health Insurance, Immunizations

All health professions students are required to provide proof of health insurance coverage annually. Contact the University Benefits Office or visit its web site.

All health sciences students must show proof of health examinations and screenings annually. For more information, contact Student Health Service and see Forms and Reports on its web site.

Application for Degree

Students who want to be considered for graduation must file an Application for Degree with the Office of the Registrar before the deadline for the session in which the degree is to be conferred. Students who want to have a minor listed on their transcript must indicate this on the degree application form so that completion of the requirements for the minor can be verified.

Academic Recognition

The University of Iowa and the Carver College of Medicine recognize academic achievement every fall and spring semester.

GRADUATION WITH DISTINCTION

Graduating students may be recognized for their scholastic achievement upon recommendation by their academic program and with the dean’s approval. Graduation with distinction, high distinction, or highest distinction is determined by cumulative and University of Iowa grade-point average. Highest distinction requires a g.p.a. of 3.85 or higher; high distinction requires a g.p.a. of 3.75 to 3.84; and distinction requires a g.p.a. of 3.65 to 3.74. Radiologic technology course grades are not included in grade-point-average.

To graduate with distinction, students must have completed a minimum of 60 s.h. in residence at The University of Iowa and must have completed 45 of the final 60 s.h. before their final semester of registration.

Students graduating with distinction are recognized at graduation and a notation is added to their transcript and diploma.

DEAN’S LIST

Undergraduate students in the Colleges of Liberal Arts and Sciences and Engineering and the Tippie College of Business who achieve a g.p.a. of 3.50 or higher on 12 s.h. or more of University of Iowa graded course work during a given semester or summer session and who have no semester hours of I (incomplete) or O (no grade reported) during the same semester are recognized by inclusion on the Dean’s List for that semester. Undergraduate students in the Carver College of Medicine may qualify for the Dean’s List with fewer than 12 s.h. of graded credit if deemed appropriate by the college. Beginning fall 2011, College of Nursing students participating in clinical courses must have a total of 12 s.h. of earned credit, with 8 s.h. of graded credit with a g.p.a. of 3.50 or higher.

PRESIDENT’S LIST

University of Iowa undergraduate students who achieve a g.p.a. of 4.00 on 12 s.h. or more of University of Iowa graded course work and who have no semester hours of I (incomplete) or O (no grade reported) for two consecutive semesters (excluding summer sessions) are recognized by inclusion on the President’s List. Beginning fall 2011, College of Nursing students participating in clinical courses must have a total of 12 s.h. of earned credit, with 8 s.h. of graded credit, to qualify for the President’s List.

Financial Support

Students are eligible to apply for undergraduate financial aid. Scholarships, grants, loans, and part-time job placement are administered by the University’s Office of Student Financial Aid. Part-time work in related areas is sometimes available.

Degrees, Minors

GRADING, RESIDENCY

Students must earn a g.p.a. of at least 2.00 each semester in all college work attempted, all work undertaken at The University of Iowa, and all graded work attempted after admission to the Carver College of Medicine. Students enrolled in a program that uses the pass/fail/honors grading system must pass all courses required to complete the program.

Students must earn a C or higher in professional specialty (modality) courses.

The residence requirement may be met by earning the final consecutive 30 s.h. in residence at The University of Iowa, or 45 of the last 60 s.h. in residence, or an overall total of 90 s.h. in residence.
Nonresident instruction includes course work and correspondence study at other colleges, universities, and institutions. Undergraduate course work in other University of Iowa colleges counts toward residency requirements.

DOUBLE MAJORS

Students may earn more than one major in the Carver College of Medicine by meeting the requirements for each major.

TWO BACHELOR’S DEGREES

Students who want to earn two bachelor’s degrees, each from a different college, may do so under a joint degree program. They must have their combined course of study approved by the dean of the Carver College of Medicine and the dean of the other college to be eligible for a joint degree program.

SECOND BACHELOR’S DEGREE

Students who already hold a bachelor’s degree and wish to earn an additional bachelor’s degree must complete at least 30 s.h. consecutively in the Carver College of Medicine. Students who hold a B.A. or B.S. are considered to have completed the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences General Education Program (p. 381) except for the foreign language requirement. Holders of other degrees must meet college and program degree requirements. Students with a B.A. or B.S. must satisfy the residence requirement for a bachelor’s degree at Iowa. Individuals interested in earning a second bachelor’s degree must apply for admission to the degree program at the University’s Office of Admissions.

JOINT BACHELOR’S DEGREE

Students may earn two University of Iowa bachelor’s degrees in a joint degree program in the Carver College of Medicine and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences. Students generally begin their academic program in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences and must be eligible for admission to the Carver College of Medicine Bachelor of Science program they wish to enter.

Students enrolled in a joint degree program must meet the bachelor’s degree requirements specified by both colleges. The exact length of time necessary to complete the program is determined by the major areas of study selected in each college. Students who enter the joint degree program are assigned two faculty advisors, one in the major department of the Carver College of Medicine and the other in the major department of the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Students interested in a joint degree program should see the director of the Bachelor of Science program of their choice in the Carver College of Medicine.

MINORS

Students graduating from the Carver College of Medicine may earn a minor or minors in any degree-granting department or program in the college outside of their major department or in another college of the University by meeting that department’s requirements for the minor. Generally, students must earn a minimum of 15 s.h. in the minor.

DUPLICATION AND REGRESSION

Duplication occurs when students take the same course more than once or when they take a course that duplicates the content of a course they already have completed satisfactorily. Regression occurs when students take a course that is less advanced or at a lower level than one in the same subject that they already have completed satisfactorily. Duplication and regression are assessed by the registrar at the time of graduation analysis. Semester hours earned by duplication or regression do not count toward graduation.

COURSES OFFERED BY OTHER UNIVERSITY OF IOWA COLLEGES

Students who enroll in courses offered by other University of Iowa colleges are governed by those colleges’ rules in matters regarding the courses. See Policy Governing Students Enrolled in Courses Outside Their Own College or Degree Program.

Registration and Grading

Information about tuition and fees, registration, and deadlines is available from the Office of the Registrar. Students who add or drop a course after registration or who register late are assessed a fee. Each course dropped after the deadline results in a W (withdrawal) on the transcript (see Changes in Registration below). Students are not allowed to register for full-semester courses after the second week of the semester or the first week of the summer session. Students must register for off-cycle courses before the first day of the course. The maximum permitted registration is 20 s.h. in a regular semester and 10 s.h. in the summer session. Students must obtain permission from the head of the division to register for more than the maximum semester hours allowed.

CHANGES IN REGISTRATION

Courses may be added with the signatures of the advisor and the course instructor at any time during the first one-fifth of the course. They may be dropped at any time during the first two-thirds of the course. Approval is required from the dean of the Carver College of Medicine for all other changes in registration and is granted only in extraordinary circumstances. Students are assigned a mark of W (withdrawn) for any course dropped after the first one-fifth of the course.

Students who have registered for courses offered for variable or arranged credit may change the number of semester hours with the signatures of the instructor, the advisor, and the head of the division at any time before the end of the first two-thirds of the course.

Other changes in registration (such as to audit for zero credit) may be made only during the first one-fifth of the course.

It is the student’s responsibility to see that the change of registration form is approved by the necessary individuals and is delivered to the Registration Center. Changes in registration become effective on the date the completed form is submitted to the Registration Center.

WITHDRAWAL OF REGISTRATION

Students may withdraw registration without academic penalty at any time before the end of the first four-fifths of the course, but no credit is given for the course. Later withdrawal results in automatic assignment of an F. Students who withdraw are not reinstated after the deadline for that session.

GRADING PROCEDURES

Grading procedures vary from program to program. Students should consult individual program policy statements for information.

AUDITING COURSES

Students may register to audit a course with approval of the appropriate program director and course instructor. In addition to obtaining these signatures, students must register for zero credit in the course to be audited. The mark of R (registered) is assigned if the student’s attendance and performance are satisfactory; if they are unsatisfactory, the mark of W (withdrawn) is assigned. Courses completed with a mark of R do not meet any college requirement and carry no credit toward graduation. Auditing may not be used as a second-grade-only option.

SECOND-GRADE-ONLY OPTION

Repeating courses for the second-grade-only option is allowed in extraordinary circumstances. To repeat a course for the second-grade-only option, students must obtain the signatures of the course instructor, the program director, and the dean on a form available from the Office of the Registrar; the signed form must be returned to the Registrar’s office before the end of the first one-fifth of the course. Both grades remain on the permanent record, but only the second one is used to calculate grade-point average and credit earned.

INCOMPLETES

A grade of I (incomplete) may be reported if the reasons for inability to finish the course satisfactorily are acceptable to the program director and the course instructor. There also must be evidence that the course work will be finished within a reasonable length of time, usually by the end of the next academic session. Incompletes not removed by the deadline for submission of final grades for the next session result in the assignment of a grade of F. Changing the grade when an incomplete has been converted to an F requires the signature of the dean on a change-of-grade form.

REPORTS TO STUDENTS

Instructors notify any student whose work falls below the minimum acceptable level once the problem is recognized. Grades are reported on the student’s transcript, following University protocol. No formal midterm reports are given.

Academic Progress, Probation, Dismissal

Students are expected to maintain satisfactory academic and professional standards and to demonstrate reasonable progress toward the Bachelor of Science and certificate of completion. Students who fail to maintain satisfactory academic progress or professional standards of behavior as determined by their program may be placed on probation or dismissed from the program. Probation serves as a warning that the student will not graduate unless his or her academic performance and/or professional behavior improves.

Students on probation are restored to good standing by the program director upon evidence that the problem has been corrected. Such action is usually taken at the end of a semester or session. Entering students may be admitted on probation if they fail to meet the minimum stated standards for admission.

Continued unsatisfactory scholarship or unprofessional behavior may result in dismissal from a program. Students dismissed from a program must reapply for admission through the regular, established program admissions process, following review by a faculty committee, at least four months before the requested date of readmission.
Students placed on probation or dismissed from a program are notified in writing by the dean; copies are placed in their files.

In order to be restored to good standing, students placed on academic probation during a semester or summer session must have a University of Iowa g.p.a. and a cumulative g.p.a. of at least 2.00 by the end of the next semester (for full-time students) or by the time they have earned the next 8 s.h. (for part-time students). Students on academic probation who fail to meet the grade-point average requirement in the designated time frame for restoration to good standing are subject to dismissal at the end of the semester.

Students are expected to attend classes regularly. Students who miss classes or examinations because of illness are expected to present evidence that they have been ill. Any other absences must be approved in advance by the course instructor.

Any offense against good order committed by a student in a classroom, clinical setting, or laboratory may be dealt with by the instructor or referred to the program director. The instructor reports in writing any disciplinary action taken against a student to the program director. Repeated or exceptional instances are reported to the dean.

Academic Misconduct

PLAGIARISM AND CHEATING

All cases of plagiarism and cheating in the Carver College of Medicine are reported to the dean with a statement of relevant facts. The program director and the instructor may submit recommendations for appropriate disciplinary action.

The individual instructor may reduce the student’s grade, including assignment of the grade of F in the course. A report of this action is sent to the student, the program director, and the dean.

The dean, or a faculty committee appointed by the dean, may impose the following or other penalties, as the offense warrants: disciplinary probation, requirement of additional hours for the degree, suspension from the program for a period of time, or recommendation of expulsion from the program.

APPEALS PROCEDURE

Students who want to appeal a decision should appeal in writing to the dean within two weeks after the date of receipt of the decision in writing.

Graduate Programs

The Carver College of Medicine offers graduate programs leading to the M.S. in pathology (p. 1349); the M.S. and Ph.D. in biochemistry (p. 1286), free radical and radiation biology (p. 1313), microbiology (p. 1325), molecular physiology and biophysics (p. 1332), and pharmacology (p. 1359); the Ph.D. in anatomy and cell biology (p. 1278) and physical rehabilitation science (p. 1363); the Master in Medical Education (p. 1321) (M.M.E.); the Master of Physician Assistant Studies (p. 1374) (M.P.A.S.); and the Doctor of Physical Therapy (p. 1363) (D.P.T.).

Many of the college's faculty members participate in the Graduate College's interdisciplinary programs in genetics, immunology, molecular and cellular biology, and neuroscience, and in its Biosciences Program.

The Biosciences Program gives graduate students the opportunity to become acquainted with basic molecular research in the Departments of Anatomy and Cell Biology, Biochemistry, Biology, Biomedical Engineering, Chemistry, Communication Sciences and Disorders, Microbiology, Molecular Physiology and Biophysics, Pharmacology, and the Programs in Free Radical and Radiation Biology, Genetics, Human Toxicology, Immunology, Molecular and Cellular Biology, Neuroscience, and Physical Therapy and Rehabilitation Science. The Biosciences Program offers graduate students flexibility during their first year of study, after which they select the department or program in which they will earn their Ph.D. degree. See Biosciences (Graduate College) for details.

Joint Degree Programs

Students who wish to pursue an M.D. in combination with a graduate degree must be admitted to both degree programs and must make arrangements with the graduate department and with the Carver College of Medicine associate dean for student affairs and curriculum. Students must be admitted to both programs before they can be admitted to the joint degree program. Examples of joint degree programs are the joint M.D./Ph.D. offered through the Medical Scientist Training (p. 1323) Program; the joint M.D./M.P.H. with the College of Public Health (p. 1446); joint M.D./M.B.A. with the Tippie College of Business; (p. 775) and the joint M.D./J.D. with the College of Law (p. 1215).
Faculty

Carver College of Medicine faculty members are committed to the college's missions of education, research, and clinical service.

Faculty members teach more than 600 medical students and 250 associated health sciences students, and they lead basic science courses for more than 5,000 students from colleges across the university. They also serve the lifelong educational needs of physicians and allied health personnel; the college is accredited by the Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education.

The college's faculty members are dedicated researchers. Among them are leaders in biomedical imaging, cancer, cardiovascular disease, brain imaging and neurosciences, cystic fibrosis, hearing loss and deafness, muscular dystrophy, macular degeneration and other blinding eye diseases, and Huntington's disease. Faculty members are key to the extramural support the college receives for research and scholarship and to the University's rank as 11th among public institutions in National Institutes of Health funding. Four faculty members are Howard Hughes Medical Institute investigators; ten have been inducted into the Institute of Medicine; three have been named to the National Academy of Sciences; and ten are fellows of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Faculty who have clinical care responsibilities are members of University of Iowa Physicians, the largest multispecialty medical practice group in Iowa. They provide specialized comprehensive care at University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics, whose clinical services are directed by the heads of the Carver College of Medicine's corresponding academic departments. In addition to educating Iowa's medical students, faculty physicians train and instruct more than 700 resident physicians and fellows in medical specialties, subspecialties, and research. Nearly 300 faculty members are listed in the national 2009-10 Best Doctors in America database.

The Office of Faculty Affairs and Development supports faculty in their specific areas of teaching, research, clinical care, administration, and professional service.

Interdisciplinary Programs, Centers

The college's interdisciplinary programs and centers draw strength from college faculty members and the facilities available to them, without regard to departmental units or to the distinction between graduate and postgraduate training. For more information, contact the senior associate dean for scientific affairs.

The following centers are subdivisions of the Carver College of Medicine.

Alzheimer's Disease Research Center

The Alzheimer's Disease Research Center studies Alzheimer's disease and related neurological conditions from the viewpoint of neuroanatomy, neuroimaging, neuropsychology, and neurochemistry. The center's purposes are to improve the diagnosis and treatment of these conditions, to disseminate information on new research to the public, and to contribute to a better understanding of the neural basis of cognition.

Carver Family Center for Macular Degeneration

The Carver Family Center for Macular Degeneration was organized to prevent the devastating consequences of macular degeneration in the majority of people at risk. For those already affected by the disease, the center works to develop sight-saving medical, pharmacological, and surgical treatments.

Holden Comprehensive Cancer Center

The Holden Comprehensive Cancer Center (HCCC) coordinates the efforts of University of Iowa faculty and staff in research, education, and clinical programs related to all aspects of cancer. The HCCC is recognized by the National Cancer Institute as an NCI-designated cancer center and has "comprehensive" status, a designation that recognizes the depth and breadth of interdisciplinary cancer research activity taking place at the University of Iowa.

Iowa Cardiovascular Center

The Iowa Cardiovascular Center coordinates research and training programs related to cardiovascular diseases. It encompasses several programs: Program Project Grant on Integrative Neurobiology of Cardiovascular Function, Program Project Grant on Cerebral Blood Vessels, Program Project Grant on Oxidative Mechanisms in Vascular Disease, Program Project Grant on Genetic and Signaling Mechanisms in the Central Regulation of Blood Pressure, Program Project Grant on Airway Physiology and Pathophysiology in a Porcine CF Model, Program Project Grant on Gene Therapy for Cystic Fibrosis Lung Disease, a Leducq Fondation Consortium grant, and a Cystic Fibrosis Foundation research and development program. It also coordinates several training programs and a program of other interdisciplinary research supported by a number of individual project grants. The center occupies two floors of cardiovascular research laboratories and administrative offices in the Medical Research Center.

Iowa Mental Health Clinical Research Center

The major emphasis of the Iowa Mental Health Clinical Research Center is the study of schizophrenia. The center provides the facilities for research linking the clinical picture of the illness with its underlying neurobiology. The center’s seven research units conduct the necessary integrative and interdisciplinary research to advance knowledge about the disease.

Facilities

Education and Patient Care Facilities

Carver College of Medicine classes are taught in the Medical Education and Research Facility, Bowen Science Building, Medical Education Building, Medical Laboratories, and in University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics classrooms and conference rooms.

The Medical Education and Research Facility contains the college’s four learning communities. The communities group students who are at different stages in their medical education, encouraging peer-to-peer learning and emphasizing leadership and community service. Each learning community features small-group rooms, study and social spaces, computer workstations, a kitchen area, and staff offices. The Medical Education and Research Facility also houses the Performance-Based Assessment Program, which evaluates students’ clinical and communications skills by reviewing simulated physician-patient encounters recorded in mock patient examination suites.

The Hardin Library for the Health Sciences is centrally located on the health sciences campus.

Students acquire clinical-skills experience at the 729-bed University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics, the Iowa City Veterans Affairs Medical Center, and in affiliated hospitals and ambulatory care centers throughout Iowa.

University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics (UIHC) serves as a tertiary care center for Iowa and portions of adjoining states. Many patients are referred to UIHC for care and treatment not available in their home communities.

Research Facilities

The Eckstein Medical Research Building provides space, mechanical systems, and support services that offer flexibility and adaptability for current and future research. The facility enables interdisciplinary groups of faculty scientists, each of whom is researching a human biology problem at the advancing edge of science, to conduct research in close proximity to other select researchers. It also is home to the Biomedical Research Store, which provides University of Iowa investigators with common molecular and cell biology enzymes, reagents, and kits.

The Medical Education and Research Facility houses research laboratories in addition to space for medical education. Connected to it is the Carver Biomedical Research Building. With a state-of-the-art nuclear magnetic resonance facility on its lower level and five floors of laboratories above, the Carver Biomedical Research Building greatly expands the college’s research capabilities.

Other buildings that house research labs include Medical Laboratories, Bowen Science Building, Medical Education Building, Medical Research Facility, Medical Research Center, and buildings at the University of Iowa Research Park (formerly the Oakdale Research Park).

The Office of Consultation and Research in Medical Education is staffed by education specialists from a range of disciplines who serve the faculty, staff, and administrators of all Carver College of Medicine programs. The office provides educational consultation, initiates and cooperates in educational research endeavors, and conducts faculty development activities.

Core Research Facilities are centralized laboratories dedicated to developing and providing resources that facilitate biomedical research. They are available on a fee-for-service basis to University of Iowa investigators as well as to entities outside the University.

Currently under construction is the Pappajohn Biomedical Discovery Building. The 200,000-square-foot, six-story facility, located adjacent to the Medical Education and Research Facility and the Carver Biomedical Research Building, is scheduled for completion in 2014. It will contain laboratories and office space and will house the Pappajohn Biomedical Institute, which will bring together scientists from across campus to collaborate on high-risk, high-yield life sciences research.

050:180 Community-Based Primary Care
Introduction; clinical activities, work with community agencies and resources, didactic and conferences. Requirements: M.D. enrollment.

050:183 Healthcare Ethics, Law, and Policy
2 s.h.
Ethical and legal aspects of health care delivery.

050:185 The Examined Life: Writing and Medicine
1 s.h.
Literature, essays, poetry; discussion of participants’ writing; students prepare portfolios of their own writing.

050:188 Career Life Planning
1 s.h.
Students’ individual interests, values, and decision-making processes important in selecting a specialty, engaging in the match process, and integrating oneself into the medical profession; personal career development, culture and climate in which physicians work and learn.

050:189 Evidence-Based Medicine for Clinical Medicine
1 s.h.
Evaluation of literature and development of critical thinking skills necessary for evidence-based medical practice.

050:190 Introduction to Medical Education at Iowa
0 s.h.
Introduction to first-year fall courses; advanced concepts in anatomy, biochemistry, cell biology, and clinical reasoning skills; for M.D. students.

050:191 Biomedical Innovation
1 s.h.
Introduction to all phases of medical device/technology development; development of knowledge of entire medical innovation process through didactic sessions, faculty, interactions, and interdisciplinary collaboration; interdisciplinary approach; research and development of a novel medical device, therapy, or model of care. Requirements: M.D. enrollment.

050:195 Community Health Outreach I

1-2 s.h.
Presentations, patient-based learning groups, readings, and practical experience working with agencies that provide health care and wellness promotion to communities; substance abuse; child, adolescent, and adult health; aging; interpersonal violence; homelessness.

050:203 Clinical Dietetics
1 s.h.
Nutritional aspects of health and disease, with emphasis on medical nutrition therapy; human nutrition in the clinical state as it relates to physiology and biochemistry.

050:211 MSTP Research
arr.
Research experience. Requirements: Medical Scientist Training Program enrollment.

050:212 MSTP Clinical Connections
arr.
Experience with physician-scientist preceptor in medical interviewing, physical examination, patient presentation through direct patient interaction. Requirements: Medical Scientist Training Program graduate phase enrollment.

050:213 Analyzing and Presenting Medical Research
1 s.h.
How to read, interpret, and present medical and scientific literature; students read and present representative papers from scientific and medical literature.
050:240 Human Organ Systems 8 s.h.
Microscopic structure and function of major and specialized human organ systems; approach integrating normal microscopic anatomy and human physiology. Requirements: M.D. enrollment.

050:270 Responsible Conduct in Research 0 s.h.
Ethical issues; misconduct and fraud; proper handling of data; responsible authorship; conflict of interest; research on animals and human subjects.

050:280 Medicine, Literature, and Writing arr.
Insights, freedom, joy, responsibilities, and challenges of a life in medicine; reading, discussion, individual creative writing.

050:281 Global Health Issues I 1 s.h.
Core issues in the current field of global health, including history of global health, health and development, social determinants of health, measuring health and disease, disparities in the American health care system, poverty and health, gender issues and reproductive health, child health, immigrant and migrant health issues, and introduction of major players in global health. Requirements: M.D. enrollment.

050:282 Global Cross-Cultural Clerkship arr.
Cross-cultural medical program at an international site; focus on health care problems of a specific community; individual educational objectives set in advance.

050:283 Health Informatics I 3 s.h.

050:284 Global Cross-Cultural Elective arr.
Cross-cultural medical program with focus on health care problems of a domestic or international community; individually arranged.

050:285 Global Health Issues II 1 s.h.
Core issues in the current field of global health, including health care as a human right, why the Third World is the Third World, communicable disease issues, outbreaks and pandemics, noncommunicable issues, malnutrition and obesity, cultural context of health care, violence as a health issue, and emergency response and transition to development. Prerequisites: 050:281. Requirements: M.D. enrollment.

050:286 Introduction to U.S. Health Care System 1 s.h.
Structure, function, and finance of U.S. health care system; access, cost, quality, finance mechanisms, reform process.

050:287 Global Health Seminar 1 s.h.
Presentations by faculty members, University special guests, and alumni on their current work in global medicine/global health; implementation of global health concepts. Requirements: M.D. enrollment.

050:300 Teaching Skills for Medical Students 4 s.h.
Practical teaching techniques; opportunity for students to develop teaching skills before they become medical residents.

050:301 Advanced Teaching Skills for Medical Students 2 s.h.
Opportunity to expand knowledge and experience in medical education; investigation of medical education in students’ specialty of interest through literature research and interaction with faculty; primary focus is to design and successfully complete a faculty approved project. Prerequisites: 050:300. Requirements: fourth-year M.D. enrollment.
050:310 Patient Safety and Teamwork
2,4 s.h.
Interprofessional experience using multiple pedagogic methods, including team-based simulation to teach about patient safety and teamwork; collaboratively taught by representatives from anesthesia, pediatrics, internal medicine, Office of Consultation and Research in Medical Education, College of Nursing, College of Public Health, and office of UIHC chief quality officer. Requirements: M.D. enrollment.

050:701 Instructional Design and Technology
3 s.h.
Skills and techniques necessary for analysis, design, development, implementation, and evaluation of effective instruction.

050:702 Clinical Teaching in Medical Education
3 s.h.
Principles and methods for teaching individuals and small groups in outpatient and inpatient settings. Prerequisites: 050:701 or 07P:205. Recommendations: educational psychology course.

050:703 Educational Research and Evaluation
3 s.h.
Research design and program evaluation; approaches relevant to medical education.

050:711 Teaching Methods in Medical Education
3 s.h.
Principles and methods for teaching in large and small classrooms. Recommendations: educational psychology course.

050:712 Introduction to Educational Measurement in Medical Education
3 s.h.
Classical test theory; overview of medical education assessment methods; practical information for designing and critiquing assessments.

050:713 Assessment in Medical Education
3 s.h.
Medical education assessment methods; research methods and literature that support current practices; research project. Prerequisites: 050:712.

050:714 Current Issues in Medical Education
3 s.h.
Selected issues, policies, and research.

050:720 Portfolio Project
3 s.h.
Production of individual student portfolios used to integrate knowledge across courses; capstone activity.

050:721 Study in Faculty Development
3 s.h.
Academic credit for approved project or other assigned activities for students in the Teaching Scholars program.

050:722 Independent Study
arr.
Repeatable.

050:723 Medical Education Project
3 s.h.
Experience working with a faculty mentor to design and implement a curriculum or educational research project.

050:724 Leadership in Medicine
3 s.h.
Introduction to basic leadership and management theories pertaining to a health care setting; focus on the history of leadership development, various components of leadership, and how these components can be used to be a successful leader/administrator. Requirements: Master in Medical Education degree program enrollment.

050:725 Simulation in Medical Education
3 s.h.
Appropriate use of various types of simulation in medical education; how to design, deliver, and debrief a simulation activity; literature supporting use of simulation in medical education. Requirements: Master in Medical Education degree program enrollment.
050:999 Individually Arranged Medicine Elective
Individually arranged elective through the Office of Student Affairs and Curriculum.

Hospital Certificate Programs

The following courses are conducted by University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics staff.

670:901 Radiologic Technology I 0 s.h.
Patient care and ethics, radiographic positioning, radiographic critique, medical terminology, radiologic physics, anatomy and physiology, radiographic technique, computer technology, radiation biology, radiographic processing, imaging equipment, quality assurance; supervised clinical education; two-year program; national board examination required at completion.

670:902 Radiologic Technology II 0 s.h.
Prerequisites: 670:901.

671:902 Orthoptics Program 0 s.h.
Clinical science of binocular vision, ocular motility, and related eye disorders; practical, theoretical training in the Department of Ophthalmology and Visual Sciences two-year program; written, oral and practical national board examinations required at completion. Requirements: bachelor's degree with specific class recommendations.

672:803 Radiation Therapy I 0,12 s.h.
Theory and techniques of radiation therapy technology; emphasis on areas of oncology treatment planning, treatment set-up, dosimetry, use of megavoltage radiation-producing equipment to administer treatment. Requirements: completion of radiologic technology program and eligibility for registration with a national certification program.

672:804 Radiation Therapy II 0,12 s.h.
Theory and techniques of radiation therapy technology; emphasis on areas of oncology treatment planning, treatment set-up, dosimetry, use of megavoltage radiation-producing equipment to administer treatment; one-year program ending in eligibility for national certification examination in radiation therapy. Prerequisites: 672:803. Requirements: graduation from an accredited radiography program and eligibility for registration with a national certification program.

672:805 Radiation Therapy III 0,6 s.h.
Prerequisites: 672:804.

673:110 Foundations of Sonography 3 s.h.
Sonography history, ergonomics, terminology, image orientation; basic theories of sound waves, echo production, transducers, equipment operation, body imaging, Doppler, hemodynamics. Requirements: 029:008 or radiologic technology program physics course or diagnostic sonography physics course.

673:115 Abdominal Sonography I 3 s.h.
Embryology, anatomy, and physiology of various abdominal structures imaged sonographically; abdominal vasculature, hepatobiliary system, pancreas, urinary system, adrenals, spleen, male anatomy; proper sonoanatomic imaging techniques, including appearance of normal anatomy, imaging protocol, proper instrument settings. Prerequisites: 676:100. Corequisites: 673:110, if not taken as a prerequisite.

673:120 Obstetrical and Gynecological Sonography I 3 s.h.
Embryology, anatomy, and physiology of the female reproductive system and developing fetus; proper sonoanatomic imaging techniques, including appearance of normal anatomy, imaging protocol, proper instrument settings. Prerequisites: 676:100. Corequisites: 673:110, if not taken as a prerequisite. Requirements: successful completion of a two-year radiologic technology or diagnostic medical sonography program.
673:125 Vascular Sonography I 3 s.h.
Embryology, anatomy, and physiology of peripheral and cerebral vascular system; normal and abnormal hemodynamics, Doppler waveforms, pressure measurements, plethysmography, sonographic appearance, scanning techniques; common types of pathology of the lower extremity arterial and venous system, cerebrovascular system. Prerequisites: 675:110. Corequisites: 673:110, if not taken as a prerequisite. Requirements: successful completion of a two-year radiologic technology or diagnostic medical sonography program.

673:140 Sonography Principles, Physics, and Instrumentation 3 s.h.
Physical principles of sound waves, their applications to imaging of the human body, operation and physical characteristics of various ultrasound transducers, method by which the sound wave is converted into a visual image, instrumentation components and their functions, Doppler principles, image artifacts, advanced hemodynamics, and spectral Doppler waveform analysis. Prerequisites: 673:110.

673:145 Abdominal Sonography II 3 s.h.
Pathophysiology of abdominal structures imaged sonographically, including the GI system, abdominal wall, peritoneal, retroperitoneal, and superficial structures from 673:115; interventional sonographic procedures (aspirations, biopsies, intraoperative procedures, sterile technique, needle-guide use); post-procedure protocol; clinical findings, laboratory studies, prognosis correlated with sonographic findings; appropriate image analysis and documentation of pathology. Prerequisites: 673:115.

673:150 Obstetrical and Gynecological Sonography II 3 s.h.
Sonographically-related pathological and abnormal congenital conditions of gynecology and obstetrics, infertility, assisted reproductive therapy, invasive procedures in obstetrics and gynecology, postpartum complications and maternal-fetal bonding; clinical findings, laboratory studies, and prognosis correlated with sonographic findings; appropriate image analysis and documentation of pathology. Prerequisites: 673:120.

673:152 Breast Sonography 2 s.h.
Embryology, anatomy, physiology, and pathophysiology of the breast as it relates to sonographic imaging; proper sonographic imaging techniques, including appearance of normal anatomy, imaging protocol, proper instrument settings; sonographic findings of diseases involving the breast. Prerequisites: 673:110. Requirements: successful completion of a two-year radiologic technology or diagnostic medical sonography program.

673:155 Vascular Sonography II 3 s.h.
Pathophysiology of peripheral, cerebral, and abdominal vascular systems as evaluated sonographically; normal and abnormal hemodynamics, Doppler waveforms, pressure measurements, plethysmography, sonographic appearance, scanning techniques; sonographic findings of diseases involving the lower extremity arterial and venous system, upper extremity arterial and venous system, cerebrovascular system, and abdominal vascular system. Prerequisites: 673:125.

673:803 Diagnostic Medical Sonography I 0,9 s.h.
673:804 Diagnostic Medical Sonography II 0,9 s.h.
Principles and methods in using ultrasound as an imaging modality; abdomen, obstetrics and gynecology, neurosonography, and vascular technology specialties; 18-month program; national certification required at completion. Prerequisites: 673:803. Requirements: completion of an allied health program or bachelor’s degree with course work in physics, anatomy, patient care, and algebra.

673:804 Diagnostic Medical Sonography III 0,3 s.h.
Prerequisites: 673:804. Requirements: completion of an allied health program or bachelor’s degree with course work in physics, anatomy, patient care, medical technology, and algebra.
673:806 Diagnostic Medical Sonography IV
Principles and methods in using ultrasound as an imaging modality; specialties including abdomen, pediatrics, obstetrics, gynecology, interventional procedures, vascular imaging, neurosonography; 18-month program; national certification examination required at completion. Prerequisites: 673:805. Requirements: completion of an allied health program or bachelor’s degree with course work in physics, anatomy, patient care, medical technology, and algebra.

673:807 Diagnostic Medical Sonography V
Prerequisites: 673:806. Requirements: completion of an allied health program or bachelor’s degree with course work in physics, anatomy, patient care, medical technology, and algebra.

673:911 Diagnostic Cardiac Sonography
Principles, methods in using ultrasound; specialties including adult and stress echocardiography; six-month program; national certification examination required at completion of program. Requirements: completion of an accredited medical sonography or vascular technology program.

673:912 Cardiac Sonography Clinical Course
Using ultrasound as an imaging modality; specialties, including adult echocardiography, stress echocardiography; six-month program; national certification examination required at completion. Requirements: completion of an accredited medical sonography or vascular technology program.

674:110 Fundamentals for the MRI Technologist
Care-giving skills specific to patients undergoing MRI examinations; techniques in effectively communicating for safety and comfort; maintaining patient and personnel safety; patient preparation, monitoring, and venipuncture; technologist’s role in a wide variety of MRI examinations and patient conditions. Requirements: ARRT primary certification in radiologic technology, nuclear medicine, sonography, or radiation therapy.

674:120 MRI Procedures I
Imaging techniques related to central nervous and musculoskeletal systems; specific clinical applications; available coils and their use; considerations in imaging parameters; specific choices in protocols and positioning criteria; anatomical structures and the plane that best demonstrates anatomy; signal characteristics of normal and abnormal structures. Requirements: 676:100 or minimum of three months of fulltime MRI clinical work experience; and 674:110, if not taken as a prerequisite, or minimum of six months of MRI clinical work experience.

674:130 MRI Procedures II
MRI techniques related to neck, thorax, breast, abdomen, and pelvis; specific clinical applications; available coils and their use; considerations in imaging parameters; specific choices in protocols and positioning criteria. Prerequisites: 674:120.

674:140 MRI Acquisition and Principles I
Physics and hardware used in obtaining a magnetic resonance signal, including magnetism, NMR signal production, tissue characteristics, spatial localization, pulse sequencing, imaging parameters and options, and special applications; exploration of skills useful in maximizing MR image quality. Corequisites: 674:110.

674:150 MRI Acquisition and Principles II
Advanced MRI techniques; MR angiography and further investigation of fast image acquisition sequences; overview of MR magnets, installation, operation, and facility design; computers and digital image acquisition as they apply to MR; outline of quality assurance procedures. Prerequisites: 674:140.

674:160 MRI Clinical Internship I
Work in UI Healthcare’s MRI department, completing clinical documentation needed to take the ARRT certification examination in MRI; 36 hours per week. Prerequisite: 674:110. Corequisites: 674:120 and 674:140, if not taken as prerequisites. Requirements: pre-acceptance into the MRI Clinical Internship.

Graduate degree: Ph.D. in Anatomy and Cell Biology

Web site: http://www.anatomy.uiowa.edu

The Department of Anatomy and Cell Biology performs three major functions. It teaches human anatomy to students preparing for careers in the health care professions; provides advanced courses, teaching experience, and research training to graduate students preparing for careers in academic research and related scientific fields; and conducts original research on the biological basis of cellular functions and human disease processes.

Preclinical Study

The department contributes to the preclinical education of health care professionals by providing major courses in gross anatomy, cell biology, histology, and neuroscience. The department participates in the Carver College of Medicine’s Medical Scientist Training (p. 1323) Program and the Graduate College’s Biosciences (p. 1144), Molecular and Cellular Biology (p. 1180), Immunology (p. 1161), Genetics (p. 1155), and Neuroscience (p. 1183) Programs.

Graduate Program

• Doctor of Philosophy in anatomy and cell biology

Doctor of Philosophy

The Doctor of Philosophy program in anatomy and cell biology requires a minimum of 72 s.h. of graduate credit. Students in the Ph.D. program work toward the doctorate without an intermediate master’s degree program. They complete courses focused in one of three major areas—molecular medicine and gene therapy, developmental and stem cell biology, or cancer biology—in addition to related background and elective courses. Students also teach in lecture and laboratory courses under faculty supervision. The program may be completed in four or five years of intensive, full-time residence.

Students interested in pursuing graduate study in anatomy and cell biology spend their first year in the University of Iowa Biosciences Program, where they investigate different disciplines by performing research rotations in three of the program’s affiliated laboratories. They also take courses that introduce them to basic principles in the biosciences; participate in the biosciences seminar, where they learn how to evaluate scientific literature critically; and attend departmental seminars.

Students are assigned an advisor to assist in their selection of courses and research rotations during the Biosciences Program year. The curriculum is tailored to fit each student’s individual interests. For more detailed information about the program, see Biosciences (p. 1144) (Graduate College) in the Catalog.

Students enter the Biosciences Program in fall semester. The following May, after completing three research rotations, each student is expected to select a research laboratory and program affiliation and to begin his or her thesis research project. Students who choose to pursue a Ph.D. in anatomy and cell biology may apply all credit earned in the Biosciences Program toward requirements for the degree.

By the end of their second year of graduate study, anatomy and cell biology students take the comprehensive examination, which assesses their ability to analyze, organize, and apply the information, concepts, and skills acquired during the first two years of study. They define a research problem with their major advisor and formulate a research prospectus.

Subsequent years are devoted primarily to research.

The final Ph.D. examination consists of a public oral defense of the dissertation. The dissertation is based on original research conducted with the guidance of the major advisor and at least four other faculty members on the thesis committee.
Admission

Individuals interested in pursuing a Ph.D. in anatomy and cell biology must apply to and be accepted by the University’s Biosciences Program, where they will spend their first year of graduate study. The program accepts applicants with a variety of backgrounds in the biological and physical sciences.

The Biosciences Program has specific admission requirements, including a bachelor’s degree and certain undergraduate course work; specific scores on the Graduate Record Examination (GRE) General Test; and for applicants whose first language is not English, specific scores on the Test of English as a Foreign Language (TOEFL). For detailed admission requirements and application information, see Biosciences (p. 1144) (Graduate College) in the Catalog.

Admission to the Department of Anatomy and Cell Biology, after completion of the biosciences year, is based on evaluation of each applicant’s credentials by the department’s faculty. In addition to having met all admission requirements of the Biosciences Program, applicants to the Ph.D. program in anatomy and cell biology must have completed a bachelor’s degree with the following undergraduate course work: chemistry through organic chemistry, one semester of biochemistry or the equivalent, one semester of another advanced biology course, mathematics through calculus, one year of physics, and one semester of statistics or the equivalent. Desirable qualifications include an undergraduate major in the biological sciences or chemistry; a master’s degree in the biological sciences, chemistry, or a related area; and scores from a GRE Advanced Test in the applicant’s major area.

Applicants must meet the admission requirements of the Graduate College; see the Manual of Rules and Regulations of the Graduate College or the Graduate (p. 1117) College section of the Catalog.

Financial Support

All students in the Department of Anatomy and Cell Biology receive stipends and tuition support. Sources include training grants from the National Institutes of Health, University of Iowa and departmental fellowships and graduate research assistantships, and individual faculty research grants.

Facilities

The department occupies more than 35,000 square feet in the Bowen Science Building on the University of Iowa health sciences campus. The building houses modern teaching facilities and well-equipped research laboratories. The most modern instrumentation is available, including facilities and equipment for digital microscopic imaging, confocal microscopy, molecular biological techniques, tissue culture, and protein chemistry. Other specialized equipment (e.g., electron microscopes, mass spectrophotometers) is available in other facilities. Through collaborative programs with the Holden Comprehensive Cancer Center and Iowa Cardiovascular Center, faculty and students also have access to outstanding research facilities throughout the University’s health sciences campus.

Courses

060:099 Human Anatomy and Basic Physiology for Radiation Science

Integrative systemic study of the structure and function of the human body; body systems defined and described by their constituent organs; body’s most basic cellular level, tissue level, and study of organs which comprise various systems; online course with lectures, assignments, and virtual laboratory study. Requirements: high school biology course.

060:101 Human Gross Anatomy for Dental Students

Regional dissection, lectures, demonstrations, with emphasis on head and neck; neuroanatomy. Offered spring semesters. Requirements: D.D.S. enrollment.

060:103 Medical Gross Human Anatomy

Complete dissection of the body with regional emphasis stressing relationships to the living system; clinically relevant areas of radiologic imaging, surface anatomy, embryology, and clinical correlations; anatomical knowledge through lectures, small group work, independent activities. Offered fall semesters. Requirements: M.D. enrollment.

060:108 Human Anatomy

Regional dissection, lectures, demonstrations; areas important to physical therapists, particularly the upper and lower extremities. Offered fall semesters. Requirements: Physical Therapy Program enrollment.

060:238 Critical Thinking in Genetics
1 s.h.
Current topics in molecular and classical genetics; emphasis on genetic underpinnings of disease; based on primary research publications. Requirements: graduate standing in anatomy and cell biology.

060:239 Critical Thinking in Cell Biology
1 s.h.
Understanding subcellular organization and intercellular communication; emphasis on critical thinking and primary research publications. Requirements: graduate standing in anatomy and cell biology.

060:247 Critical Thinking in Molecular Biology
1 s.h.
How molecules drive signaling pathways and cellular processes essential for biological functions; based on research publications. Requirements: graduate standing in anatomy and cell biology.

060:248 Critical Thinking in Development
1 s.h.
Current topics in molecular basis of vertebrate development; based on primary research publications. Requirements: graduate standing in anatomy and cell biology.

060:249 Critical Thinking in Cellular Physiology
1 s.h.
Control of physiological systems at the cellular level; emphasis on regulation by molecular signaling pathways; literature-based. Requirements: graduate standing in anatomy and cell biology.

060:265 Neuroscience Seminar
0-1 s.h.

060:270 Human Anatomy for Advanced Practice
3,6 s.h.
Interrelationships between anatomic structure and physiological function in health and disease; clinical assessment of functional integrity of organ systems; implications of pathophysiology for anesthesia. Requirements: admission to anesthesia nursing program. Same as 096:270.

060:403 Teaching Elective in Regional Anatomy
2,4 s.h.
Expand knowledge and experience in medical education; investigate educational pedagogy in a laboratory setting coupled with self-directed learning of anatomical content relevant to professional development; prepare, design, and implement four teaching interactions with M1/D1/PA1 students; design a classroom exercise (e.g., interactive lecture, learning activity, computer-based study module) that helps bridge the basic science content with clinical procedure. Requirements: M.D. standing and enrollment in teaching track distinction.

M.D. Student Training

The Department of Anesthesiology introduces second-year medical students to anesthesia as a specialty; helps third-year students develop concepts and technical skills related to resuscitation, airway management, and care of the unconscious patient; and offers fourth-year students intensive study in the specialty. It offers the following courses for medical students. For course descriptions and prerequisite information, see "Courses" below.

Postgraduate and Residency Program

The department’s postgraduate and residency program involves diverse clinical experiences, seminars and teaching conferences, and ongoing research activities that help postgraduate students and residents develop the knowledge and skills required of an anesthesia specialist.

Anesthesia Nursing Program

The department coordinates the Anesthesia Nursing Program, a collaboration between the Carver College of Medicine and the College of Nursing. The program, which is open to nurses who hold a bachelor’s degree, prepares nurse anesthetists to serve rural hospitals in Iowa and nationwide. The curriculum provides intensive training in didactic and clinical anesthesia and includes diverse clinical experience as well as classroom instruction, seminars, and clinical case conferences. It includes the following courses. For course descriptions and prerequisite information, see “Courses” below.

Courses

For M.D. Students

116:006 Clinical Anesthesia 2 s.h.
Clinical instruction in perioperative care of the surgical patient; preoperative evaluation, consideration of coexisting medical problems, intraoperative care, postoperative management; basic airway management; introduction to clinical management of acute and chronic pain; case conferences, simulator training.

116:010 Clinical Anesthesia Senior arr.
Advanced clinical experience in anesthesia management of surgical patients with coexisting medical problems; clinical experience in various forms of anesthesia; general, regional (spinal, epidural, peripheral nerve block) anesthesia; practical experience in airway management; mask ventilation, endotracheal intubation, LMA placement, other alternative airway techniques; medical management of surgical patient under anesthesia; pharmacology, cardiovascular and pulmonary physiology; case conferences.

116:011 Intensive Care arr.
Evaluation, treatment of seriously ill patients in intensive care; ventilator management, evaluation of pulmonary function, monitoring of cardiovascular status, fluid balance and acid base problems, advance monitoring techniques.

116:333 Intensive Care off Campus arr.
Evaluation and treatment of seriously ill patients in an intensive care unit (other than University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics); artificial ventilation, evaluation of pulmonary function, monitoring of cardiovascular status, fluid balance and acid base problems, advance monitoring techniques. Requirements: 4 s.h. of 116:010.

116:998 Anesthesia on Campus arr.
Well defined research project relating to anesthesia; arranged by student with departmental approval.

116:999 Anesthesia off Campus arr.
Knowledge development in anesthesia work and monitor use; ability to identify respiratory, cardiovascular, and neurologic effects of anesthetic agents; skill in airway management; basic skills in general, spinal, epidural, and peripheral nerve block anesthesia.

For Anesthesia Nursing Students

116:271 Chemical and Physical Principles of Anesthesia Practice 3 s.h.
Chemistry and physics, as applied to anesthesia. Requirements: admission to anesthesia nursing program. Same as 096:271.

116:273 Pharmacology of Anesthesia Practice II 3 s.h.
Continuation of 071:115; vascular, hepatic, renal, GI, endocrine aspects; cellular mechanisms, electrolytes alterations, anesthesia specific implications. Requirements: grade of 2.75 or higher in 071:115 and enrollment in anesthesia nursing program. Same as 096:273.

116:274 Basic Principles of Anesthesia Practice 5 s.h.
Overview of anesthesia as a nursing specialty; patient assessment, anesthetic planning and management, pertinent regulations; principles of general and regional anesthesia for surgical specialties. Requirements: (for 096:274) grades of 3.00 or higher in 071:115 and 096:271; (for 116:274) grades of 3.00 or higher in 071:115 and 116:271. Same as 096:274.

116:275 Advanced Principles of Anesthesia Practice I 4 s.h.
Special needs and intraoperative management of obstetric, pediatric, and neurological patients; emphasis on pathophysiology, monitoring, ancillary requirements. Prerequisites: 096:274 or 116:274. Requirements: grade of 3.00 or higher in 096:273 or 116:273. Same as 096:275.

116:277 Advanced Principles of Anesthesia Practice II 1 s.h.
Acute and chronic pain management; anesthetic problems with concurrent multisystem disease, advanced age, altered physical and/or mental status. Prerequisites: 096:274 or 116:274. Requirements: grade of 3.00 or higher in 096:273 or 116:273. Same as 096:277.

116:271 Chemical and Physical Principles of Anesthesia Practice 3 s.h.
Chemistry and physics, as applied to anesthesia. Requirements: admission to anesthesia nursing program. Same as 096:271.

116:273 Pharmacology of Anesthesia Practice II 3 s.h.
Continuation of 071:115; vascular, hepatic, renal, GI, endocrine aspects; cellular mechanisms, electrolytes alterations, anesthesia specific implications. Requirements: grade of 2.75 or higher in 071:115 and enrollment in anesthesia nursing program. Same as 096:273.

116:274 Basic Principles of Anesthesia Practice 5 s.h.
Overview of anesthesia as a nursing specialty; patient assessment, anesthetic planning and management, pertinent regulations; principles of general and regional anesthesia for surgical specialties. Requirements: (for 096:274) grades of 3.00 or higher in 071:115 and 096:271; (for 116:274) grades of 3.00 or higher in 071:115 and 116:271. Same as 096:274.

116:275 Advanced Principles of Anesthesia Practice I 4 s.h.
Special needs and intraoperative management of obstetric, pediatric, and neurological patients; emphasis on pathophysiology, monitoring, ancillary requirements. Prerequisites: 096:274 or 116:274. Requirements: grade of 3.00 or higher in 096:273 or 116:273. Same as 096:275.

116:277 Advanced Principles of Anesthesia Practice II 1 s.h.
Acute and chronic pain management; anesthetic problems with concurrent multisystem disease, advanced age, altered physical and/or mental status. Prerequisites: 096:274 or 116:274. Requirements: grade of 3.00 or higher in 096:273 or 116:273. Same as 096:277.
116:279 Equipment and Technological Principles of Anesthesia Practice
3 s.h.
Anesthesia delivery systems, ancillary equipment, monitoring devices; correlation of applicable chemical and physical principles for use, safe operation, care, and cleaning of anesthesia-related equipment. Prerequisites: 116:271. Requirements: anesthesia nursing program enrollment. Same as 096:279.

116:290 Introductory Clinical Anesthesia
1 s.h.
Initial anesthesia preceptorship; development of basic clinical skills for work as a nurse anesthetist. Requirements: (for 096:290) grades of 3.00 or higher in 096:273 and 096:279; (for 116:290) grades of 3.00 or higher in 116:273 and 116:279. Recommendations: basic science core courses and anesthesia nursing program enrollment. Same as 096:290.

116:291 Clinical Anesthesia I
1 s.h.

116:292 Clinical Anesthesia II
1 s.h.

116:293 Advanced Clinical Anesthesia
1 s.h.
Clinical anesthesia experiences in neurologic surgery, cardiovascular/thoracic surgery; experience providing anesthesia for patients with complex pathophysiology in varied surgical settings. Requirements: (for 096:293) anesthesia nursing program senior standing, anesthesia nursing concentration courses, and grade of 3.00 or higher in 096:292; (for 116:293) anesthesia nursing program enrollment, anesthesia nursing concentration courses, and grade of 3.00 or higher in 116:292. Same as 096:293.

116:294 Obstetrical Anesthesia
1 s.h.
Experience providing anesthesia for the parturient, initial neonatal care; two one-month rotations off campus. Requirements: (for 096:294) anesthesia nursing program enrollment and grade of 3.00 or higher in 096:292; (for 116:294) anesthesia nursing courses, anesthesia nursing program enrollment, and grade of 3.00 or higher in 116:292. Same as 096:294.

116:295 Rural Anesthesia
1 s.h.
Anesthesia experience in community hospitals; three one-month rotations at UI-affiliated clinical sites in rural Iowa. Requirements: (for 096:295) anesthesia nursing program enrollment and grade of 3.00 or higher in 096:292; (for 116:295) anesthesia nursing courses, anesthesia nursing program enrollment, and grade of 3.00 or higher in 116:292. Same as 096:295.

Web site: http://www.biochem.uiowa.edu/

Biochemistry is the study of basic chemical processes that occur in and govern all living systems. Nearly all areas of the life sciences engage in biochemical research.

Biochemistry graduates with bachelor’s degrees often work as research assistants in industry, government, education, or health services; teach in secondary schools; or go on to advanced study in medicine, dentistry, or other areas. Those with advanced degrees pursue careers as teachers, researchers, or administrators in universities and medical schools, government, research agencies, and varied industries.

The Department of Biochemistry offers degree programs for undergraduates and for graduate students and administers the academic curriculum at both levels. The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences grants undergraduate degrees in biochemistry and oversees undergraduate academic policy relating to the student record. The Graduate College grants graduate degrees in biochemistry.

Undergraduate Programs

• Major in biochemistry (Bachelor of Science, Bachelor of Arts)

Bachelor of Science

The Bachelor of Science with a major in biochemistry requires a total of 120 s.h., including 71 s.h. of work for the major. In order to count transfer credit in biochemistry toward the major, students must have the approval of an undergraduate advisor in the department.

The biochemistry major for the B.S. prepares students to work in positions that require a mastery of general biochemistry. It is also excellent preparation for graduate study in biochemistry and related sciences or for study toward a professional degree in the health sciences.

Students are encouraged to take courses from other disciplines, such as business, pre-law, psychology, or journalism. This prepares them for a variety of career paths.

All students must complete the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences General Education Program (p. 381).

The biochemistry major for the Bachelor of Science requires the following course work.

All of these:

- 002:010-002:011 Principles of Biology I-II 8 s.h.
- 004:011-004:012 Principles of Chemistry I-II 8 s.h.
- 22M:025-22M:026 Calculus I-II 8 s.h.
- 029:081-029:082 Introductory Physics I-II 8 s.h.
- 099:101 Technical Communication in Biochemistry 1 s.h.
- 099:120 Biochemistry and Molecular Biology I 3 s.h.
- 099:130 Biochemistry and Molecular Biology II 3 s.h.
- 099:140 Experimental Biochemistry 2 s.h.

Advanced science electives, chosen in consultation with advisor 9 s.h.

One of these:

- 099:155 Research, Independent Study 6 s.h.

Lab-intensive advanced science electives, chosen in consultation with the advisor 6 s.h.

One of these sequences:
Two of these:

- 004:121-004:122 Organic Chemistry I-II 6 s.h.

One of these:

- 004:131 Physical Chemistry I 3 s.h.
- 004:132 Physical Chemistry II 3 s.h.
- 099:241 Biophysical Chemistry I 3 s.h.
- 099:242 Biophysical Chemistry II 3 s.h.

All of these:

002:010-002:011 Principles of Biology I-II 8 s.h.
004:011-004:012 Principles of Chemistry I-II 8 s.h.
22M:025-22M:026 Calculus I-II 8 s.h.
029:011-029:012 College Physics I-II 8 s.h.
099:120 Biochemistry and Molecular Biology I 3 s.h.
099:130 Biochemistry and Molecular Biology II 3 s.h.
099:140 Experimental Biochemistry 2 s.h.

Advanced science electives, chosen in consultation with advisor 6 s.h.

One of these sequences:

004:121-004:122 Organic Chemistry I-II 6 s.h.
004:123-004:124 Organic Chemistry I for Majors - Organic Chemistry II for Majors (preferred) 6 s.h.

One of these:

- 004:131 Physical Chemistry I 3 s.h.
- 004:132 Physical Chemistry II 3 s.h.
- 099:241 Biophysical Chemistry I 3 s.h.
- 099:242 Biophysical Chemistry II 3 s.h.

Bachelor of Arts students who intend to go on to advanced degrees in the biological or health sciences are advised to earn at least 4 s.h. in 099:115 Undergraduate Independent Study or 099:155 Research, Independent Study. There are no prerequisites for 099:115. The course involves experience in an active biochemistry research lab, which must be arranged ahead of time with a supervising faculty member. Students may make arrangements directly with the faculty member or they may request assistance from an undergraduate advisor. Credit earned in 099:115 does not count toward the major, but it does count toward the minimum 120 s.h. required to graduate.

In order to register for 099:155 Research, Independent Study, students must have completed 099:120, 099:130, and 099:140 with a grade average of B or higher in the three courses, and they must not have earned a grade below B-minus in any one of them; or they must have their advisor’s consent and the instructor’s consent to enroll in 099:155.

Bachelor of Arts

The Bachelor of Arts in biochemistry requires a total of 120 s.h., including 55 s.h. of work for the major. In order to count transfer credit in biochemistry toward the major, students must have the approval of an undergraduate advisor in the department.

Students are encouraged to take courses from other disciplines, such as business, pre-law, psychology, or journalism. This prepares them for a variety of career paths.

All students must complete the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences General Education Program (p. 381).

The biochemistry major for the Bachelor of Arts requires the following course work.

- 002:010-002:011 Principles of Biology I-II 8 s.h.
- 004:011-004:012 Principles of Chemistry I-II 8 s.h.

- 029:011-029:012 College Physics I-II 8 s.h.
- 099:120 Biochemistry and Molecular Biology I 3 s.h.
- 099:130 Biochemistry and Molecular Biology II 3 s.h.
- 099:140 Experimental Biochemistry 2 s.h.
- Advanced science electives, chosen in consultation with advisor 6 s.h.

One of these sequences:

- 004:121-004:122 Organic Chemistry I-II 6 s.h.

One of these:

- 004:131 Physical Chemistry I 3 s.h.
- 004:132 Physical Chemistry II 3 s.h.
- 099:241 Biophysical Chemistry I 3 s.h.
- 099:242 Biophysical Chemistry II 3 s.h.

Bachelor of Arts students who intend to go on to advanced degrees in the biological or health sciences are advised to earn at least 4 s.h. in 099:115 Undergraduate Independent Study or 099:155 Research, Independent Study. There are no prerequisites for 099:115. The course involves experience in an active biochemistry research lab, which must be arranged ahead of time with a supervising faculty member. Students may make arrangements directly with the faculty member or they may request assistance from an undergraduate advisor. Credit earned in 099:115 does not count toward the major, but it does count toward the minimum 120 s.h. required to graduate.

In order to register for 099:155 Research, Independent Study, students must have completed 099:120, 099:130, and 099:140 with a grade average of B or higher in the three courses, and they must not have earned a grade below B-minus in any one of them; or they must have their advisor’s consent and the instructor’s consent to enroll in 099:155.

B.A. or B.S. with Teacher Licensure

Students interested in teaching at the elementary and/or secondary level must complete the College of Education’s Teacher Education Program (TEP). Several courses in the College of Education and student teaching are required. Contact the Office of Education Services for details.

Four-Year Graduation Plan

The following checkpoints list the minimum requirements students must complete by certain semesters in order to stay on the University’s Four-Year Graduation Plan. (Courses in the major are those required to complete the major; they may be offered by departments other than the major department.)

Bachelor of Science

Before the third semester begins: 004:011 Principles of Chemistry I and 004:012 Principles of Chemistry II, 22M:025 Calculus I and 22M:026 Calculus II, and at least one-quarter of the semester hours required for graduation

Before the fifth semester begins: the courses listed above, plus 002:010 Principles of Biology I and 002:011 Principles of Biology II; 004:121 Organic Chemistry I and 004:122 Organic Chemistry II, and at least one-half of the semester hours required for graduation

Before the seventh semester begins: the courses listed above, plus 029:081 Introductory Physics I and 029:082 Introductory Physics II, 099:120 Biochemistry and Molecular Biology I, 099:130 Biochemistry and Molecular Biology II, and 099:140 Experimental Biochemistry, two science electives, and at least three-quarters of the semester hours required for graduation

Before the eighth semester begins: the courses listed above, plus 004:131 Physical Chemistry I or 004:132 Physical Chemistry II or 099:241 Biophysical Chemistry I or 099:242 Biophysical Chemistry II, a science elective, and at least 3 s.h. of 099:155 Research, Independent Study

During the eighth semester: enrollment in all remaining course work in the major, all remaining General Education courses, and a sufficient number of semester hours to graduate

Honors

Qualified students may work toward graduation with honors in biochemistry. They must be members of the University of Iowa Honors Program, which requires that students maintain a cumulative University of Iowa g.p.a. of at least 3.33 (contact the University of Iowa Honors Program for more information). To graduate with honors in the major, students must earn 6 s.h. in 099:155 Research, Independent Study. They must present their research results in a report written in the form of a journal article and in an oral report given at a special open departmental seminar.

Graduate Programs

- Master of Science in biochemistry
- Doctor of Philosophy in biochemistry

Students admitted to graduate study in biochemistry usually pursue the Doctor of Philosophy. Qualified students interested in earning the Doctor of Medicine along with the Ph.D. may apply to the Medical Scientist Training (p. 1323) Program, which offers a joint M.D./Ph.D. program.
Master of Science

The Master of Science program in biochemistry requires a minimum of 30 s.h. of graduate credit, thesis research, and a thesis. See "Doctor of Philosophy" for information about the graduate curriculum.

Doctor of Philosophy

The Doctor of Philosophy program in biochemistry requires a minimum of 72 s.h. of graduate credit. The focus of the graduate program is on the individual student.

The 72 s.h. required for the degree includes 34 s.h. of course work and 38 s.h. of research credit. Students may take courses that enhance their educational goals. All Ph.D. students take the following 19 s.h. of course work; they choose an additional 13 s.h. from courses offered by the Department of Biochemistry and other University of Iowa departments.

Students take the comprehensive examination before the end of June in their second year, after which they are admitted formally to degree candidacy and begin to concentrate on thesis research. The program culminates in successful defense of completed thesis work before an examining committee.

In addition to meeting these requirements and those of the Graduate College, students are expected, as part of their training, to assist in teaching biochemistry for one semester.

Throughout the program, students are associated with faculty-directed research groups. They receive close personal attention from the biochemistry faculty members who serve as research advisors.
Admission

The graduate program in biochemistry is flexible enough to accommodate students with bachelor’s degrees in any of the biological, biochemical, or physical sciences. Appropriate preparation includes one-year, college-level courses in organic and physical chemistry, biology, physics, and mathematics through calculus. Students are expected to have had one or more introductory courses in biochemistry.

Applicants must have an undergraduate g.p.a. of at least 3.00 and must submit acceptable verbal, quantitative, and analytical scores on the Graduate Record Examination (GRE) General Test. Applicants are encouraged to submit their scores on the GRE Subject Test in Chemistry; Biology; or Biochemistry, Cell, and Molecular Biology.

Applicants must meet the admission requirements of the Graduate College; see the Manual of Rules and Regulations of the Graduate College or the Graduate (p. 1117) College section of the Catalog.

Financial Support

Students admitted to the Ph.D. program in biochemistry routinely receive a stipend and tuition support.

Faculty and Research

The department’s faculty members supervise research in biochemistry; molecular, cellular, developmental, computational, and structural biology; and model system genetics. Their work is supported by grants from the National Institutes of Health, the National Science Foundation, the American Heart Association, the American Cancer Society, the Muscular Dystrophy Association, and other sources. To learn more about the department’s faculty members and areas of research, visit the Department of Biochemistry web site.

Facilities

The Department of Biochemistry occupies 36,700 square feet on the fourth floor of the Bowen Science Building and 7,500 square feet on the third floor of the Medical Education Research Facility on the University’s health sciences campus. It has a number of well-equipped research laboratories; other departmental facilities include the Biochemistry Stores, the Mattill Biochemistry Reading Room, and the Heath Conference Room.

The department makes available a number of shared instruments; among them are an Applied PhotoPhysics stopped flow spectrometer SX20 (2009); a Jasco spectropolarimeter, model J815 (2010); a Horiba fluorolog-3 spectrofluorometer (2010); and a Beckman Coulter ultra XLI analytical centrifuge (1996).

Faculty, staff, and students in the department have access to a variety of shared Carver College of Medicine resources, including X-ray crystallography, the DNA Facility, the NMR Facility, the Proteomics Facility, the Flow Cytometry Facility, the Gene Transfer Vector Core Facility, the Small Animal Imaging Core, and the Transgenic Animal Facility. The University also supports resources such as the Central Microscopy Research Facilities and the Center for Biocatalysis and Bioprocessing.

Courses

099:101 Technical Communication in Biochemistry

Practical aspects of writing formal scientific papers and giving oral presentations on technical topics. Prerequisites: 099:120 or 099:130 or 099:140. Requirements: junior or senior biochemistry major pursuing a B.S. degree.

099:110 Biochemistry

Basic concepts in modern biochemistry and molecular biology; understanding of life processes in molecular terms. Requirements: one year each of college-level biology and chemistry. Recommendations: one semester of organic chemistry.

099:115 Undergraduate Independent Study

Experience in an active biochemistry research lab, learning and performing experiments relevant to the current projects in that lab; exploration of scientific literature on topic of interest; arranged in advance by student and faculty member. Requirements: first-year, sophomore, or junior standing.
099:120 Biochemistry and Molecular Biology I
3 s.h.
Physical and chemical foundations of biochemistry, structure of biological molecules, catalysis, transport, and oxidative reactions in biology; first course of two-semester sequence that concludes with 099:130. Requirements: two semesters of general chemistry and one of organic chemistry. Recommendations: 002:010, 002:011, and an additional organic chemistry course.

099:130 Biochemistry and Molecular Biology II
3 s.h.
Carbohydrate biosynthesis, lipid metabolism, hormone regulation and integration of metabolism, signal transduction, genes and chromosomes, DNA replication and repair, transcription, RNA processing, protein translation and regulation of gene expression. Prerequisites: 099:120.

099:140 Experimental Biochemistry
2 s.h.
Use of modern instruments and techniques to fractionate, identify, and characterize constituents of biochemical systems. Prerequisites: 099:120. Requirements: grade of C or higher in 099:120, two semesters of general chemistry, and one semester of organic chemistry.

099:155 Research, Independent Study
2-6 s.h.
Independent study and research in areas of interest to the student; arranged in advance by student and biochemistry honors advisor. Requirements: grades of B- or higher in 099:120, 099:130, and 099:140; and an average grade of B or higher in all three courses.

099:161 Biochemistry for Dental Students
4 s.h.

099:162 Biochemistry for Pharmacy Students
4 s.h.

099:163 Medical Biochemistry
4 s.h.
Biochemical concepts and application to clinical problems. Requirements: M.D. enrollment.

099:164 Biochemistry for Physician Assistant Students
3 s.h.
Aspects of general biochemistry necessary for understanding the biochemical basis of human disease; analysis of appropriate clinical cases. Prerequisites: 099:110.

099:215 Directed Readings for Graduate Students
arr.
Directed readings with course content arranged with professor.

099:226 Enzyme Kinetics and Bioorganic Mechanisms
1-2 s.h.
Principles and applications of steady-state and transient enzyme kinetics; mechanisms of catalysis of biochemical reactions. Prerequisites: 099:120.

099:238 Topics in Biophysical Chemistry
1-2 s.h.
Current topics in structure and function of membranes or proteins; DNA-protein interactions; computational biochemistry; applications of NMR, X-ray diffraction, calorimetry, or spectroscopy. Repeatable. Prerequisites: 099:241 or 099:242.

099:241 Biophysical Chemistry I
3 s.h.
Principles and experimental approaches used to study structure and function of biological macromolecules; protein structure, stability, and dynamics; structures of protein-nucleic acid complexes; common biophysical methods (spectroscopy, mass spectrometry, chromatography). Requirements: one year of biochemistry. Recommendations: physical chemistry course and one semester of calculus.
099:242 Biophysical Chemistry II  3 s.h.
Principles and experimental approaches used to study structure and function of biological macromolecules; ligand binding and enzyme catalysis; X-ray crystallography and other diffraction and scattering techniques; NMR spectroscopy. Requirements: one year of biochemistry. Recommendations: physical chemistry course and one semester of calculus.

099:243 Biophysical Chemistry Module 1: Protein Structure, Stability, and Dynamics  1 s.h.
Overview principles of protein structure, stability, folding, and dynamics; brief treatment of structural biology approaches to help students become critical users of models derived from X-ray crystallography and NMR; taken alone or as part of 099:241. Requirements: introductory course in biochemistry.

099:244 Biophysical Chemistry Module 4: Ligand Binding and Enzyme Catalysis  1 s.h.
In-depth examination of principles of ligand binding; experimental approaches to study interactions with small molecules, proteins, and nucleic acids; analysis of binding data; principles of steady-state kinetics; mechanisms of catalysis of biochemical reactions; taken alone or as part of 099:242. Requirements: introductory course in biochemistry.

099:245 Biophysical Chemistry Module 2: Protein-Nucleic Acid Interactions  1 s.h.
In-depth examination of protein-nucleic acid interactions; emphasis on recent information derived from structures of protein-DNA complexes; taken alone or as part of 099:241. Requirements: introductory course in biochemistry.

099:246 Biophysical Chemistry Module 5: X-Ray Diffraction and Scattering Techniques  1 s.h.
In-depth examination of X-ray crystallography to determine structures of biological macromolecules; overview of other diffraction and scattering techniques; intended for advanced undergraduates and graduate students with an interest in applications of X-ray crystallography to problems of structural biology; taken alone or as part of 099:242. Requirements: introductory course in biochemistry.

099:247 Biophysical Chemistry Module 3: Spectroscopy and Other Biophysical Methods  1 s.h.
Basic principles underlying common biochemical techniques (i.e., spectroscopy); UV/Vis absorbance, circular dichroism, and fluorescence spectroscopy; mass spectrometry; ultracentrifugation; chromatography; taken alone or as part of 099:241. Requirements: introductory course in biochemistry.

099:248 Biophysical Chemistry Module 6: Nuclear Magnetic Resonance Spectroscopy  1 s.h.
Basic principles of NMR and applications important for understanding structure and function of biological macromolecules; emphasis on methodology and experimental design, interpretation of data, and critical reading of literature; intended for advanced undergraduates and graduate students with an interest in applications of nuclear magnetic resonance (NMR) to problems of structural biology; taken alone or as part of 099:242. Requirements: one year of biochemistry. Recommendations: basic knowledge of spectroscopy and some previous exposure to NMR from basic chemistry courses.

099:253 Metabolism I  1 s.h.
Basics of carbohydrate metabolism (glycolysis, gluconeogenesis, the pentose phosphate pathway), hormonal regulation of carbohydrate metabolism, the citric acid cycle, amino acid catabolism, oxidative phosphorylation; assignment of an advanced topic related to material, typically a recent research paper, extending inquiry beyond that presented in class and presented orally at end of five-week module. Requirements: undergraduate biochemistry course or background in enzyme function.

The University of Iowa cardiothoracic surgery program is the third oldest program of its kind in the United States. Since its establishment in 1948 as the Division of Cardiothoracic Surgery, the program has advanced from providing operative interventions for patients with diseases of the chest to performing a broad range of the most current and innovative surgical procedures.

The Department of Cardiothoracic Surgery’s facilities are located at University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics. Each year cardiothoracic surgeons at the hospitals perform more than 500 adult and pediatric heart surgeries, including coronary bypasses, transplants, and placement of mechanical cardiac assist devices; minimally invasive procedures such as mitral valve replacement and epicardial lead placement; and more than 600 general thoracic surgeries with emphasis on esophageal and lung diseases. Preparations are under way for providing coronary artery bypass grafting using robotics.

M.D. Student Training

Residency Program

Iowa’s cardiothoracic surgery residency program was established in 1948 and is fully accredited by the Accreditation Council for Graduate Medical Education. It is the only cardiothoracic surgery training program in Iowa. Two residents are accepted into the two-year program each year.

Postbaccalaureate Training

The department plays a primary instructional role in University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics’ 20-month postbaccalaureate Perfusion Technology Program; see the department’s perfusion technology courses (193:161 through 193:171) under “Courses” later in this section. For more information about the Perfusion Technology Program, contact the Department of Cardiothoracic Surgery or visit the Perfusion Technology Program web site.

Research

University of Iowa cardiothoracic surgeons are leaders in clinical research, particularly in oncologic surgery, diseases of the esophagus, artificial organs, pediatric cardiac surgery, and transplantation. Research also is under way in the sequence of mutations and in localization of genes predisposed to cancer.

Facilities

The Department of Cardiothoracic Surgery has specialty laboratories in gastric motility, analytical chemistry, transplantation, tissue culture, surgical bacteriology, shock, and cardiac bypass. These facilities permit study of experimental procedures such as heart valve replacement in large animals and heterotopic heart transplantation in mice and rats.

The laboratories also are used for supervised teaching exercises in surgical technique for medical students and junior residents, and for refinement of technique for senior residents and faculty members.

Courses

193:161 Instrumentation in Perfusion Technology 3 s.h.
Electrical circuitry, filters, pressure transducers, thermistors, cardiac output computers, fluid dynamics, intra-aortic balloon pumps, blood gas analyzers. Requirements: Perfusion Technology Program enrollment.

193:162 Pathophysiology of Perfusion Technology 5 s.h.
Hemostasis, acid base physiology, gas transfer, heart anatomy, heart embryology, congenital cardiac defects. Requirements: Perfusion Technology Program enrollment.

Clinical Laboratory Sciences

Site coordinator
Judith Kittleson (Pathology)

Undergraduate degree: B.S. in Clinical Laboratory Science
Web site: http://www.medicine.uiowa.edu/clsp

Clinical laboratory scientists and medical technologists, now known as medical laboratory scientists, perform the laboratory tests that provide physicians with information vital for accurate diagnosis and proper treatment of disease. They are in demand in hospital, private, and government laboratories; clinics; physicians’ offices; and industrial, pharmaceutical, biological, and environmental research laboratories. Clinical laboratory scientists and medical technologists are highly skilled health team members who use a battery of sophisticated procedures and instruments in their work and who possess specialized knowledge and skills acquired through completion of a formal program of academic and clinical study.

Undergraduate Program

• Major in clinical laboratory sciences (Bachelor of Science)

The Carver College of Medicine partners with the University of Nebraska Medical Center (UNMC) to offer the major in clinical laboratory sciences. The UNMC program is fully accredited by the National Accrediting Agency for Clinical Laboratory Sciences. All graduates are eligible for national certification examinations in clinical laboratory sciences and medical technology.

Undergraduate study in clinical laboratory sciences is guided by the academic rules and procedures outlined under “Undergraduate Programs” in the Carver College of Medicine (p. 1261) section of the Catalog.

Bachelor of Science

The Bachelor of Science with a major in clinical laboratory sciences requires a minimum of 131 s.h., including 86 s.h. of preparatory study and the 45 s.h. professional (clinical) program, which consists of 12 months of didactic and practical instruction and clinical rotations.

Bachelor of Science students who have completed all preparatory study (years one through three) begin the fourth-year professional program in May with an 11-week summer session of lecture and student laboratory courses. In mid-August they begin clinical rotations in the laboratories of University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics, the State Hygienic Laboratory at The University of Iowa, and the Iowa City Veterans Affairs Medical Center. They complete additional University of Nebraska Medical Center course work online during fall and spring. Students complete the program the first week in May.

University of Iowa students who successfully complete the 12-month professional program graduate with a Bachelor of Science from The University of Iowa and a letter of completion from the UNMC clinical laboratory sciences program.

Non-University of Iowa students may enroll in a clinical laboratory sciences certificate-only program if they hold a baccalaureate degree from an accredited institution or are enrolled at an affiliated institution that will grant them a baccalaureate at the completion of the certificate program. Contact the Clinical Laboratory Sciences Program for more information.

FOURTH YEAR (PROFESSIONAL PROGRAM)

The professional program requires the following course work. Students must have completed 86 s.h., including all prerequisites (see “Admission” below), in order to enter the professional program. These courses are open only to Clinical Laboratory Sciences Program students in the fourth year (professional program).

Admission

Admission to the clinical laboratory sciences professional program is competitive; enrollment may be limited. Applications are reviewed yearly beginning October 1 for students planning to begin the program the following May. Applications are accepted until the class is filled.

Applicants must have completed all of the following prerequisites and must have earned at least 86 s.h. of college credit by the beginning of the professional program (fourth year).

- Biological sciences--must include microbiology (with lab), genetics, and immunology 16 s.h.
- Chemistry--must include two semesters of general chemistry, one semester of organic chemistry, and one semester of organic chemistry lab or biochemistry 14 s.h.
- Mathematics through precalculus 3 s.h.
- Statistics 3 s.h.
- English 6 s.h.
- Public speaking/oral communication 3 s.h.

Applicants must have a cumulative grade-point average of at least 2.70 both overall and in science course work. Those who intend to receive a Bachelor of Science from The University of Iowa must fulfill all College of Liberal Arts and Sciences General Education Program (p. 381) requirements before beginning the professional program. University of Iowa students satisfy the English and public speaking prerequisite requirements by fulfilling the General Education Program’s Rhetoric requirement. Students must satisfy any English as a Second Language requirements specified by the University before beginning the professional program.

Students should consult with a Clinical Laboratory Sciences Program advisor as early as possible to plan preclinical studies that meet all requirements.

Expenses

Students are responsible for buying textbooks and paying University of Iowa tuition and student fees. Students who intend to receive a Bachelor of Science in clinical laboratory science from The University of Iowa at the end of the professional program must pay full-time study University tuition and fees. Students in the clinical laboratory sciences certificate-only program pay a program fee, a certificate fee, and student fees. Contact the Clinical Laboratory Sciences Program for more information.

Students must arrange and pay for their own meals and housing, including meals and lodging during the summer session.

The Clinical Laboratory Sciences Program provides laboratory coats for professional program students.

The Department of Dermatology instructs M.D. students and trains dermatology residents in the care of patients with skin diseases. It also provides researchers with an opportunity to develop their skills in dermatology.

M.D. Student Training

The Carver College of Medicine is one of the few medical colleges in the country with a required dermatology rotation for students. Each third-year M.D. student spends two weeks in the clinic and attends around 10 one-hour lectures. Students see a good cross-section of patients, including those receiving primary or tertiary care at University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics and a large number of patients referred from Student Health Service. Additional patients are seen at the nearby Iowa City Veterans Affairs Medical Center.

Varied electives are open to fourth-year M.D. students, including further clinical experience, dermatologic research, and special studies.

Courses

062:001 Clinical Dermatology 2 s.h.
Basic dermatology; lectures, independent study, clinical experience. Requirements: third-year M.D. enrollment.

062:002 Dermatology Elective arr.
Advanced clinical experience, dermatologic surgery, special assignments. Requirements: fourth-year M.D. enrollment.

062:004 Research in Dermatology arr.
General principles of medical research; clinical or laboratory projects; individual study.

062:999 Dermatology off Campus arr.
Arranged by student with departmental approval.
Dietetic Internship

Director
Laurie Kroymann

Web site: http://www.healthcare.uiowa.edu/fns/internship/internship.htm

University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics offers a Dietetic Internship Program that is fully accredited by the American Dietetic Association Commission on Accreditation for Dietetics Education. It qualifies graduates to take the exam for qualification as a Registered Dietitian (RD). Clinical dietitians and food service operation managers of the Department of Food and Nutrition Services at University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics provide the teaching for the program. Graduate courses in the program are administered by the Carver College of Medicine and the College of Public Health. See "Associated Courses" below.

Students generally complete the program with 9 s.h. of graduate credit, which may be applied toward an advanced degree. Approximately half of the program’s graduates go on to complete advanced degree programs, typically a master's degree in health promotion, public health, or business.

University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics awards a certificate to the program’s graduates.

Applicants must meet the admission requirements of the Graduate College; see the Manual of Rules and Regulations of the Graduate College or the Graduate (p. 1117) College section of the Catalog. They also must complete a didactic program in dietetics that has approval of the ADA Commission on Accreditation for Dietetics Education.

Students enter the program in the fall semester. The postmark deadline for applications is February 15.

Associated Courses

For course descriptions, see “Nondepartmental Courses" in the Carver College of Medicine (p. 1261) section of the Catalog and "Courses" in the Epidemiology (p. 1466) section (College of Public Health).

Doctor of Medicine

Web site: http://www.medicine.uiowa.edu

Professional Program

- Doctor of Medicine

The Doctor of Medicine is a professional degree awarded by the Carver College of Medicine. The college is accredited by the Liaison Committee on Medical Education of the American Medical Association and the Association of American Medical Colleges and meets the requirements of all state licensing boards. Its M.D. diploma admits the holder to all privileges granted to graduates of all medical colleges before such boards.

This catalog section provides information about the Doctor of Medicine curriculum, admission to the program, financial support, and academic rules and procedures.

Doctor of Medicine

The Doctor of Medicine is a four-year program that prepares students to practice primary care medicine and to pursue further education and training in specialized areas of medicine. The program admits 148 new students each year.

The M.D. curriculum begins with study of basic medical sciences and foundations of clinical practice and progresses through in-depth clinical course work and clinical clerkships served primarily at University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics, the Iowa City Veterans Affairs Medical Center, and the Des Moines Area Medical Education Consortium. Students also may have opportunities to gain experience in private medical offices and community hospitals.

Graduates may pursue further training in the specialties of family medicine, internal medicine, surgery, and pediatrics at one of 10 University of Iowa-affiliated residency programs in six Iowa cities. They also have access to two transitional-year programs. For more information, contact the Office of Student Affairs and Curriculum and visit Student Resources on the Carver College of Medicine web site.

First and Second Years: Basic Medical Sciences and Clinical Foundations

The first three semesters present a core of sciences basic to the study of medicine and introduce students to the foundations of clinical practice.

FIRST SEMESTER

099:163 Medical Biochemistry presents concepts concerning structures of biological macromolecules, cellular metabolism, elements of human nutrition, molecular biology and genetics, and extra- and intracellular signaling mechanisms. It uses clinical examples to illustrate how alterations in these molecules and pathways can lead to pathological conditions.

060:103 Medical Gross Human Anatomy includes complete dissection of the human body with a regional focus that emphasizes relationships to the living system. Clinically relevant areas of radiologic imaging, surface anatomy, embryology, and clinical correlations complement the dissection experience. Students acquire anatomical knowledge through lectures, small group work, and independent activities.

050:120 Medical Cell Biology presents concepts concerning the structure and function of the cell and its organelles at the molecular level. The course consists of basic science lectures and clinical correlations and relates basic cell biological concepts to the understanding and treatment of human disease.

070:110 Medical Genetics is integrated with ongoing classes in anatomy, biochemistry, and cell biology. It provides an overview of clinical and medical genetics, with particular emphasis on recent changes that affect clinical practice with respect to common diseases that have a genetic component.

050:162 Foundations of Clinical Practice I is the first semester of a sequential four-semester course that introduces clinical skills students need in order to become practicing primary care physicians.

The five major goals for students over the four-semester course are to develop knowledge, attitudes, and skills that are necessary for:

- maturation into a competent and confident clinician;
- maintaining a lifelong process of learning the practice of medicine;
- application of relevant basic science and clinical concepts and other scientific advances to the practice of medicine;
- application of the principles of health promotion and disease prevention to the practice of medicine; and
- increasing awareness of the ethical and social context in which medicine is practiced.

Through large group lectures, small case-based learning groups, and small-group skill building sessions, students focus on communication in the doctor-patient relationship, accessing and managing medical information, and applying basic principles of evidence-based medicine and medical ethics.

SECOND SEMESTER

060:234 Medical Neuroscience is a course for medical students, physical therapy students, and graduate students in the basic medical or related sciences. Through lectures, clinical correlate presentations, laboratories, and small group discussion sessions, the course emphasizes the interdisciplinary and integrated study of the human central nervous system. Its faculty is drawn from basic science and clinical departments.

148:251 Principles of Medical Immunology is offered by the interdisciplinary Immunology Program. Its goals are to teach basic components and mechanisms of the immune response as well as medical principles of normal and abnormal immunity. The course consists of lectures by Immunology Program faculty and small group case analysis sessions.

050:240 Human Organ Systems is an interdepartmental course that presents the normal structure (histology) and function (physiology) of human organ systems in a coordinated and integrated organ systems approach. The course is designed to emphasize structure/function relationships by integrating the microscopic anatomic and physiologic function of normal human organ systems. The course’s faculty includes members of basic science departments and clinical departments.

050:163 Foundations of Clinical Practice II is the second semester of a sequential, four-semester course that introduces clinical skills students need in order to become practicing primary care physicians (see 050:162 Foundations of Clinical Practice I under "First Semester" above for overall course goals). In this semester, students continue to work toward course goals through small case-based learning groups, large-group lectures, and small-group skill acquisition sessions. They also are introduced to clinical medicine in a shadowing experience with health care providers. Principles of doctor-patient communication are reinforced and performance of the components of the general physical examination are taught and practiced. Other topics include multiculturalism, preventive medicine, the social context of medicine, and health across the lifespan.

THIRD SEMESTER

071:105 Pharmacology for Health Sciences: Medical introduces basic principles of drug action and drug disposition through discussion of mechanisms of action, therapeutic uses, and side effects for a wide variety of commonly used medications. Lectures integrate knowledge from related scientific disciplines, including biochemistry, microbiology, pathology, and physiology. Students acquire knowledge of rationale and basis for appropriate selection of medications in clinical situations and an understanding of the basis for common drug-drug interactions and adverse drug reactions.

061:103 Principles of Infectious Diseases presents a comprehensive approach to the microbiology of infectious diseases, covering infectious agents at both the organismic and molecular levels. The molecular aspects of pathogenesis are presented as the basis for present and future preventive and therapeutic measures. The laboratory includes hands-on experiments ranging from principles of aseptic technique to the most modern molecular aspects of diagnostic microbiology.

069:205 Medical Pathology I starts with general principles of disease: cell injury, inflammation, immune mechanisms, neoplasia, and hemodynamic disorders, followed by etiology, pathogenesis, epidemiology, and major clinical and morphologic manifestations of disease by organ systems. The course combines lecture information, small group analytic skills, and observation of current laboratory procedures.

050:164 Foundations of Clinical Practice III is the third semester of a sequential, four-semester course that introduces clinical skills students need in order to become practicing primary care physicians (see 050:162 Foundations of Clinical Practice I under "First Semester" above for overall course goals). Foundations of Clinical Practice III introduces students to the abnormal structure and function of the human body and to a broader understanding of the practice of medicine in a social context. Students integrate and apply principles of clinical history taking, physical exam skills, and lecture material by working with simulated and real patients. Practicing clinicians deliver lectures on topics including common complaints of childhood through old age as well as human sexuality. Small-group learning and clinical skills activities take place throughout the semester.

Some elective courses are available to students during the first and second years. These normally carry 1 or 2 s.h. of credit. Topics include areas not specifically covered in the regular curriculum and areas related to medical practice and the role of the physician. Courses vary from year to year, but typical subject areas are global health issues, U.S. health care systems, and community health outreach.
FOURTH SEMESTER

069:206 Medical Pathology II is a continuation of 069:205 Medical Pathology I.

050:183 Healthcare Ethics, Law, and Policy introduces M.D. and physician assistant students to health care ethics, law, and policy. Students learn to appreciate the inseparable relationship between medicine and ethics, recognize key ethical obligations and challenges common in medical practice, identify sources of ethical value commonly used in ethical reasoning, and apply a systematic approach to clinical ethical reasoning. They learn fundamental legal doctrines and theories that relate to business and professional aspects of the law pertaining to health care delivery. They also develop an understanding of the relationship and contrasts between ethics and law in medical practice, and they gain familiarity with the ways in which health policy influences medical practice. Through small group discussions about ethical challenges in patient care, they learn to interact respectfully with peers and faculty when discussing controversial issues.

050:165 Foundations of Clinical Practice IV is the final course in the foundation series. The fourth semester is devoted primarily to this major interdisciplinary course, which includes participation by a large proportion of the faculty and is vital in providing students with the tools for a lifetime of patient care. Mornings are devoted to intensive review of the diagnostic and therapeutic aspects of organ-system-based clinical medicine. The reviews are presented by teams of specialty and subspecialty clinicians. Students spend afternoons acquiring and practicing the clinician’s skills in history taking and physical examination and in learning specialized exams. Small group learning and clinical case conferences take place throughout. Each student is evaluated individually during the semester. Evaluations include the student’s approach to the patient, accuracy of history and physical examination, precision in communicating gathered data, ability to synthesize available data into a realistic differential diagnosis, and ability to apply the process of problem-based learning to the understanding of patient-based problems. Cognitive knowledge of topics covered in the morning lecture and small group sessions is assessed through computer-based multiple-choice examinations. Students who need further work receive guidance and assistance.

All M.D. students are required to pass Step 1 of the United States Medical Licensing Examination before they may be promoted to the third year of the curriculum.

Third and Fourth Years: Clinical Training

The clinical courses take place during the last two years of the medical curriculum. In order to qualify for graduation with the M.D., students must complete satisfactorily a total of 81 weeks of courses during the two clinical years: 69 weeks of required courses and 12 weeks of electives. Course distribution is 49 weeks in the first clinical year and 32 weeks in the second.

Clinical Beginnings (050:170), a required, 1 s.h. course, follows the first two years and precedes the start of clinical clerkships in the third year. Clinical Beginnings helps students make the transition between the first and the second years of the curriculum by emphasizing the “four Cs”: Clinical reasoning and reflection; the core Competencies (patient care, medical knowledge, practice-based learning and improvement, interpersonal and communications skills, professionalism, and systems-based practice); interdisciplinary Collaboration and teamwork; and Critical appraisal of the literature and lifelong learning.

The required clerkships are as follows.

Seven core clerkships: internal medicine, obstetrics and gynecology, pediatrics, surgery, outpatient internal medicine, community-based primary care, and family practice preceptorship; each course includes a mix of inpatient and outpatient activities, introduces the student to a specific discipline or to the practice of medicine in the community, and presents the opportunity to develop and practice clinical skills.

Required subspecialty clerkships: anesthesia, dermatology, neurology, ophthalmology, orthopaedics, otolaryngology, psychiatry, radiology, and urology, and courses in laboratory medicine and electrocardiography.

Advanced clerkships: subinternship, in which the student assumes responsibility for managing patients in a variety of approved medical disciplines, supervised by a senior resident and a faculty physician; emergency room or intensive care rotation.

Three electives: electives chosen from clerkships listed in the course book distributed by the Carver College of Medicine.

FIRST CLINICAL YEAR COURSE REQUIREMENTS

All medical students must complete satisfactorily 49 weeks of courses, including 050:170 Clinical Beginnings (one week), 40 weeks of core clerkships, and 8 weeks of courses chosen from the required subspecialty clerkships.
SECOND CLINICAL YEAR COURSE REQUIREMENTS

All medical students must complete satisfactorily 32 weeks of clerkships chosen from those not completed in the first clinical year, including the required subspecialty clerkships and electives.

Primary venues for clinical training of medical students include University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics, the Iowa City Veterans Affairs Medical Center, and the Des Moines Area Medical Education Consortium. Students also participate in the family practice preceptorship and the community-based primary care clerkship, which are off-campus rotations. Other courses may be assigned to off-campus sites, as well.

Admission

The Carver College of Medicine participates in the American Medical College Application Service (AMCAS), a nonprofit centralized application processing service for applicants to U.S. medical schools. AMCAS applications are available for completion in May of the year preceding the beginning of the class for which application is being made. Prospective students are urged to apply as early as possible. The deadline for AMCAS submission is November 1.

Secondary applications are forwarded to applicants whose AMCAS applications pass a review conducted by the college. A $60 fee must accompany the secondary application from all applicants.

Admitted applicants must have an official transcript from each college they have attended sent to the University’s Office of Admissions.

Technical Standards for Admission and Retention

The Carver College of Medicine seeks students who will serve the needs of society best, and it strives to graduate skilled and effective physicians. To achieve these goals, it applies the following principles and technical standards to candidates for admission and to continuing students.

PRINCIPLES

Technical standards refer to criteria that go beyond academic requirements for admission and are essential to meeting the academic requirements of the M.D. program.

Applicants to the Carver College of Medicine and students continuing in the college, with or without disabilities, are expected to meet the same requirements.

Matriculation and continuation in the college assume a certain level of cognitive and technical skill. Medical students with disabilities are held to the same fundamental standards as their nondisabled peers. Although not all students should be expected to gain the same level of proficiency with all technical skills, some skills are so essential that mastery must be achieved, with the assistance of reasonable accommodations where necessary.

Reasonable accommodations are provided to assist in learning, performing, and satisfying the technical standards.

Every reasonable attempt is made to facilitate the progress of students, providing that such efforts do not compromise collegiate standards or interfere with the rights of other students and patients.

TECHNICAL STANDARDS

Applicants for admission to the Carver College of Medicine and continuing students must possess the capability to complete the entire medical curriculum and be granted the degree. To this end, they must complete all courses in the curriculum successfully. In order to acquire the knowledge and skills to function in a broad variety of clinical situations and to provide a wide spectrum of patient care, M.D. students must have abilities and skills in six areas, including observation; communication; motor skills; intellectual, conceptual, integrative, and quantitative abilities; behavioral and social attributes; and cultural competence.

Technological compensation can be made for some disabilities in certain areas, but each student must meet the essential technical standards in such a way that he or she is able to perform in a reasonably independent manner. The use of a trained intermediary is not acceptable in many clinical situations, because it implies that the student’s judgment must be mediated by someone else’s power of selection and observation.

Observation: Students must have the functional ability to observe demonstrations and experiments in the basic sciences and must have sufficient use of the senses necessary to perform a physical examination.

Communication: Students must be able to relate reasonably to patients and establish sensitive, professional relationships with patients, colleagues, and staff. They are expected to communicate the results of the history and examination to the patient and to their colleagues with accuracy, clarity, and efficiency.

Motor: Students are expected to participate in basic diagnostic and therapeutic maneuvers and procedures. Those who cannot perform these activities independently should be able to understand and direct the methodology involved in such activities.

Intellectual, conceptual, integrative, and quantitative abilities: Students must be able to learn to analyze, synthesize, solve problems, and reach reasonable diagnostic and therapeutic judgments. Students are expected to be able to display good judgment in the assessment and treatment of patients. They must be able to learn to respond with prompt and appropriate action in emergency situations.

Behavioral and social attributes: Students are expected to be able to accept criticism and respond with appropriate modification of their behavior. Students also are expected to possess the perseverance, diligence, and consistency necessary to complete the M.D. curriculum and enter the independent practice of medicine in a reasonable period of time. They must demonstrate professional and ethical demeanor and behavior in all dealings with peers, faculty, staff, and patients.

Cultural Competence: Medical students must be able to communicate with and care for persons whose culture, sexual orientation, or religious beliefs are different from their own. They must be able to perform a complete history and physical exam on any patient regardless of the student’s or the patient’s race, religion, ethnicity, socioeconomic status, gender, age, or sexual preference. Similarly, students must be able to interact professionally with colleagues and other health care professionals without regard to race, religion, ethnicity, socioeconomic status, gender, age, or sexual preference.

Applicants who may not meet these standards are encouraged to contact the college’s admissions office.

Admission Requirements

Applicants for admission to the Carver College of Medicine must have a baccalaureate degree; or they must be enrolled in a baccalaureate degree program, have earned at least 94 s.h. of credit or the equivalent, and expect to receive their degree before enrolling in the Carver College of Medicine. They must have earned college credit in the following courses.

Physics: a complete introductory course (one year), including lab instruction.

Mathematics: college algebra and trigonometry; applicants who completed college algebra and trigonometry in high school must take a course in advanced college mathematics or in statistics.

Chemistry: a minimum of one complete introductory course in organic chemistry (one year), ordinarily following a complete introductory course in modern general chemical principles, each with the appropriate laboratories.

Biological sciences: a complete introductory course in the principles of biology, or zoology and botany (one year), each with the appropriate laboratories; and an advanced biology course (one semester or quarter); recommended advanced biology courses include biochemistry, molecular and cell biology, human physiology, genetics, and microbiology.

English: two courses (including composition and literature); the requirement may be waived if the applicant’s school has an integrated writing requirement in courses across its curriculum.

Social and behavioral sciences, and humanities: four courses; because writing skills are important in the study and practice of medicine, prospective applicants are encouraged to fulfill this requirement with courses that include a writing component; recommended courses include behavioral psychology, foreign language, and other courses that encourage appreciation for diversity and cultural competency.

Fulfillment of these requirements does not guarantee admission to the Carver College of Medicine. The college’s admissions committee selects applicants who appear to be best qualified to study and practice medicine.

Applicants must have a cumulative g.p.a. of at least 2.50 for all college work. Applicants should have taken the required science courses for a grade rather than electing pass/fail grading.

Preference is given to Iowa residents with high scholastic standing. Consideration also is given to outstanding nonresidents.

Applicants are required to take the Medical College Admission Test (MCAT) no earlier than five years before and no later than September of the year of application. To register for the test, see “Reserving a Seat” on the Medical College Admission Test web site.

Personal interviews are part of the admission process. Candidates invited for an interview are contacted by the admissions committee.

An external criminal background check is performed for all admitted students at the time of admission.
Applicants accepted on or before February 15 must submit an advance payment of $50 by March 1. Applicants accepted after February 15 must submit the $50 payment within two weeks after they receive notification of acceptance. The advance payment is credited toward tuition and fees.

All students who enter the Carver College of Medicine are required to comply with the pre-entrance and annual health screening program developed by the University’s Student Health Service in cooperation with University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics; see Forms and Reports on the Student Health Service web site.

All registered Carver College of Medicine students are required to maintain health insurance (or an equivalent care plan) that satisfies minimum standards of coverage. Insurance coverage must be maintained continuously throughout each year of attendance at The University of Iowa.

Financial Support

The Carver College of Medicine’s philosophy is that no student should be denied a medical education due to a lack of financial resources. Admissions decisions at the Carver College of Medicine are made without consideration of financial need. Therefore, the Carver College of Medicine financial aid staff actively seeks financial aid sources so every student interested in a medical education can finance that education.

Financial assistance is provided by the Carver College of Medicine primarily on the basis of demonstrated financial need. Although a limited number of collegiate or institutional grants are available for the most economically disadvantaged students, most aid is in the form of loans. Examples of federal loan programs are the Federal Direct Stafford/Ford Student Loan, the Federal Direct Unsubsidized Stafford/Ford Student Loan, the Federal Perkins Loan, and the Primary Care Loan (PCL). Students also may qualify for Federal Direct Grad PLUS Loans or private loans to supplement their financial aid package.

In addition, the college supports scholarship and loan programs through permanent endowments and/or contributions from alumni and friends of the Carver College of Medicine. These funds are administered by the college’s financial aid office and are awarded as a part of a student’s total financial aid package. Funds to support short-term emergency loans are available for students with immediate financial need.

A small number of Dean’s Scholarships are awarded by the college’s admissions office to highly qualified candidates on the basis of their academic excellence, leadership abilities, and their potential to enrich the college. Dean’s Scholarships are included in the recipient’s overall financial aid package.

To learn more about financial aid, contact the Carver College of Medicine Office of Student Affairs and Curriculum financial services department.

Academic Rules and Procedures

Student Promotion

The Carver College of Medicine has established promotion policies and procedures to ensure that each of its graduates has adequate skills, knowledge, judgment, ethical standards and personal integrity to assume the responsibilities of a medical doctor. The student promotions committee, made up of seven faculty members and two students, performs these duties with the cooperation, advice, and judgment of course directors, faculty members, students, and administrators.

The committee recommends specific actions to be taken when a student’s skills, knowledge, judgment, or ethical behavior is in any way considered consistently marginal or unsatisfactory. Possible recommendations include dismissal of the student from the college; suspension for a specified period of time; requiring the student to repeat all or any part of the curriculum on academic probation; and allowing the student to continue on academic probation with a full or partial course load. The committee’s recommendations are forwarded for action to the executive dean of the Carver College of Medicine.

Medical students have the right to appeal a promotion decision. They must submit the appeal in writing to the Carver College of Medicine’s executive dean within five days of notification of the decision. Appeals are considered by the Appeals Committee, made up of faculty representatives of the Medical Council and the Executive Committee, a medical student, a lay member, and the associate dean for student affairs (ex officio). Students may request an opportunity to appear before the Appeals Committee to make a statement and answer questions. The committee then makes its recommendation to the college’s dean, who is the final authority.

Specific information about student promotion policies and procedures is available from the Office of Student Affairs and Curriculum and is online in the Student Handbook.
Leaves of Absence, Withdrawal, Reinstatement

The Carver College of Medicine has established policies regarding leaves of absence, dropping courses, withdrawal from the college, and reinstatement to the college. Information about each of these policies is available at the college’s Office of Student Affairs and Curriculum and is published annually in the Student Handbook.

Disputes and Complaints

Student complaints concerning actions of faculty members or departments are pursued first through mechanisms established in the Carver College of Medicine. These procedures allow the greatest flexibility for all concerned in resolving a conflict. They are intended for situations such as grading disputes, alleged academic dishonesty, alleged dishonesty during a clinical rotation, alleged unethical or unprofessional conduct, and perceived discrimination or harassment.

Complaints regarding sexual harassment are handled confidentially in accordance with University policy and procedures; see the University’s Policy on Sexual Harassment.

For information about the established informal mechanisms, contact the Office of Student Affairs and Curriculum or see the Student Handbook.

The Department of Emergency Medicine prepares new physicians to recognize and treat a variety of urgent and emergent conditions. The program fosters basic science and clinical research relevant to emergency medicine and is dedicated to the education and training of Emergency Medical Services (EMS) personnel through the Emergency Medical Services Learning Resources Center (EMSLRC).

M.D. Student Training

Elective rotations for Doctor of Medicine students are available at University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics and at several other sites throughout Iowa, including St. Luke’s Hospital, Cedar Rapids; Great River Medical Center, Burlington; Covenant Medical Center, Waterloo; Broadlawns Medical Center, Des Moines; and Mercy Medical Center, Sioux City. Students also may arrange an off-service elective independently with established residency programs throughout the United States.

The program offers an annual introductory month to emergency medicine; advanced life support; and Wilderness Medicine, a rotation that includes a trip to wilderness areas such as Colorado Rockies, Lake Macbride, and the Ozarks.

Residency Program

The emergency medicine faculty directs the Iowa Emergency Medicine Residency, Iowa’s only emergency medicine residency. The residency is a three-year program that prepares residents for careers in diverse areas of emergency medicine, from rural practice to academics. The program emphasizes critical care training and rotations in a wide variety of specialties. Part of the clinical component is spent at St. Luke’s Hospital, Cedar Rapids.

Resources

The Emergency Department, located on the first floor of Roy Carver Pavilion, is a Level I Adult and Pediatric Trauma Center. It serves as a referral center for communities across Iowa.

Courses

184:220 Emergency Medicine: St. Luke’s, Cedar Rapids 4 s.h.
Preceptorship with full-time emergency department physicians; clinical shifts, case conferences, simulations, exams. Requirements: completion of M.D. third year.

184:221 Emergency Medicine UIHC arr.
Preceptorship with residents and faculty; emphasis on principles of acute medicine; clinical shifts, case conferences, simulations, exams. Requirements: completion of surgery, pediatrics, and internal medicine or ambulatory practice module.

184:222 Emergency Medicine off Campus arr.
Preceptorship with residents and faculty; emphasis on principles of acute medicine; Liaison Committee on Medical Education (LCME) accredited off-campus site. Requirements: completion of M.D. third year and approval from UIHC Emergency Medicine clerkship director.

184:223 Rural Emergency Medicine at Burlington, Iowa 4 s.h.
In-depth clinical experience in a busy rural hospital emergency department under supervision of residency-trained emergency physicians; lectures, skill labs, projects. Requirements: completion of M.D. third year.
184:224 Introduction to Advanced Life Support Skills
4 s.h.
Experience managing acute threats to life, including trauma, respiratory failure, poisoning, sepsis, stupor/coma, and acute MI, using ACLS and PALS courses and clinical manikin work with EMS staff. Requirements: completion of M.D. third year.

184:225 Wilderness Medicine
4 s.h.
Didactic and scenario training in physiology, diagnosis, and emergency treatment of heat- and cold-related illnesses, high altitude disorders, wilderness trauma, envenomations, and immersion injuries. Taught in wilderness areas. Requirements: completion of M.D. third year.

184:226 Transition to Residency
2 s.h.
Intensive program providing basic training in life support skills, experience in procedures common to the inpatient hospital environment, and practice with simulated critical care scenarios; lectures, small group discussions, procedure labs, high-fidelity simulations, and self-directed online learning; students become certified in Advanced Cardiac Life Support (ACLS). Requirements: completion of surgery, pediatrics, and internal medicine or ambulatory practice module.

184:402 Emergency Medicine Des Moines
4 s.h.
Participation in acute emergency care, management of acute illnesses, follow-up care when possible; Broadlawns Hospital, Des Moines. Requirements: completion of surgery, pediatrics, and internal medicine or ambulatory practice module.

184:425 Emergency Medicine Waterloo
4 s.h.
Participation in acute emergency care, management of acute illnesses, follow-up care when possible; Covenant Medical Center, Waterloo. Requirements: completion of M.D. third year.

184:430 Emergency Medicine Sioux City
4 s.h.
Experience with a routine cross section of emergency problems in a regional trauma center and with functions of area resource hospitals (St. Luke’s Medical Center, Mercy Medical Center); option to accompany ambulance crews.

184:998 Emergency Medicine on Campus
arr.
Clinical research experience with a mentor in the Emergency Treatment Center and the Department of Emergency Medicine; principles of design, methodology, basic statistics.

M.D. Student Training

The Department of Family Medicine trains primary care physicians. The department offers course work that is included throughout the four-year M.D. program. Twenty-one elective senior rotations give students opportunities for exposure to various Iowa communities through work in affiliated hospitals or connected facilities, in the department’s model office on the University of Iowa campus, and in preceptorships with selected family physicians throughout the state. There also is the opportunity for independent study during the fourth year.

Residency Program

Family Practice Residency

The Department of Family Medicine directs a three-year residency program whose graduates are eligible for certification by the American Board of Family Medicine. The residency program trains physicians to provide continuous and comprehensive medical care to patients and their families. Residents are educated in all areas of family medicine—adult medicine, maternal and child health, behavioral science, surgical specialties, and community medicine. Training emphasizes the value of wellness and preventive medicine as well as curative medicine.

The program is organized as a progressive educational experience. It consists of formal teaching and clinical experiences on assigned rotations, structured conferences, and patient care in the Family Care Center. As residents develop clinical skills, medical judgment, and competence, their patient responsibilities increase. Some patients at the Family Care Center are assigned to residents, who provide medical care under faculty supervision. Each resident is responsible for his or her patients for the duration of the residency program.

Residents also learn the principles of practice management, including organizational and administrative decision making, patient record and bookkeeping procedures, and chart auditing methodologies.

Residents are expected to take responsibility for their learning environment, to avail themselves of the department’s diverse resources, and to collaborate with the faculty in order to have the best possible learning experience.

Family Medicine-Psychiatry Residency

The Department of Family Medicine and the Department of Psychiatry cosponsor the combined Family Medicine–Psychiatry Residency program. The program’s residents acquire broad-based training in both disciplines, including focused training in geriatrics and geriatric psychiatry, substance and alcohol abuse, diagnosis and treatment of depression, delirium, eating disorders, panic disorders, and neurotic and somatizing behavior. Graduates are eligible for certification by the American Board of Family Medicine and the American Board of Psychiatry and Neurology.

Facilities

The Department of Family Medicine is located on the University of Iowa health sciences campus. Faculty offices are close to the Family Care Center, where patients are seen by appointment. The department also has community-based clinics in southeast Iowa City and North Liberty, Iowa, and a rural satellite office located in Lone Tree, Iowa.

---

Courses

115:203 Medical Education Community Orientation

Experience in a local health care delivery system away from the University setting, between first and second year of M.D. program.

115:300 Preceptorship in Family Medicine

One-on-one experience with a practicing physician in his or her office; exposure to illnesses, conditions often seen in primary care; realistic background for evaluation of family medicine as a career alternative.

115:401 Family Medicine Clerkship, Broadlawns Hospital, Des Moines Family Health Center

Clinical experience in inpatient and outpatient care.

115:403 Lone Tree Family Medicine Clerkship

Experience providing patient care in a rural setting; continuity of care for patients of all ages. Requirements: fourth-year M.D. enrollment.

115:404 Advanced Preceptorship in Family Medicine

Experience in community practice of family medicine.

115:405 Subinternship in Family Medicine, University of Iowa

Inpatient aspects of family medicine’s key components; experience on the family medicine inpatient service.

115:406 Subinternship in Family Medicine, Iowa Lutheran

115:407 Family Medicine, Iowa Lutheran

Requirements: fourth-year M.D. enrollment.
115:408 U of I Family Medicine Clerkship
Work with family practice residents and staff in day-to-day delivery of primary medical care at Family Practice Center; experience in the Family Stress Clinic observing family-centered counseling; nursing home visits, work with departmental social worker and sports medicine specialist.

115:409 Family Medicine, Mason City
Work with family physicians on staff at Mercy or other affiliated community hospitals; management of all patients admitted by the family physicians, participation in care rendered by consultants; primary care experience in family practice office.

115:410 Independent Studies
Work with departmental researcher on investigation in family medicine, community medicine, health care delivery, health maintenance, and other areas.

115:411 Rural Preceptorship in Family Medicine

115:415 Subinternship in Family Medicine--Cedar Rapids
Experience as a junior resident in all areas of inpatient family medicine, including maternity care, child and adolescent health, adult medicine.

115:416 Clerkship in Family Medicine--Cedar Rapids
Experience as a junior resident in all areas of family medicine, including maternity care, child and adolescent health, adult medicine.

115:417 Continuity of Care--Family Medicine
Longitudinal continuity of care experience for fourth-year M.D. students in an outpatient family medicine setting.

115:419 Family Medicine Clerkship, Davenport
Assignment to problems commonly seen in family practice office; supervision by residents and faculty for history and physical evaluation and diagnostic workups and treatment of each specific problem; exposure to acutely ill patients in services of medicine, surgery, obstetrics, pediatrics.

115:420 Family Medicine Clerkship, Sioux City
Methods common in family practice medicine; participation in care of patients seen by family practice physicians and residents.

115:423 Subinternship in Family Medicine, Waterloo
Experience working as a member of family practice inpatient team at Allen Memorial Hospital and Covenant Medical Center, following patients from admission through discharge.

115:424 Family Medicine Clerkship, Waterloo
Rotation at the Northeast Iowa Family Practice Center; work with patients from outpatient care through hospitalization; basic concepts of family practice, team concept in medical care.

115:426 Geriatrics Elective
Experience in monitoring and evaluating health and functional status of patients age 65 and older in the UI Geriatric Assessment Clinic and community settings. Same as 078:800.

115:427 Family Medicine Geriatrics, Davenport
Geriatric, palliative, and end-of-life care issues; assessment of competency in evaluation and management of patients; interdisciplinary nature of geriatric and palliative care.

115:429 Subinternship in Family Practice, Sioux City
Experience as a junior resident in all areas of family medicine. Requirements: fourth-year M.D. enrollment.
115:430 Subinternship in Family Medicine, Davenport
4 s.h.
Experience in inpatient family medicine; assessing and managing hospitalized patients, evaluating and treating patients in the emergency room, participating in call coverage with family medicine residents.

115:431 Primary Care Sports Medicine
4 s.h.
Comprehensive, diverse, and educational experience in the field of sports medicine; clinical competence to diagnose and manage medical illnesses and injuries related to sports and exercise in varied patients, recreational and organized athletes, and teams. Requirements: medical student.

115:999 Family Medicine off Campus

Assistant professors
Paloma Giangrande, Apollina Goel, Yusuf Menda

Adjunct assistant professors
Nukhet Aykin-Burns, Andrian L. Burnett, Melissa Fath, Michael L. McCormick, Michael Schultz, Damon C. Shutt, Melissa Laitee Teoh

Graduate degrees: M.S., Ph.D. in Free Radical and Radiation Biology

Web site: http://www.uiowa.edu/~frrbp/

The Free Radical and Radiation Biology Program provides in-depth training and research experience in the physical, chemical, and biological effects of radiation. It also focuses on free radical biology. Free radicals, which are generated in great number by radiation, play a major role in the interaction of radiation with biological systems. Free radicals are of great interest to basic researchers and clinicians because of their role in a variety of diseases and pathological states, including aging and cancer. The program stresses the importance of all of these areas to scientific research, clinical medicine, and public health.

Undergraduate Education

Three courses offered by the Free Radical and Radiation Biology Program are open to University of Iowa undergraduate students: 077:103 Radiation Biology, 077:107 Special Topics: Advanced Undergraduates, and 077:108 Special Topics: Advanced Undergraduates. Students looking for an overview of the biological effects of radiation, including the role of free radicals, will find 077:103 Radiation Biology especially appropriate. All three courses are appropriate for students who plan to enter medicine, nuclear medicine technology, environmental health, or related programs.

Graduate Programs

- Master of Science in free radical and radiation biology
- Doctor of Philosophy in free radical and radiation biology

The Carver College of Medicine administers graduate programs in free radical and radiation biology; graduate degrees are granted through the Graduate College. See Carver College of Medicine (p. 1261) and Graduate (p. 1117) College in the Catalog for general information about study in medicine and graduate study at the University.

Master of Science, Doctor of Philosophy

The Master of Science in free radical and radiation biology requires a minimum of 30 s.h. of graduate credit; the Doctor of Philosophy requires a minimum of 72 s.h. of graduate credit.

The M.S. and Ph.D. programs are open to graduate students with a background in physics, chemistry, mathematics, biology, health sciences, veterinary medicine, or engineering.

After completing the introductory course 077:103 Radiation Biology, students typically concentrate on a particular aspect of the field. Some students elect to focus on radiation biology, while others choose to emphasize free radical biology.

In addition to formal lectures and some structured laboratory exercises, plans of study for free radical and radiation biology students involve small-group conferences, discussions, and seminars. Students are encouraged to spend at least one semester as a teaching assistant, for which no registration is required and no academic credit is given.

Many of the department’s graduate students elect to take 074:220 Radiation Safety and Radiobiology, a Department of Radiology course that covers safe operation of radiation-producing equipment and handling of radioactive materials, regulations and regulatory agencies, formulas and techniques in radiation protection programs, radiation protection, and other topics.
Postgraduate Training

Postdoctoral training is available by arrangement with the program’s director and individual faculty members. Contact the Free Radical and Radiation Biology Program.

Financial Support

Graduate students are supported as graduate assistants from funds available through research grants and contracts or from departmental funds. Individual postdoctoral awards also may be available; the candidate and his or her faculty sponsor apply for them jointly.

Facilities

The Free Radical and Radiation Biology Program has a 300 kVp orthovoltage X-ray generator and other radiation sources, including a kilo-Curie Cs-137 irradiator. Students and staff also have access to other radiation sources, such as the Co-60 gamma source and linear accelerators in the Department of Radiation Oncology.

The program has a number of radiation detectors and counters, including liquid scintillation counters. It also has ultraviolet/visible spectrophotometers; various types of equipment for densitometry, chromatography, and electrophoresis; molecular biology equipment, including thermal cyclers; an automatic cell counter and particle sizer; tissue culture facilities; Typhoon Phosphoimager; HPLC; Electron Spin Resonance Spectrometers; and nitric oxide analyzers.

Courses

077:103 Radiation Biology 4 s.h.
Characteristics and biological effects of ionizing radiations. Offered fall semesters.

077:107 Special Topics: Advanced Undergraduates arr.
Readings and/or laboratory experience. Offered fall semesters.

077:108 Special Topics: Advanced Undergraduates arr.
Readings and/or laboratory experience. Offered spring semesters.

077:207 Seminar: Free Radical and Radiation Biology 1 s.h.
Offered fall semesters.

077:211 Medical Physics 4 s.h.
Characteristics of X-ray machines, nuclear accelerators, teletherapy devices; properties of X-rays and gamma rays, their interaction with matter; radiation exposure, depth dose measurements; radiation therapy. Offered spring semesters of even years. Requirements: 8 s.h. of physics. Same as 029:240.

077:222 Free Radicals in Biology and Medicine 4 s.h.
Chemistry of free radicals, antioxidants; antioxidant enzymes--their structure, function, regulation; targets of free radicals--lipids, proteins, DNA; free radicals in health and disease. Offered spring semesters of odd years. Prerequisites: 004:121 or 099:120.

077:288 Molecular and Cellular Biology of Cancer 3 s.h.
Fundamental aspects of oncology at the cellular and molecular levels; mechanisms of cancer initiation and progression, oncogene action, DNA damage and repair, carcinogenesis by radiation, chemicals, viruses; tumor immunology, anticancer therapies. Offered spring semesters of odd years. Requirements: strong basic science background. Same as 069:288.

077:305 Research: Free Radical and Radiation Biology arr.

077:307 Research: Special Topics arr.

077:308 Research: Special Topics arr.

077:545 Topics in Free Radical Biology and Medicine 1 s.h.
New literature in area of free radicals. Offered fall semesters.
077:547 Topics in Radiation and Cancer Biology
1 s.h.
Emerging concepts in the biological effects of radiation and cancer biology; current topics in journal club format. Offered fall semesters.

Internal medicine is concerned with the diagnosis, prevention, and treatment of diseases of adults. The Department of Internal Medicine’s educational, patient care, and research activities cover all facets of the discipline, including general internal medicine and primary care as well as the specialized areas of allergy and immunology, cardiology, clinical pharmacology, endocrinology and metabolism, gastroenterology and hepatology, hematology, oncology, blood and marrow transplant, infectious diseases, nephrology, pulmonary, critical care, occupational medicine, and rheumatology.

The department is committed to the complete spectrum of medical education, from didactic and clinical education of M.D. students to resident and fellowship training.

M.D. Student Training

Department of Internal Medicine faculty members bear a major share of teaching first- and second-year M.D. students. In the first year, faculty members participate in 050:120 Medical Cell Biology, 050:240 Human Organ Systems, and 148:251 Principles of Medical Immunology. In the second year, they participate in 071:105 Pharmacology for Health Sciences: Medical and 061:103 Principles of Infectious Diseases. They are key participants in 050:162 Foundations of Clinical Practice I, 050:163 Foundations of Clinical Practice II, 050:164 Foundations of Clinical Practice III, and 050:165 Foundations of Clinical Practice IV ICD.

In the third year, the department’s faculty members teach students for six focus weeks in 078:101 Inpatient Internal Medicine and for four weeks in 078:102 Outpatient Internal Medicine at University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics, the Iowa City Veterans Affairs Medical Center, or hospitals of the Des Moines Area Medical Education Consortium. M.D. students actively participate as members of an inpatient ward team in 078:101 Inpatient Internal Medicine and in the evaluation and management of patients at outpatient internal medicine clinics in 078:102 Outpatient Internal Medicine.

In the fourth year, M.D. students may select a clinical experience to fit their own career goals from courses offered in general medicine, subspecialties, intensive care, and a subinternship program.

Residency Program, Postgraduate Work

The department offers a three-year residency training program in internal medicine. In addition, most of the department’s specialty divisions offer two- and three-year clinical and research fellowships, in which fellows develop special knowledge and skills relevant to their specialties. Fellows who hold doctoral degrees may be accepted to programs whose major focus is laboratory research.

Facilities

Teaching in the Department of Internal Medicine takes place in the medical services and laboratories of University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics and the Iowa City Veterans Affairs Medical Center, and in Des Moines at the Veterans Affairs Central Iowa Health Care System and Iowa Methodist Medical Center.

Courses

078:101 Inpatient Internal Medicine

Development of knowledge, diagnostic and management skills vital to care of hospitalized patients; clinical responsibilities, educational conferences, independent study.

078:102 Outpatient Internal Medicine

Development of knowledge, diagnostic and management skills in the outpatient clinical setting; clinical activities, discussion of problems, independent study.

078:202 Subinternship in Internal Medicine

Student responsibility for evaluating, treating, and following patients admitted to inpatient general medicine services. Requirements: fourth-year M.D. enrollment.

078:204 Community-Based General Internal Medicine

Primary care internal medicine in a community setting. Requirements: fourth-year M.D. enrollment.

078:205 Continuity of Care in Outpatient Internal Medicine

Experience with longitudinal continuity of care for patients in the outpatient setting; clinical and didactic exposure to broad spectrum of general internal medicine problems. Requirements: fourth-year M.D. enrollment.

078:210 Alternative and Complementary Medicine

Requirements: (for 046:105) P4 standing. Same as 046:105, 096:182.

078:217 Integrated Topics in Infectious Diseases

Questions in host-parasite interactions; monthly case study followed by journals club discussions.

078:218 Critical Care Rotation, IMMC, ICU, DM

Subinternship on medical critical care team, with daily rounds, teaching. Requirements: fourth-year M.D. enrollment.

078:219 Subinternship in Internal Medicine at VAMC, Des Moines

Rotation at the Veterans Affairs Central Iowa Health Care System; subinternship on general internal medicine ward. Requirements: fourth-year M.D. enrollment.

078:220 Subinternship in General Internal Medicine and ICU, Des Moines

Four-week rotation at Des Moines Medical Education Consortium; experience as a subintern in general internal medicine and the ICU. Requirements: fourth-year M.D. enrollment.
078:221 Public Health Medicine
Participation in ongoing projects related to public health issues of acute disease; training and career opportunities in public health practice.

078:225 General Medicine Consult Service, IMMC
Principles of consultative medicine provided by general internists to non-internal medicine patients; how to assess perioperative risk for patients evaluated before surgery.

078:250 Clinical Allergy Immunology
Pathogenesis, diagnosis, and management of asthma and allergic and immunologic diseases; conducting and interpreting relevant specialized clinical and laboratory tests; emphasis on outpatients; formal and informal teaching sessions.

078:300 Clinical Cardiology
Development of breadth and depth in diagnostic and therapeutic problems encountered in clinical cardiology; participation in evaluation and decisions regarding patients seen sometimes in the cardiovascular clinic, inpatient cardiology wards, and electrophysiology service.

078:304 Electrocardiography
Scalar electrocardiography with option of viewing exercise studies including treadmill testing; initial interpretation of current tracings and daily staff conferences.

078:325 Clinical Cardiology Coronary Care Experience, Iowa Methodist, Des Moines

078:333 Internal Medicine ICU off Campus
Experience as subintern in the ICU/MICU; daily rounds and teaching with medical critical care staff.

078:400 Clinical Endocrinology
New patient evaluation, inpatient referral; returning patients in diabetes, endocrine clinics; complete patient evaluations, charts; participation in clinical conferences.

078:450 Clinical Gastroenterology
Work in consultation service at University Hospitals and Clinics or Veterans Affairs Iowa City Health Care System; assistance in diagnostic procedures for patients examined as part of consultation service; participation in patient follow-up through weekly return clinic.

078:501 Hematology Oncology
Diagnostic skills in hematology and oncology.

078:503 Palliative Care
Requirements: M.D. enrollment.

078:550 Clinical Infectious Disease
Diagnosis, treatment, follow-up, study of patients with infectious diseases, under staff guidance; techniques of diagnostic microbiology; participation in conferences, teaching activities.

078:600 Pulmonary Disease
Breadth, depth in diagnostic, therapeutic problems encountered in clinical pulmonary disease; evaluation of outpatients and inpatients under staff supervision; interpretation of special studies carried out in pulmonary function laboratory, fiber-optic bronchoscopy and brush biopsy of lung; exposure to diagnosis and management of acute respiratory failure in intensive care units at University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics, Veterans Affairs Iowa City Health Care System.

078:602 Medical Intensive Care Unit

078:650 Nephrology arr.
Evaluation of patients from University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics inpatient service, Veterans Affairs Iowa City Health Care System, clinics; emphasis on early kidney disease, all varieties of hypertension.

078:652 Clinical Nephrology, Iowa Methodist, Des Moines 2,4 s.h.
Exposure to common nephrology problems, including acute renal failure, chronic renal failure, acid-base disorders, common electrolyte disorders.

078:653 Adult and Pediatric Nephrology and Hypertension arr.
Requirements: (for 070:653) fourth-year M.D. enrollment. Same as 070:653.

078:662 Medical and Pediatric Endocrinology arr.
Requirements: (for 070:662) fourth-year M.D. enrollment. Same as 070:662.

078:700 Clinical Rheumatology arr.
Clinical features of rheumatic diseases, their differential diagnosis, principles of management; patients from arthritis clinic, inpatient consultation service of University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics, Veterans Affairs Iowa City Health Care System.

078:800 Geriatrics Elective arr.
Experience in monitoring and evaluating health and functional status of patients age 65 and older in the UI Geriatric Assessment Clinic and community settings. Same as 115:426.

Rick Axelson (Family Medicine), Kristi J. Ferguson (Internal Medicine/Community and Behavioral Health), Clarence Kreiter (Family Medicine), Jeff Pettit (Medical Education/Psychological and Quantitative Foundations/Neurosurgery), Marcy Rosenbaum (Family Medicine)

Graduate degree: M.M.E.
Graduate nondegree program: Certificate in Medical Education
Web site: http://www.healthcare.uiowa.edu/ocrme/masters/programoverview.htm

The Medical Education Program is dedicated to providing medical faculty members with formal training in medical education. The program is coordinated through the Office of Consultation and Research in Medical Education.

Graduate Programs

- Master in Medical Education
- Certificate in Medical Education

Application requirements are the same for both programs; see "Admission" below.

Master in Medical Education

The Master in Medical Education requires a minimum of 30 s.h. of graduate credit. The program is designed to prepare medical faculty members to educate health professionals. It offers an opportunity to specialize in theory and practice of curriculum design, effective teaching, assessment, and other aspects of medical education.

Graduates of the program should be able to:

- design evidence-based education programs and materials with appropriate scope, sequence, and focus for intended learners;
- deliver effective instruction to individuals and small or large groups in classroom, laboratory, or clinical settings;
- evaluate the effectiveness of educational instruction, using formative and summative methods;
- understand basic principles of educational measurement and be able to apply them to medical education;
- use assessments to promote learning and to assess learning progress and status; and
- understand basic principles of, and be able to interpret and use, educational research.

The M.M.E. may be completed in as few as two years or as many as five. Students may begin the program in fall semester, spring semester, or summer session. Some of the required courses are offered online, and required on-campus courses have evening meeting times.

The curriculum includes 24 s.h. of required courses and 6-9 s.h. of electives. Students must register for at least one course each academic year in order to maintain satisfactory progress toward the degree. The program’s faculty provides substantial student advising and consultation.

During their first semester, students file a plan of study. Each student’s plan must include a description of the student’s goals, intended graduation date, and a list of courses the student plans to take each semester he or she is working toward the degree. The study plan must incorporate all of the courses required for the degree and must include any requests for transfer credit. The plan must be approved by the director of the M.M.E. program and by the student’s advisor. Subsequent revisions of the plan must have the advisor’s approval.

The Master in Medical Education requires the following course work:

Students who do not do clinical teaching may substitute another course for 050:702 Clinical Teaching in Medical Education.

Students must have completed at least 18 s.h. before enrolling in 050:720 Portfolio Project. In the portfolio, students integrate the materials they have developed over the course of the program into a document. Three faculty members review the project and evaluate the student’s participation in the program.

Electives require approval of the student’s advisor. They may include courses in the M.M.E. program as well as those offered by relevant departments and programs (e.g., College of Education, Tippie
Colleges and Other Academic Units

Graduate-level courses are numbered 100 or above.

Certificate in Medical Education

The Certificate in Medical Education requires a minimum of 12 s.h. of graduate credit. The certificate program is designed to help participants find new ways to enhance their scholarship and skills in teaching, curriculum design, and education assessment. It is intended for Carver College of Medicine faculty and professional staff as well as for University of Iowa resident physicians and fellows.

Required course work for the certificate is taken from the Master of Medical Education program. Individuals who complete the certificate and then decide they would like to earn the master’s degree may count their certificate course work toward the M.M.E.

The Certificate in Medical Education requires the following course work.

Methods—one of these:

- 050:701 Instructional Design and Technology 3 s.h.
- 050:702 Clinical Teaching in Medical Education 3 s.h.
- 050:711 Teaching Methods in Medical Education 3 s.h.

Research and measurement—one of these:

- 050:703 Educational Research and Evaluation 3 s.h.
- 050:712 Introduction to Educational Measurement in Medical Education 3 s.h.

And:

Additional courses chosen from M.M.E. requirements 6 s.h.

Admission

Application requirements are the same for the M.M.E. degree and the certificate program. Applicants should hold an M.D. degree and must have performed satisfactorily on the Medical College Admission Test (MCAT). Basic sciences applicants without an M.D. must hold an equivalent degree and must have performed satisfactorily on an admission test equivalent to the MCAT.

Applicants whose first language is not English and who do not hold a baccalaureate or advanced degree from an accredited university in the United States, English-speaking Africa, Australia, Canada (except Quebec), New Zealand, or the United Kingdom must submit scores on the Test of English as a Foreign Language (TOEFL).

Application materials must include an official transcript showing medical course work and medical degree, or equivalent for basic sciences applicants (current and former University of Iowa students do not need to request a UI transcript or transcripts previously submitted to the University); a letter of reference from the applicant’s department head and one additional letter of reference; and a 300-500 word essay describing the applicant’s interest in medical education and in the Master in Medical Education program or the Certificate in Medical Education program.

To apply to the M.M.E. program, see Application for Admission to the Medical Education Program on the program’s web site; to apply to the certificate program, see Nondegree Application on the University of Iowa Office of Admissions web site. Application materials should be submitted to the Office of Admissions.

Application deadlines are July 15 for fall semester entry, November 15 for spring semester entry, and April 15 for summer session entry.
Medical Scientist Training Program

Professional/Graduate Program

• Joint Doctor of Medicine/Doctor of Philosophy

The Iowa Medical Scientist Training Program (MSTP) prepares trainees for careers in academic medicine, with emphasis on basic and clinical research.

Joint M.D./Ph.D.

The joint Doctor of Medicine/Doctor of Philosophy normally requires seven to eight years of continuous study. It provides an effective and efficient means to integrate graduate and clinical training, combining the scientific approach with clinical medicine.

In the first two years of the program, trainees enroll in the basic science and introductory clinical portions of the Carver College of Medicine’s Doctor of Medicine’s curriculum. This provides a broad exposure to the language and organizing concepts that form the foundation for a career as a physician scientist. Trainees begin the research component of the graduate phase of the program during the first two years as well, through summer laboratory rotations, enrollment in 050:213 Analyzing and Presenting Medical Research, research presentations by MSTP faculty and students, and a student-sponsored seminar series. They also participate in Conversations in Research, in which MSTP faculty members discuss their research and career interests, and attend MSTP Grand Rounds, a forum for patient-based discussions that emphasizes how science and medicine intersect.

The first year of the M.D. curriculum addresses normal structure and function of human organ systems and emphasizes relationships among different disciplines. During the first semester, trainees take courses in biochemistry, gross anatomy, cell biology, and medical genetics. The second semester presents an integrated systemic core, which incorporates physiology, histology, and embryology and focuses on the development, structure, and function of human organ systems. Discipline-specific basic science instruction continues through the second semester with medical neuroscience and immunology courses.

The second-year curriculum emphasizes abnormal structure and function of human organ systems. Trainees take courses in pathology, microbiology, and pharmacology.

Throughout the first two years of study, students receive instruction in the foundations of clinical practice, including patient experience in medical history taking and physical examination. At the end of the second year, all trainees take Step 1 of the U.S. Medical Licensing Exam and then complete the basic core clinical clerkship in internal medicine. They gain broad exposure to the spectrum of human disease and experience with direct patient care before they enter the graduate phase of training.

At the beginning of the third year, trainees enroll in a graduate department or interdisciplinary graduate program.

The focus of the graduate years of study is engagement in academic and research experiences that promote the trainees’ development into independent investigators. Clinical contact is maintained during this phase of training through participation in seminar programs, MSTP grand rounds, and 050:212 MSTP Clinical Connections, a course that provides the opportunity for mentored clinical experiences.

Upon completing the Ph.D. dissertation, trainees return to the Carver College of Medicine’s M.D. curriculum to complete the clinical clerkship requirements for the joint M.D./Ph.D. program. During this phase, trainees bring a sophistication in the scientific approach to problem solving that they apply to human disease. They renew and develop clinical skills acquired in their early training and reinforce their understanding of the scientific basis of disease through continued participation in MSTP grand rounds. Upon completion of the clinical curriculum, trainees are awarded the M.D. and Ph.D.

Most graduates of the program elect to enter residency programs in clinical medicine and embark on careers as medical school faculty members in clinical disciplines with opportunities for basic and applied research. Other graduates accept academic appointments in basic science departments and spend a major part of their professional activity in biomedical research and teaching.

Admission

Applicants must meet requirements for admission to the M.D. program in the Carver College of Medicine; see "Admission to the M.D. Program" under Doctor of Medicine (p. 1300) in the Catalog. They also must meet the admission requirements of the Graduate College; see the Manual of Rules and Regulations of the Graduate College or the Graduate (p. 1117) College section of the Catalog.

Applicants should have completed requirements for a bachelor's degree at an accredited academic institution. In addition to outstanding academic credentials, including strength in biological, physical, and mathematical sciences, they must demonstrate aptitude for and commitment to scientific research through productive research experience during their undergraduate years or after. Admission normally is made for entry to the first year of the program, but applicants already enrolled in the Carver College of Medicine may request admission with advanced standing.

Application

The Carver College of Medicine participates in the American Medical College Application Service (AMCAS). Program applicants should select M.D./Ph.D. Program-Type on their AMCAS application and instruct AMCAS to forward their credentials to the Carver College of Medicine (IA131). Applications should be submitted as early as possible to allow careful review by the admissions committees of the Medical Scientist Training Program and the Carver College of Medicine.

All candidates must take the Medical College Admission Test (MCAT), according to Carver College of Medicine requirements. The Graduate Record Exam (GRE) is not required for admission.

Application to the Graduate College is not required before acceptance to the MSTP. Trainees admitted to the program receive assistance with Graduate College enrollment.

Financial Support

Trainees receive stipend and full tuition support from a National Institutes of Health MSTP training grant to The University of Iowa, supplemented by other institutional and individual awards. Students in the graduate phase of training receive support from their graduate departments or interdisciplinary programs and their research advisors. The program office also helps selected trainees apply for competitive national awards for outstanding academic and research achievement.

Courses

050:211 MSTP Research
Research experience. Requirements: Medical Scientist Training Program enrollment.

050:212 MSTP Clinical Connections
Experience with physician-scientist preceptor in medical interviewing, physical examination, patient presentation through direct patient interaction. Requirements: Medical Scientist Training Program graduate phase enrollment.

050:213 Analyzing and Presenting Medical Research
1 s.h.
How to read, interpret, and present medical and scientific literature; students read and present representative papers from scientific and medical literature.

Study in the Department of Microbiology is dedicated to the branch of biological sciences that deals with the smallest living things: bacteria, archaea, fungi, algae, protozoa, and viruses. It is coupled with immunology, the study of the response of higher organisms to foreign substances.

Microbiology and immunology are at the forefront of the modern biological revolution. Microbes are often the experimental subjects of choice for examining basic genetic and biological phenomena because of their small size, rapid growth rate, and relative simplicity. A significant portion of contemporary biochemical research employs microbiological and immunological methods.

Current research is making theoretical and practical advances concerning microbial species and viruses that infect animals, including man, plants, and other microbes; the use of comparative genomics, gene expression profiling, and recombinant DNA methods to analyze basic biological processes and generate valuable products; the nature and occurrence of microbial life in extreme or unusual environments; microbial synthesis and modification of antibiotics and other natural products; the role of microbes in stabilization of the biosphere by recycling and detoxifying waste products; the genetics and regulation of metabolic processes; and the genetics and regulation of the immune response, including characterization of mechanisms used by bacteria to signal one another and characterization of interactions between different types of immune cells and their targets.

The Department of Microbiology offers degree programs for undergraduates and for graduate students and administers the academic curriculum at both levels. The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences grants undergraduate degrees in microbiology and oversees undergraduate academic policy relating to the student record. The Graduate College grants graduate degrees in microbiology.

Undergraduate Program

• Major in microbiology (Bachelor of Science)
• Minor in microbiology

Microbiology is an excellent major for undergraduate students who want a good general education with emphasis on an important and interesting branch of biological sciences. Graduates find employment opportunities in government, hospitals, public health laboratories, research laboratories, and industrial laboratories (food, dairy, chemical, pharmaceutical, and genetic engineering companies). Those who pursue advanced degrees have more advanced career opportunities in these same areas as well as in college and university teaching.

Bachelor of Science

The Bachelor of Science with a major in microbiology requires a minimum of 120 s.h., including 63-64 s.h. of work for the major (21 s.h. in microbiology and 42-43 s.h. in supporting course work). Students must complete at least 12 s.h. of the required 21 s.h. in microbiology courses at The University of Iowa. Students also must complete the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences General Education Program (p. 381).

The major requires the following course work.

Microbiology Courses

Students earn 21 s.h. in microbiology courses, as follows.

Additional microbiology courses, with at least 12 s.h. in courses numbered 061:147 and above, excluding 061:164 and 061:220 14 s.h.

Students must earn a grade of C or higher in 061:157 in order to take more advanced microbiology courses.

Students must take 061:163 once for credit during their last two semesters before graduation. They may apply a maximum of 2 s.h. earned in the course toward the major, but they are encouraged to take it for 0 s.h. during other semesters after they have completed 061:157.

A maximum of 4 s.h. earned in 061:161 Undergraduate Research in Microbiology may be counted toward the major. However, honors students must complete 23 s.h. of microbiology courses for the major and may count 6 s.h. earned in 061:171 Honors Undergraduate Research in Microbiology; see "Honors" below.

Supporting Course Work

In addition to the required 21 s.h. of microbiology, the major requires supporting course work. These courses may not be taken pass/nonpass.

Four-Year Graduation Plan

The following checkpoints list the minimum requirements students must complete by certain semesters in order to stay on the University’s Four-Year Graduation Plan. (Courses in the major are those required to complete the major; they may be offered by departments other than the major department.)

Before the third semester begins:

- 002:010 Principles of Biology I; 004:011 Principles of Chemistry I, and 004:012 Principles of Chemistry II; an approved calculus or biostatistics class; and at least one-quarter of the semester hours required for graduation

Before the fifth semester begins:

- 002:011 Principles of Biology II; 004:121 Organic Chemistry I, 004:122 Organic Chemistry II, and 004:141 Organic Chemistry Laboratory; 061:157 General Microbiology; and at least one-half of the semester hours required for graduation

Before the seventh semester begins:

- five more courses in the major and at least three-quarters of the semester hours required for graduation

Before the eighth semester begins:

- another 10-12 s.h. of course work

During the eighth semester:

- enrollment in all remaining course work in the major, all remaining required General Education courses, and a sufficient number of semester hours to graduate

Honors

Microbiology majors who are members of the University of Iowa Honors Program may enroll in the honors program in microbiology. Membership in the University Honors Program requires that students maintain a cumulative University of Iowa g.p.a. of at least 3.33. Microbiology honors students also must maintain a g.p.a. of at least 3.33 in microbiology courses. To graduate with... honors in the major, students must complete 23 s.h. of course work in microbiology, including 6 s.h. in 061:171 Honors Undergraduate Research in Microbiology, which introduces them to experimental research. At the end of the research, they must successfully present written and oral reports.

Minor

The minor in microbiology requires a minimum of 15 s.h. in microbiology courses, including 12 s.h. in advanced courses taken at The University of Iowa. For the minor, courses numbered 061:147 Survey of Immunology and above, except 061:164 Nursing Microbiology, are considered advanced. Students must maintain a g.p.a. of at least 2.00 in the minor. Course work in the minor may not be taken pass/nonpass. Students may count a maximum of 2 s.h. earned in 061:161 Undergraduate Research in Microbiology or 061:171 Honors Undergraduate Research in Microbiology, and 2 s.h. earned in 061:163 Seminar: Microbiology, toward the minor. They also may count 061:218 Microscopy for Biomedical Research, but not 061:220 Advanced Microscopy for Biomedical Research.

Graduate Programs

• Master of Science in microbiology
• Doctor of Philosophy in microbiology

Graduate study in microbiology is designed to help students become highly qualified in microbiology research and teaching. Admitted graduate students usually pursue the Ph.D.

Graduate study is offered in six subdisciplines: pathogenic bacteriology, microbial genetics, immunology, microbial physiology, animal virology, and bioinformatics. Several areas involve interdisciplinary training both within and outside the department, so students gain broad experience during their course of study. Students also may pursue interdisciplinary Ph.D. programs in genetics (p. 1155), immunology (p. 1161), and molecular and cellular biology (p. 1180).

During their first year, students rotate in three laboratories of their choice and are advised by the Graduate Student Advisory Committee. At the end of March of the first year, they choose a research supervisor who chairs their advisory committee. The committee provides intellectual and research guidance for the student’s training.

The Department of Microbiology cooperates with other University of Iowa departments to give students ample access to diverse course offerings, seminars, and research programs. For example, microbiology students may participate in courses and seminars in immunology, genetics, molecular and cellular biology, biocatalysis/biotechnology, and electron microscopy.

All students admitted to advanced degree programs are expected to assist in departmental teaching.

Master of Science

The Master of Science program in microbiology requires a minimum of 30 s.h. of graduate credit. M.S. students are required to earn a minimum of 12 s.h. in microbiology courses chosen from three of the department’s six subdisciplines. They may substitute a course they have already taken (at The University of Iowa or elsewhere) for a course requirement, with the M.S. advisory committee’s approval. Additional course requirements depend on students’ interests and the advice of the examining committee.

Students must write a thesis based on their own research and defend it satisfactorily in an oral examination. No more than 9 s.h. of credit for thesis research may be counted toward the 30 s.h. required for the Master of Science.

Doctor of Philosophy

The Doctor of Philosophy program in microbiology requires a minimum of 72 s.h. of graduate credit. Ph.D. students are required to earn approximately 10 s.h. of credit in graduate-level microbiology courses. They may substitute a course they have already taken (at The University of Iowa or elsewhere) for a course requirement, with the Ph.D. advisory committee’s approval.

Students must pass a comprehensive examination before their fourth semester in the program and write a thesis based on their own research. The thesis must be defended satisfactorily in an oral examination.

Admission

Applicants must meet the admission requirements of the Graduate College; see the Manual of Rules and Regulations of the Graduate College or the Graduate (p. 1117) College section of the Catalog. They should have a cumulative g.p.a. of at least 3.00 and must have completed courses in biology, chemistry (inorganic and organic), mathematics including calculus, and physics. Those admitted with deficiencies must complete the relevant course work during their first year of graduate study. Admission is determined through a review and formal vote by the faculty. Preference is given to students applying for the Ph.D. program.
Facilities

The Department of Microbiology is situated on the University of Iowa health sciences campus, where it shares the Bowen Science Building with the Departments of Anatomy and Cell Biology, Biochemistry, Molecular Physiology and Biophysics, and Pharmacology. Laboratory space and modern equipment are available for teaching and research.

Courses

061:005 Microbes and Our World 2 s.h.
Bacteria, viruses, and parasites and their role in shaping human health, industry, current affairs, history.

061:015 Web-Based Microbes and Our World 2 s.h.
Bacteria, viruses, and other microorganisms; ways in which microbes affect our health, economy, and environment; how humans have harnessed microbial growth; how microbes have shaped human experience and continue to play key roles in modern life.

061:103 Principles of Infectious Diseases 5 s.h.
Principles and methods essential to study of microorganisms, their isolation and identification; microorganisms in infectious diseases; current immunology concepts. Requirements: M.D. enrollment.

061:104 Principles Infectious Diseases--Physician Assistant 5 s.h.
Principles and methods essential to study of microorganisms, their isolation and identification; microorganisms in infectious diseases; current immunology concepts. Requirements: Physician Assistant Program enrollment.

061:112 Pharmacy Microbiology 4 s.h.
Medical microbiology: bacteriology, immunology, pathogenic bacteriology, virology, mycology, parasitology. Requirements: pre-pharmacy standing.

061:113 Dental Microbiology 3 s.h.

061:147 Survey of Immunology 3 s.h.
Major features of the evolutionary, ontogenic, and comparative development of innate and adaptive immune systems and their functions at the cellular and molecular levels. Prerequisites: 002:010 and 002:011.

061:157 General Microbiology 5 s.h.
Principles of bacterial diversity, microbial genetics, physiology and metabolism, pathogenic microbiology, virology, immunology, industrial and environmental microbiology; laboratory emphasis on basic techniques. Prerequisites: 002:010.

061:159 Pathogenic Bacteriology 5 s.h.
Pathogenic bacteria, with emphasis on mechanisms of pathogenicity, laboratory methods for isolation, identification; laboratory emphasis on advanced methods for study of pathogenic bacteria. Requirements: grade of C or higher in 061:157.

061:160 Microbial Physiology 3 s.h.
Bacterial genomes, cell structure, growth, energy metabolism, biosynthesis, mechanisms of signal transduction and regulation. Requirements: grade of C or higher in 061:157.

061:161 Undergraduate Research in Microbiology arr.
Experimental research under faculty supervision. Prerequisites: 002:010.

061:163 Seminar: Microbiology 2 s.h.
Current topics in microbiology, immunology. Requirements: grade of C or higher in 061:157 and senior standing.
061:164 Nursing Microbiology 4 s.h.
Overview of bacteria, viruses, and eukaryotic microorganisms that cause human disease; microbial structure, growth control and reproduction; immunology in the context of host defense mechanisms. Requirements: pre-nursing student standing. Corequisites: 002:002 or 002:010 or 002:021, if not taken as a prerequisite.

061:168 Introduction to Animal Viruses 3 s.h.
Basic physical, chemical, and biological properties of animal viruses; association with human disease. Requirements: grade of C or higher in 061:157.

061:170 Microbial Genetics 3 s.h.
Genetics of bacteria, bacteriophages. Requirements: grade of C or higher in 002:128 or 061:157.

061:190 Web-Based Nursing Microbiology 4 s.h.
Nursing microbiology, principles of immunology; web-based instruction. Requirements: pre-nursing standing. Corequisites: 002:002 or 002:010 or 002:021, if not taken as a prerequisite.

061:201 Graduate Immunology 3 s.h.
Ontogeny, activation, and function of T lymphocytes and B lymphocytes; innate immune effector mechanisms; major histocompatibility complex; antigen presentation; thymocyte positive and negative selection; signaling of T lymphocytes, B lymphocytes; emphasis on experimental methods for analysis of these processes. Requirements: (for 148:201) college biology, general chemistry, and introductory immunology courses; (for 061:201) courses in college biology, genetics, general chemistry, and introductory immunology. Recommendations: (for 148:201) courses in biochemistry and genetics; (for 061:201) biochemistry course. Same as 148:201.

061:207 Advanced Topics in Immunology 3 s.h.

061:217 Integrated Topics in Infectious Diseases 1 s.h.
Clinical cases used to raise questions in host-parasite interactions; case/scientific exposés followed by related journal club discussions at next class session. Same as 148:217.

061:218 Microscopy for Biomedical Research arr.
Preparation, analysis of biomedical projects by light and electron microscopy. Prerequisites: 002:114. Same as 060:218.
061:220 Advanced Microscopy for Biomedical Research

Technically advanced microscopy methods for research; individualized laboratory experience with opportunity to explore application of microscopy methods. Requirements: (for 060:220) an introductory microscopy course; (for 002:220) 002:218 or 060:218 or 061:218 or 012:156 or 052:156 or 060:156; (for 061:220) an introductory EM course. Same as 002:220, 060:220.

1-2 s.h.

Cell division and sporulation; development of critical thinking, experimental approach and design, writing, and oral presentation skills through primary literature and course specific assignments (proposal writing, writing manuscript reviews, oral presentations, small group discussions). Requirements: graduate standing in microbiology.

061:222 Advanced Topics in Prokaryotic Biology Module 2

1-2 s.h.

Subversion of innate immune response by Gram-positive and Gram-negative bacteria; development of critical thinking, experimental approach and design, writing, and oral presentation skills through exposure to primary literature and assignments (proposal writing, writing manuscript reviews, oral presentations, small group discussions). Requirements: graduate standing in microbiology.

061:223 Advanced Topics in Prokaryotic Biology Module 3

1-2 s.h.

Development of critical thinking, experimental approach and design, writing, and oral presentation skills through exposure to selected topics in microbiology and assignments (proposal, writing manuscript reviews, oral presentations, small group discussions). Requirements: graduate standing in microbiology.

061:224 Advanced Topics in Prokaryotic Biology Module 4

1-2 s.h.

Development of critical thinking, experimental approach and design, writing, and oral presentation skills through exposure to selected topics in microbiology and assignments (proposal, writing manuscript reviews, oral presentations, small group discussions). Requirements: graduate standing in microbiology.

1-2 s.h.

Development of critical thinking, experimental approach and design, writing, and oral presentation skills through exposure to selected topics in microbiology and assignments (proposal, writing manuscript reviews, oral presentations, small group discussions). Requirements: graduate standing in microbiology.

1-2 s.h.

Development of critical thinking, experimental approach and design, writing, and oral presentation skills through exposure to selected topics in microbiology and assignments (proposal, writing manuscript reviews, oral presentations, small group discussions). Requirements: graduate standing in microbiology.

061:227 Advanced Topics in Microbiology

1 s.h.

Presentations by graduate students on selected research topics in microbiology; different topics each semester. Offered fall and spring semesters. Requirements: graduate standing in microbiology.

061:247 Graduate Survey of Immunology

3 s.h.

Major features of evolutionary, ontogenic, and comparative development of innate and adaptive immune systems; their functions at cellular and molecular levels. Offered fall semesters. Same as 148:247.

061:259 Graduate Pathogenic Bacteriology

3 s.h.

Pathogenic bacteria, with emphasis on mechanisms of pathogenicity, laboratory methods for isolation, identification.
061:260 Graduate Microbial Physiology 3 s.h.
Bacterial genomes, cell structure, growth, energy metabolism, biosynthesis, mechanisms of signal transduction and regulation.

061:261 Graduate Research in Microbiology arr.
Requirements: microbiology graduate standing.

061:263 Graduate Student Research Seminar 1 s.h.
Presentation of thesis work in progress.
Requirements: microbiology graduate standing.

061:264 Directed Study in Microbiology arr.

061:265 Topics in Virology Literature 1 s.h.
Papers of current interest in primary virology literature.

061:267 Graduate Introduction to Animal Viruses 3 s.h.
Basic physical, chemical, biological properties of animal viruses, their association with human diseases; discussion topics in the primary literature.

061:268 Biology and Pathogenesis of Viruses 2 s.h.
Molecular biology of animal DNA and RNA viruses, interaction of these viruses with eucaryotic cells; mechanisms of viral latency, persistence, cellular transformation, oncogenesis; virology literature. Prerequisites: 061:168 or 061:267.

061:270 Graduate Microbial Genetics 3 s.h.
Genetics of bacteria, bacteriophages.

061:271 Graduate Microbial Genetics Laboratory 3 s.h.
Basic principles of genetic analysis in bacteria. Prerequisites: 061:270.

061:275 Perspectives in Biocatalysis 1-3 s.h.
Applied enzymology, protein design, structure-activity relationships, biosensor technology, microbial transformations, biodegradation of environmental pollutants. Repeatable. Requirements: graduate standing in a participating department supported by the Predoctoral Training Program in Biotechnology. Same as 004:275, 046:275, 052:275, 053:275, 099:275.

061:279 Graduate Bacterial Diversity 3,4,6 s.h.
Analysis of bacteria from varied habitats; emphasis on the physiological basis and molecular characteristics of diversity.

061:299 Mechanisms of Parasitism Journal Club 1 s.h.
Reviews of recent publications in molecular parasitology research and thesis research by training grant or journal club students. Same as 142:299.

Graduate degrees: M.S., Ph.D. in Molecular Physiology and Biophysics
Web site: http://www.physiology.uiowa.edu

The Department of Molecular Physiology and Biophysics offers graduate study leading to the Master of Science and Doctor of Philosophy. It participates in interdisciplinary graduate programs, including the Medical Scientist Training (p. 1323) Program, a joint M.D./Ph.D. program offered by the Graduate College and the Carver College of Medicine, and it provides instruction in molecular physiology and biophysics for M.D., D.D.S., and other health professions students. The department also conducts a co-op exchange, a vigorous training program that gives undergraduate students the opportunity to develop as independent researchers in preparation for graduate studies.

The department’s principal research areas include cell biology, genetics, endocrinology, neuroscience, and membrane physiology and biophysics. The unifying theme is the understanding of signal transduction mechanisms involved in regulating function at the cellular and molecular levels.

Graduate Program

- Master of Science in molecular physiology and biophysics (with or without thesis)
- Doctor of Philosophy in molecular physiology and biophysics

Graduate study in molecular physiology and biophysics provides students with fundamental knowledge of life processes at molecular, cellular, and integrative levels of biological function. It also imparts knowledge of modern research skills applicable to contemporary problems.

Students may enter the graduate program through the Biosciences (p. 1144) Program (Graduate College) or directly through the Department of Molecular Physiology and Biophysics. Those who enter directly are advised by the department’s director of graduate studies, who guides them in planning required course work and introduces them to research activities of the department’s faculty members.

All degree candidates have experience as classroom instructors, under faculty supervision, as part of their training.

Master of Science

The Master of Science program in molecular physiology and biophysics requires a minimum of 30 s.h. beyond the bachelor’s degree and is offered with and without thesis. Thesis students complete laboratory research and write a thesis that fulfills the requirements of the Graduate College (see the Manual of Rules and Regulations of the Graduate College or the Graduate (p. 1117) College section of the Catalog). Nonthesis students complete a library research report and take a written examination on the research report area and the graduate program in physiology.

University of Iowa research assistants may pursue an M.S. in molecular physics and biophysics while continuing to work in their research laboratories. Research assistants interested in the M.S. program must submit a letter of support from their supervisor.

Doctor of Philosophy

The Doctor of Philosophy program in molecular physiology and biophysics requires a minimum of 72 s.h. beyond the bachelor’s degree. The core curriculum includes graduate-level courses in cell biology, molecular biology, human physiology, and neurophysiology. Advanced electives, offered by the Department of Molecular Physiology and Biophysics and other departments, cover a wide range of topics, including receptors and signal transduction, and developmental neurophysiology.

After successful completion of required coursework and the comprehensive examination, students devote full-time to thesis research, which culminates in preparation of a doctoral dissertation and its defense in a final oral exam.

Admission

Applicants must meet the admission requirements of the Graduate College; see the Manual of Rules and Regulations of the Graduate College or the Graduate College section of the Catalog. They must have a bachelor’s degree from an accredited institution, with an undergraduate major in one of the biological, chemical, physical, mathematical, or engineering sciences and one or more years of coursework in biology, physics, biochemistry, and calculus. They also must have a cumulative science g.p.a. of at least 3.00 and a combined verbal and quantitative score above 1200 on the Graduate Record Examination (GRE) General Test.

Financial Support

All full-time students receive financial aid in the form of tuition and stipend support from the Department of Molecular Physiology and Biophysics. Support is renewed annually based on satisfactory progress in meeting degree requirements.

Research

Faculty research interests in the Department of Molecular Physiology and Biophysics encompass molecular and cellular endocrinology, cellular and developmental neurophysiology, and membrane structure and function. Within these, there are multiple areas of interest, including hormone receptors, reductive endocrinology, signal transduction, regulation of gene expression, synaptic transmission, neuronal differentiation, membrane ion channels, regulation of excitability, and cardiovascular electrophysiology and regulation. Experimental models currently being investigated include rodents, yeast, Drosophila, and cultured cell lines from a variety of species.

Facilities

Two floors of the Bowen Science Building are devoted to research and teaching in the Department of Molecular Physiology and Biophysics. Department faculty members also occupy laboratory facilities in the Eckstein Medical Research Building and the Carver Biomedical Research Building. In addition to specialized equipment in faculty research laboratories, the department provides equipment for fluorescence microscopy, isotope analysis, cell culture, and molecular biology. It also has access to the University network and the multimedia education facilities. Additional resources are available at the Hardin Library for the Health Sciences.

Courses

072:152 Human Physiology for Dental Students
4 s.h.
Principles of human physiology, organ systems, cell function. Offered fall semesters. Requirements: grade of C- or higher in 002:010, 004:121, and 004:122; and D.D.S. enrollment.

072:153 Graduate Physiology
4 s.h.
Principles of human physiology, organ systems, cell function. Offered fall semesters. Requirements: grade of C- or higher in 002:010, 004:121, and 004:122; and graduate standing.

072:164 Human Physiology for Physician Assistant Students
4 s.h.
Principles of human physiology, organ systems, cell function. Offered summer sessions. Requirements: grade of C- or higher in 002:010, 004:121, and 004:122; and Physician Assistant Program enrollment.

072:165 Advanced Human Physiology
4 s.h.
Requirements: matriculation to the anesthesiology C.R.N.A. program.

072:180 How the Brain Works
1 s.h.
Brief, integrated look at how the brain works, based on recent neuroscience research; how the brain’s biochemistry, anatomy, and physiology change constantly due to interaction with physical, emotional, and social environments; does the world we see around us exist outside the brain; does the mind exist; is emotion necessary for learning and memory; are we born with pre-existing circuits and codes in the brain for language, recognition of faces, and other complex behaviors; can aging of the brain be delayed; approach relevant for sciences, humanities.
072:184 Developmental Neurobiology
3 s.h.
Neural induction and nervous system patterning; neurogenesis, axon and dendrite outgrowth and targeting; synapse formation, specificity, refinement; mechanisms of neuronal cell death; myelination; neural stem cells; introduction to cellular, molecular, and genetic techniques in studies of neural development. Requirements: grade of B- or higher in 002:180 or graduate standing. Same as 002:184, 132:184.

072:199 Research, Independent Study
arr.
Recommendations: closed to molecular physiology and biophysics graduate students.

072:200 Medical Physiology Online
4 s.h.
Fundamental principles of cellular membranes, muscle, sensory organs, motor neurological systems, autonomic nervous systems, cardiovascular, pulmonary, renal, gastrointestinal, endocrine, and reproductive systems; interdependence of organ systems to maintain a normal physiological state using clinical correlates as applied to humans; basic physiological principles that establish a solid foundation for future pathophysiological and pharmacological concepts. Recommendations: medical, dental, physician assistant, nurse anesthesia, physical therapy, or graduate standing.

072:209 Steroid Receptor Signaling
1 s.h.
Structure-function relationship and genomic and nongenomic actions of the steroid hormone receptor family; basis for actions of novel new ligands on these receptors. Offered spring semesters. Same as 071:209, 132:209.

072:211 Biophysics of Excitable Membranes
3 s.h.
Selected electrophysiological and biophysical topics from published research. Prerequisites: 027:130.

072:220 Mechanisms of Cellular Organization
3 s.h.
Current understanding of basic cell biological processes; key experiments that led to guiding insights; mechanisms that cells use for compartmentalization and how those mechanisms are regulated; biogenesis of major organelles (e.g., mitochondria, peroxisomes, nucleus, secretory/endocytic membrane system); functions of cytoskeleton in cell motility, organelle motility, and cell division. Prerequisites: 099:130. Same as 060:216, 142:220.

072:225 Growth Factor Receptor Signaling
1 s.h.
Mechanisms of signaling by growth factors; cytokines and related molecules that regulate cell proliferation, development, differentiation, and survival; emphasis on molecular mechanisms of signaling, relevance of these signaling processes to various human diseases. Recommendations: 156:201, 156:202, and 156:203. Same as 060:225, 142:225.

072:226 Cell Cycle Control
1 s.h.

072:227 Cell Fate Decisions
1 s.h.

072:240 Physiology Workshop
1 s.h.
Presentations by faculty, postdoctoral fellows, graduate students, and scientists. Repeatable. Requirements: graduate standing.

072:265 Neuroscience Seminar
0-1 s.h.

072:302 Research Physiology and Biophysics
arr.
Requirements: molecular physiology and biophysics graduate standing.
072:342 Biosciences Critical Thinking and Communication 2 s.h.
Selected papers and oral and written presentations tied to students' research rotations; introductory seminar. Repeatable. Same as 002:270, 156:265.

Requirements: molecular physiology and biophysics Ph.D. candidacy.

Neurology is the branch of medical science concerned with diagnosis and management of disorders of the brain, spinal cord, peripheral nervous system, and muscle.

The Department of Neurology’s hallmark is its history of carefully integrating patient care, scientific investigation, and the education of medical, postdoctoral, and graduate students.

M.D. Student Training, Graduate Education

The department provides clinical and clinical research training to third- and fourth-year M.D. students. It also offers research opportunities in various fields of neuroscience, including neuropsychology, neuroimaging, and neuroanatomy, to Ph.D. students in neuroscience and psychology.

Residency Program

The Department of Neurology offers an active, four-year approved residency program that qualifies physician trainees for board certification in neurology. Experience in clinical electrophysiology, pediatric neurology, psychiatry, and neuropathology is part of this training.

Research

The faculty’s investigative interests center on cognitive neuroscience, degenerative diseases, cerebrovascular disease, neurogenetics, neuromuscular diseases, electrophysiological correlates of central and peripheral nervous system disease, growth factors in the nervous system, control and regulation of autonomic functions, neuro-ophthalmology, movement disorders, epilepsy, and pain management. For more information see the Department of Neurology web site.
Courses

064:011 Clinical Neurology 2-4 s.h.
Experience in clinical neurology through ward work and case-based conferences linked to required reading; focus on neurologic examination, diagnosis of neurologic problems; four-week clerkship.

064:238 Introduction to Neuropsychological Assessment arr.
Standard neuropsychological and behavioral assessment procedures; selection, administration and scoring of neuropsychological tests under staff supervision; preparation of integrated reports on collected data; involvement in a case presentation.

064:239 Advanced Neuropsychological Assessment arr.
Continuation of 064:238.

064:240 Topics in Cognitive Neuroscience 3 s.h.
Key topics in the neural basis of human cognition; research literature. Recommendations: graduate courses in basic neuroscience and cognitive psychology. Same as 132:240.

064:302 Advanced Inpatient Neurology 4 s.h.
Experience managing patients with seizure disorders, headache, cerebrovascular diseases; conferences, clinical rounds; two weeks on each inpatient service for a total of four weeks. Prerequisites: 064:011.

064:303 Advanced Outpatient Neurology 4 s.h.
Experience in evaluation, management of patients with various neurologic diseases; four weeks in clinic patient care. Prerequisites: 064:011.

The Department of Neurosurgery provides an experience oriented toward patient care and basic research concerning diseases and physiology of the nervous system. Students develop awareness of neurosurgery’s role in treating head and spine trauma, vascular disorders, brain and spinal cord tumors, pain and peripheral nerve abnormalities, degenerative spine pathology, and surgical treatment of epilepsy and movement disorders.

Clinical courses are designed around patient-centered discussions interwoven with operating room experiences. Lectures and conferences are scheduled on specific topics.

M.D. Student Training

The department provides fourth-year M.D. students with access to special expertise in selected topics of investigation regarding the central nervous system and to a clinical course through special arrangements with the faculty.

Faculty

Neurosurgery faculty strengths are centered in physiology of spinal cord trauma, epilepsy, auditory brain function and pain, primary brain tumor genetics, central nervous system tissue culture, spinal column biomechanics, and movement disorders. The department has expertise in clinical management across the spectrum of central nervous system diseases.

Facilities

Multiple, fully equipped laboratory space is available to support scientific research of the central nervous system. Faculty and technical assistance is available in all laboratories.

Courses

Neurosurgery courses are open only to M.D. and qualified associated health sciences students.

183:227 Subinternship in Neurosurgery
4 s.h.
Advanced clinical clerkship in neurological surgery; emphasis on diagnosis and operative management of surgical neurological disease.

183:228 Research in Neurological Surgery
arr.
Laboratory investigation of spinal cord injury, spinal column biomechanics and instrumentation, electrophysiology of pain, epilepsy and hearing, molecular genetics and physiology of brain tumors.

Undergraduate degree: B.S. in Nuclear Medicine Technology

Nuclear medicine technologists are professionals in a medical specialty that uses radioactive tracers for diagnostic, therapeutic, and research purposes. Technologists generally are employed in hospitals and clinics. They work hand-in-hand with nuclear medicine physicians, health physicists, radiopharmacists, and radiochemists as an integral part of a highly trained specialty team.

In addition to using sophisticated detectors and computers to trace the movement and localization of radioactive tracers in the human body, nuclear medicine technologists have responsibilities that include radiation safety; quality control testing; radiopharmaceutical preparation and administration; and general patient care.

Undergraduate Program

• Major in nuclear medicine technology (Bachelor of Science)

The Nuclear Medicine Technology Program is fully accredited by the Joint Review Committee on Educational Programs in Nuclear Medical Technology (JRCNMT). Fulfillment of the requirements established by the JRCNMT Accreditation Board involves three years of preclinical work in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences (p. 26) and the Carver College of Medicine (p. 1261), and a minimum of 12 months of professional clinical experience, available at University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics and the Iowa City Veterans Affairs Medical Center.

Undergraduate study in nuclear medicine technology is guided by the academic rules and procedures outlined under "Undergraduate Programs" in the Carver College of Medicine (p. 1261) section of the Catalog.

Bachelor of Science

The Bachelor of Science with a major in nuclear medicine technology requires a minimum of 124 s.h., including 30 s.h. in radiology course work (prefix 074). Required courses in the first and sophomore years emphasize the physical and biological sciences, which provide a basic background for further development in the junior year.

Upon satisfactory completion of the four-year program, students receive the degree and a certificate of training. Graduates are eligible for national certification as nuclear medicine technologists.

Applicants are strongly advised to pursue a course of study that is applicable to a baccalaureate degree, most commonly in biology, chemistry, biochemistry, or microbiology. In this way, students who are not admitted to the Nuclear Medicine Technology Program may complete a degree in their chosen area.

The following are recommended courses.

FOURTH YEAR

The curriculum of the clinical year is organized in accordance with the JRCNMT Essentials of an Accredited Educational Program in Nuclear Medicine Technology. Courses are taught in the following areas: radiopharmacy, radiobiology, radiation safety, patient care, medical terminology, anatomic and physiologic bases of nuclear medicine procedures, physics and instrumentation, administration and management, medical and professional ethics, mathematics and statistics of nuclear medicine, and computer applications in nuclear medicine. Clinical rotations focus on nuclear medicine and positron emission tomography (PET) imaging, clinical radiopharmacy, computer applications, and quantification of radioactivity in vivo and in vitro.

The clinical year consists of these courses.

Admission

Prerequisites for admission to the Nuclear Medicine Technology Program include the following:

- a minimum of 94 s.h. of college credit, with a cumulative g.p.a. of at least 2.50;
- fulfillment of the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences General Education Program (p. 381) requirements in Rhetoric, Interpretation of Literature, Quantitative or Formal Reasoning, Social Sciences (sociology and psychology are recommended), and Culture, Society, and the Arts;
- a minimum of 20 s.h. in three science areas, including a complete introductory course with laboratory in chemistry, physics, and biology; and
- a minimum of 3 s.h. in mathematics, including at least elementary functions.

Fulfillment of these basic admission requirements does not guarantee acceptance into the Nuclear Medicine Technology Program.

A new class begins every August. Application deadline is February 1. Personal interviews are scheduled in February, and the class is selected by March 15. Class size is limited to 10 students. Prospective students are encouraged to consult the Nuclear Medicine Technology Program office to plan an appropriate preprofessional program.

M.D. Student Training

Courses in the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology are designed to give M.D. students a comprehensive survey of reproductive medicine. This is done through a series of didactic lectures, inpatient and outpatient assignments, ward rounds, teaching seminars, and special elective courses.

The third-year clerkship 066:004 Clinical Obstetrics and Gynecology gives students the core knowledge, skills, and attitudes needed to provide primary health care to female patients.

The department offers fourth-year medical students a variety of electives that provide advanced training in the special areas of obstetrics and gynecology. In addition to clerkships at University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics, these electives include a rotation at the Washington County Hospital and Clinics and other arranged off-campus courses.

Residency Program

The department offers a four-year residency. Upon completion, graduates are eligible for the written and oral examinations leading to certification by the American Board of Obstetrics and Gynecology.

Residents are assigned to the divisions and clinical services of the department; they care for both hospital inpatients and outpatients. Training is provided in normal and abnormal obstetrics, gynecologic surgery, office gynecology, ultrasound, reproductive endocrinology, gynecologic oncology, urogynecology, family planning, and endoscopic procedures.

Courses

066:004 Clinical Obstetrics and Gynecology

Proficiency in evaluation and management of core women’s health care relating to the reproductive tract; special history taking, physical examination, laboratory and imaging assessment of obstetric and/or gynecological patients, application of current concepts to well women’s health care and to management of diseases and pathologies; outpatient and inpatient obstetrics and gynecology; family planning, screening and early detection of cancer and other diseases.

066:006 High Risk Antepartum Obstetrics Subinternship

Experience in evaluating new patients in a high-risk obstetric clinic; continuing antepartum care; doing work-up, ordering diagnostic studies, and following course of complicated patients admitted to obstetric ward; assisting in diagnostic, therapeutic procedures such as fetal heart rate testing, amniocentesis, ultrasonography, intrauterine fetal transfusion.
066:010 Gynecologic Oncology Subinternship
Experience on a gynecologic oncology service, including operating room, inpatient and outpatient care; team management approach to gynecologic cancer patients, treatment and follow-up of invasive gynecologic malignancies, etiology and risk factors for gynecologic neoplasias, pre- and postoperative evaluation and treatment of surgical management of gynecologic neoplasias; research project encouraged.

066:013 Reproductive Endocrinology Senior Elective
Experience evaluating new and returning patients in the Reproductive Endocrinology and Infertility Clinic; participation in preoperative, operative, and inpatient postoperative care; advanced gynecologic ultrasonography, in vitro fertilization services.

066:015 Urogynecology Advanced Elective
Experience as active member of urogynecology clinical team, participating in clinical care activities including outpatient clinic, outpatient procedures, inpatient surgery, hospital care; presentation to team on topic chosen by student.

066:017 Continuity of Care in Outpatient Gynecology
M4 students work with experienced gynecologist in longitudinal clinical experience for the academic year; students paired with faculty member to see patients in weekly clinic and provide clinical care to defined patient population.

066:018 Community-Based Ob/Gyn, Washington
Varied out-patient and in-patient obstetric and gynecologic patients in the Washington County Hospital and Clinic; perform and master OB/GYN histories and examinations; frequent supervised active participation of procedures where appropriate.

066:019 Family Planning
Participation as active member of the Family Planning Services team; clinical activities, including clinic and outpatient procedures. Requirements: M.D. enrollment.

066:020 Non-Interventional Birth Elective
Experience with normal physiologic birth; participation in intrapartum and postpartum care of low-risk women. Requirements: M.D. enrollment.

Ophthalmology is a medical and surgical specialty concerned with the diagnosis and treatment of diseases of the eye and its adnexa. The Department of Ophthalmology and Visual Sciences combines postgraduate training with research and patient care in all aspects of the visual sciences. Subspecialties represented in the department include cataract surgery, comprehensive ophthalmology, cornea and external diseases, contact lens and refraction services, genetics and molecular biology, glaucoma, laser refractive surgery, neuro-ophthalmology, oculoplastic surgery, ocular echography, ocular pathology, ocular vascular diseases, optometric services, pediatric ophthalmology and adult strabismus, vitreoretinal disorders, and vision rehabilitation.

M.D. Student Training, Graduate Education

The department offers clinical and research training to M.D. students and limited graduate studies for Ph.D. students in Anatomy and Cell Biology (p. 1278), Molecular and Cellular Biology (p. 1180), and Genetics (p. 1155). A three-year residency program with clinical experience in the ophthalmic subspecialties is offered to physician trainees. Graduates qualify for the written and oral examinations leading to certification by the American Board of Ophthalmology. Postgraduate fellowships of one to two years are available for qualified ophthalmologists in most subspecialty areas.

Continuing Education

The department sponsors clinical conferences open to community ophthalmologists in Iowa and surrounding states where physicians can earn continuing medical education credits. The department also sponsors an annual alumni meeting with participation by nationally and internationally recognized ophthalmologists and vision scientists.

Facilities

The department maintains research laboratories for cell biology, biochemistry, morphology, tumor diagnosis, pathology, electrophysiology, pupillography, molecular biology, and vascular disease. Clinical facilities in ophthalmology are available at University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics in the Pomerantz Family Pavilion and at the Iowa City Veterans Affairs Medical Center and the Veterans Affairs Central Iowa Health Care System in Des Moines. The department also manages an eye clinic at the Broadlawns Medical Center in Des Moines as well as outreach programs in other communities. The John and Marcia Carver Nonprofit Genetic Testing Laboratory, dedicated to providing affordable testing for rare eye diseases, is associated with the department.

Courses

067:100 Elective in Ocular Pathology

Pathophysiology of eye disease; emphasis on use of Socratic method, self-study.
067:101 Elective in External Eye Disease
Common diseases of eyelid, conjunctiva, cornea.

067:102 Elective in Neuro-Ophthalmology
Visual, ocular motor dysfunction due to neurologic disease; patient work-up, readings, neuro-ophthalmology rounds.

067:109 Molecular Ophthalmology
Use of recombinant DNA, tissue culture, protein electrophoresis in study of inherited eye diseases.

067:111 Clinical Ophthalmology
All aspects of clinical ophthalmology; patient rounds, lectures, case presentations; clinical duties with staff, residents, faculty in UIHC and VAMC ophthalmology clinics. Requirements: M.D. enrollment.

The Department of Orthopaedics and Rehabilitation offers training for residents and provides education for undergraduate students.

Residency Programs

The department offers two programs for postgraduate trainees. The first is a five-year integrated clinical program, in which interns and residents participate simultaneously in inpatient and outpatient care, surgery, and sciences related to the neuromusculoskeletal system. The second provides the same training as the first, but includes an additional one to two years of research.

Clinical Residency

Trainees enter this program directly from medical school through the National Internship Matching Plan.

During the first year, trainees gain experience not only in clinical orthopaedics but also in medicine, pediatrics, surgical specialties, intensive care, anesthesiology, and other services.

During years two through five, residents gain experience in trauma, musculoskeletal oncology, children’s orthopaedics, adult orthopaedics, neuromuscular disorders, rehabilitation, prosthetics and orthotics, rheumatology, and basic science related to orthopaedics. They take specialized courses in anatomy, bone histology, biochemistry, physiology, and pathology.

Weekly seminars cover biomechanics, kinesiology, and selected clinical subjects.

Residency with Research

In addition to the training described for the clinical program, this program includes an additional one to two years of research in a field that interests the resident and is related to the musculoskeletal system. The research may be done in one of the orthopaedic laboratories.

Undergraduate Education

At the undergraduate level, the Department of Orthopaedics and Rehabilitation participates in the Bachelor of Science in athletic training, which is offered by the Department of Health and Human Physiology (p. 438) (College of Liberal Arts and Sciences). Members of the orthopaedics and rehabilitation sports medicine faculty teach 076:187 Practicum in Athletic Training IV, a two-semester advanced clinical sequence (8 s.h.). Students who complete the program are eligible to apply for national certification in athletic training and pursue employment opportunities as health care professionals for sports medicine clinics and hospitals, as well as in academic settings.

Laboratories

The orthopaedics laboratories deal with problems in these major subject areas.
Biochemistry: the biochemistry of proteoglycans, collagens, and matrix proteins, both normal and altered in musculoskeletal disorders

Biomechanics: problems of the upper extremity; biomechanics of the spine, hip, and gait; total joint replacements (in conjunction with the College of Engineering (p. 1010))

Cell and molecular biology: studies of normal bone, cartilage, tendon, muscle, and tissues altered by experiment and disease

Facilities

The Department of Orthopaedics and Rehabilitation is housed in the John Pappajohn Pavilion of University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics and has an active service in the Iowa City Veterans Affairs Medical Center. The department’s facilities include 48 orthopaedic beds, five outpatient clinics, inpatient and outpatient operating rooms, a specialty library, a specialty radiology unit, and physical therapy and rehabilitation facilities. Its specialty clinics deal with disorders such as scoliosis, club feet, congenital dislocated hip, neuromuscular disease, metabolic disease, amputation, neoplasm, trauma, and neck, back, hip, foot, knee, and hand problems. Physicians in the outpatient clinic see approximately 175 patients per day. Approximately 5,000 major operations are performed each year under the auspices of the department.

The department’s Institute for Orthopaedics, Sports Medicine, and Rehabilitation is located on the University of Iowa’s Hawkeye Campus. The institute provides MRI, X-ray, and physical therapy services.

The department also provides consulting service to the University’s Center for Disabilities and Development and its Child Health Specialty Clinics and to two State of Iowa programs that serve people with mental retardation.

Courses

076:002 Clinical Orthopaedics arr.

076:187 Practicum in Athletic Training IV 4 s.h.
Clinical experience arranged through the athletic training program and the Department of Orthopaedic Surgery for athletic training majors; development of global proficiency in clinical skills. Requirements: athletic training major and grade of C or higher in 027:183 and 027:186.

076:201 Advanced Clinical Orthopaedics arr.
Requirements: fourth-year M.D. enrollment.

076:202 Musculoskeletal Trauma arr.
Requirements: fourth-year M.D. enrollment.

076:203 Subinternship in Orthopaedics 4 s.h.
Opportunity to enhance clinical skills by taking intern-level responsibility for management of a limited number of orthopaedic patients; proficiency in perioperative patient assessment and management, including assisting in procedures and using laboratory diagnosis and radiologic studies pertinent to one faculty member’s clinical practice.

076:204 Introduction to Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation 2 s.h.
Management of a wide range of common acute and chronic neuro-musculoskeletal pain conditions (shoulder, back, knee pain) to more devastating neuromuscular injuries (spinal cord injuries, brain injury, strokes, amputations). Requirements: M.D. enrollment.

076:205 Advanced Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation 4 s.h.
Management of a wide range of common acute and chronic neuro-musculoskeletal pain conditions (shoulder, back, or knee pain) to more devastating neuromuscular injuries (spinal cord injuries, brain injury, strokes, amputations); students work-up individual patients in outpatient clinics and perform inpatient consultations at subintern level. Requirements: M.D. enrollment.

076:998 Orthopaedics on Campus arr.
Requirements: fourth-year M.D. enrollment.

076:999 Orthopaedics off Campus arr.
Requirements: fourth-year M.D. enrollment.

The Department of Otolaryngology—Head and Neck Surgery is one of the most comprehensive otolaryngology departments in the world. Founded in 1922, it is among the oldest in the United States. US News & World Report has consistently ranked the department’s program among the top three in the nation.

The department’s chief focus areas are education and training, patient care, and research. M.D. students in the Carver College of Medicine, residents, and fellows benefit from a faculty dedicated to providing thorough training in all aspects of otolaryngology and patient care. Patients in the otolaryngology clinic enjoy access to comprehensive care in any of five subspecialties: pediatric otolaryngology, otology/neurotology, general otolaryngology and rhinology, head and neck oncology, and facial plastic and reconstructive surgery. University of Iowa faculty members from ophthalmology and radiation oncology hold joint appointments in otolaryngology, adding depth to the department’s resources.

The department is home to prominent research programs in cleft palate and other craniofacial defects, head and neck oncology, cochlear implants, and molecular genetics. It also offers fellowships in otology/neurotology, pediatric otolaryngology, and head and neck oncology.

The department is located at University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics.

Residency Program

The Department of Otolaryngology—Head and Neck Surgery offers a residency program accredited by the Accreditation Council for Graduate Medical Education. The program has two tracks: a four-year clinical track and a six-year research track. Five applicants are accepted each year, three to the clinical track and two to the research track.

The clinical track provides four years of concentrated clinical study and application in all aspects of otolaryngology. Residents begin their training with a seven-week intensive basic science course divided into an anatomy component and a 160-hour lecture series. The anatomy component includes a supervised cadaver dissection, and the lecture series details the study of otolaryngology and related disciplines. Each resident also completes two research rotations in order to explore research areas that interest him or her.

The research track is a combined clinical-research program designed for residents interested in an otolaryngology research career. After an internship year, residents complete two years of research followed by four years of clinical training. The interaction of clinicians and basic scientists from several departments affords residents the opportunity for involvement in a wide spectrum of current research in areas such as electrophysiology of the auditory system, the genetics of head and neck cancer, and gene therapy.

Fellowships

The Department of Otolaryngology—Head and Neck Surgery offers two-year fellowships in otology/neurotology and in pediatric otolaryngology, which are accredited by the Accreditation Council for Graduate Medical Education, and a one- or two-year fellowship in head and neck oncology accredited by the Advanced Training Council of the American Head and Neck Society.

One applicant is admitted to the otology/neurotology fellowship program every two years. Otology fellows spend a minimum of 20 months on the clinical service. They attend all otology/neurotology clinics and neurotology cases in the operating room and are responsible for inpatient service. They also have one day of dedicated research time each week.

The pediatric otolaryngology fellowship program admits one applicant each year. Fellows spend a minimum of 18 months on the clinical service, where they have the opportunity to train with all pediatric otolaryngology faculty members. Each fellow also has six months of dedicated time for academic research.

One applicant is accepted as a head and neck oncology fellow each year. Training is largely clinical, allowing fellows the opportunity to participate in a variety of procedures, ranging from skull base resection to laryngeal rehabilitation. Fellows routinely perform 35 to 45 free-tissue transfers during one year of training. They also complete a clinical and/or basic science research project relating to head and neck oncology.

Courses

068:003 Clinical Otolaryngology 2 s.h.

068:100 Sub-Internship in Otolaryngology arr.

068:199 Basic Otolaryngologic Science arr.
Supervised cadaver head and neck dissection, with 14 areas in detail. Two weeks.

068:998 Otolaryngology on Campus arr.

068:999 Otolaryngology off Campus arr.
Arranged by student with department approval.

Graduate degree: M.S. in Pathology
Web site: http://www.medicine.uiowa.edu/pathology

The Department of Pathology offers education and training for a broad range of students, from undergraduates through postgraduate fellows and researchers. It provides basic pathology courses to health sciences students; a clinical training program for clinical laboratory scientists; a Master of Science program in pathology; residency training programs leading to American Board of Pathology certification in anatomic pathology, clinical pathology, and neuropathology; fellowship training in pathology subspecialties; and postdoctoral research training in cellular and molecular pathology.

Clinical Education

Pathology courses are a major component of the University’s Clinical Laboratory Sciences Program, a Bachelor of Science program that trains medical laboratory scientists; see Clinical Laboratory Sciences (p. 1296) in the Catalog.

M.D. Student Training

The department provides seven 12-month fellowships for M.D. students: the Emory Warner Fellowship, a full-time research position in a facet of experimental pathology; and six pathology externships, for students interested in careers as pathologists. It also offers clerkships for M.D. students in all areas of anatomical and clinical pathology.

Residency Program

The department offers 20 residency positions in pathology, which provide up to four years of training. Patients at University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics and the Iowa City Veterans Affairs Medical Center are integral to the program.

Residents gain experience in systematic rotation through the varied laboratory services, including surgical pathology, autopsy pathology, neuropathology, cytology, clinical chemistry, clinical microbiology, hematology, immunopathology, and transfusion medicine. They also have the opportunity to pursue one to three years of additional fellowship training in most pathology subspecialties.

Graduate Program

- Master of Science in pathology

Master of Science

The Master of Science program in pathology requires a minimum of 30 s.h. of graduate credit, including 21 s.h. of classroom work and 9 s.h. earned for research. The program trains graduate students in cell and molecular biology. Graduates work as research scientists in a range of academic and commercial laboratories, including those in the rapidly expanding biotechnology sector. Others advance to doctoral-level study.
M.S. students take a core curriculum in cell and molecular biology as well as electives suited to their individual interests. They acquire contemporary research skills by pursuing a laboratory thesis project under the guidance of a faculty member. Currently, there are active research programs in immunology, microbiology, neuroscience, signaling and apoptosis, inflammation and vascular biology, tumor biology and cancer, and virology.

Most M.S. students complete their course of study in three years.

The department encourages applicants who have earned a Bachelor of Science with a major in biology, chemistry, biochemistry, clinical laboratory science, microbiology, or zoology. Applicants must meet the admission requirements of the Graduate College; see the Manual of Rules and Regulations of the Graduate College or the Graduate College section of the Catalog. They should have an undergraduate g.p.a. of at least 3.00 and a combined verbal and quantitative score of at least 1100 on the Graduate Record Exam (GRE) General test.

Postgraduate Training

The Department of Pathology offers postgraduate clinical fellowship programs in hematopathology, transfusion medicine, clinical microbiology, cytopathology, molecular genetics pathology, and surgical pathology for physicians who have completed residency training in pathology. These fellowships consist of one to two years of diagnostic work and up to two years of laboratory research.

The department provides postdoctoral research training in immunology, neuropathology, apoptosis, cancer biology, and clinical microbiology as well as in other areas of cellular and molecular pathology. These positions are open to individuals who have earned a Ph.D. or an M.D.

Facilities

The Department of Pathology is well-equipped to carry out the sophisticated technology of modern cellular and molecular pathology. It administers more than 90,000 square feet of clinical laboratories at University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics and has individual research and core facility laboratories, including histopathology and laser capture microscopy for cellular and molecular pathology research, in the Medical Research Center, Medical Laboratories, and at the Iowa City Veterans Affairs Medical Center. Also available are Carver College of Medicine research facilities for nucleic acid chemistry, hybridoma production, flow cytometry, ultrastructural studies, protein structure, image analysis, electron spin resonance, mass spectroscopy, nuclear magnetic resonance, and laboratory animal care.

Courses

069:130 Clinical Laboratory Medicine for Physician Assistants

1 s.h.

Theory and practice of selected clinical laboratory techniques and procedures; emphasis on effective use of clinical laboratory in diagnosis and management of disease. Requirements: Physician Assistant Program enrollment.

069:133 Introduction to Human Pathology for Graduate Students

4 s.h.

Human disease; basic disease processes, organ-related and multisystem diseases; case analysis. Offered fall semesters.

069:150 Clinical Laboratory Skills

0,6 s.h.

Summer clinical laboratory science instruction in Iowa City. Requirements: acceptance to Clinical Laboratory Science Program.

069:152 CLS Theory, Application, and Correlation

0,5 s.h.

Theory, application, and correlation of clinical laboratory science. Prerequisites: 069:150.

069:154 Clinical Chemistry I

0,4 s.h.

Theory, practical application, technical performance, and evaluation of clinical chemistry laboratory procedures; correlation of laboratory data with diagnosis of disease. Prerequisites: 069:150.

069:155 Clinical Chemistry II

0,3 s.h.

Advanced theory, practical application, technical performance, and evaluation of clinical chemistry laboratory procedures; correlation of laboratory data with diagnosis of disease. Prerequisites: 069:154.
069:156 Clinical Hematology I 0,4 s.h.
Introduction to theory, practical application, technical performance, and evaluation of hematological and hemostasis procedures; correlation of laboratory data with disease diagnosis. Prerequisites: 069:150.

069:157 Clinical Hematology II 0,3 s.h.
Advanced theory, practical application, technical performance, and evaluation of hematological and hemostasis procedures; correlation of laboratory data with disease diagnosis. Prerequisites: 069:156.

069:158 Clinical Microbiology I 0,4 s.h.
Introduction to theory, practical application, technical performance, and evaluation of procedures for isolation, identification, and susceptibility testing of infectious disease organisms in humans. Prerequisites: 069:150.

069:159 Clinical Microbiology II 0,3 s.h.
Advanced theory, practical application, technical performance, and evaluation of procedures for isolation, identification, and susceptibility testing of infectious disease organisms in humans. Prerequisites: 069:158.

069:160 Clinical Immunology and Molecular Diagnostics 0,1 s.h.
Theory, application, and evaluation of immunological components, principles, and methodologies used to assess immune dysfunction; theory and application of molecular diagnostic tools. Prerequisites: 069:150.

069:162 Clinical Immunohematology I 0,3 s.h.
Introduction to theory, practical application, technical performance, and evaluation of blood bank procedures required for storage and transfusion of blood and blood components. Prerequisites: 069:150.

069:163 Clinical Immunohematology II 0,2 s.h.
Clinical immunohematology for laboratory science. Prerequisites: 069:162.

069:164 Phlebotomy for Clinical Laboratory Science 0-1 s.h.
Theory, practical application, technical performance, and evaluation of procedures used in collecting, handling, and processing blood specimens. Prerequisites: 069:150.

069:166 Urine and Body Fluid Analysis 0-1 s.h.
Theory, practical application, technical performance, and evaluation of procedures used in analyzing urine and other body fluids, including cerebrospinal, synovial, serous, and amniotic fluids. Prerequisites: 069:150.

069:170 Clinical Laboratory Management I 0,2 s.h.
Theory, practical application, technical performance, and evaluation of laboratory management principles and associated models; critical thinking, problem solving, leadership skills. Prerequisites: 069:150.

069:171 Clinical Laboratory Management II 0,3 s.h.
Advanced theory, application, technical performance, and evaluation of laboratory management principles and associated models; critical thinking, problem solving, leadership skills. Prerequisites: 069:170.

069:172 Clinical Endocrinology and Toxicology I 1 s.h.
Introduction to theory, practical application, and evaluation of clinical chemistry laboratory procedures; emphasis on correlation of clinical laboratory data with diagnosis and treatment of endocrine disorders, toxicology disturbances, and therapeutic drug monitoring.

069:205 Medical Pathology I 5 s.h.
Mechanisms of disease, etiology, pathogenesis, epidemiology, major clinical manifestations of disease in organ systems. Requirements: M.D. enrollment or graduate standing.
069:206 Medical Pathology II  5 s.h.
Mechanisms of disease, etiology, pathogenesis, epidemiology, major clinical manifestations of disease in organ systems. Requirements: 069:205 and M.D. enrollment, or graduate standing.

069:211 Research in Pathology  arr.
Basic aspects of pathology or clinical patient material; emphasis on experimental design, methods, literature review, obtaining formal answers to specific questions. Requirements: M.D. enrollment or graduate standing.

069:220 Seminar in Pathology  1 s.h.
Current research and literature. Repeatable. Requirements: pathology graduate standing.

069:240 Laboratory Medicine in Clinical Practice  arr.
Issues in appropriate use of clinical laboratory and pathology resources in the primary care setting; case-based approach. Requirements: third- or fourth-year M.D. enrollment.

069:241 Autopsy Pathology Clerkship  arr.

069:245 Hematopathology Clerkship  arr.

069:246 Surgical Pathology Clerkship  arr.

069:260 Translational Histopathology  3 s.h.
Didactic sessions on human comparative histology, molecular and cellular pathology, and animal model applications; laboratory sessions on microscopy, histology, histotechnology, and immunohistochemistry, with group discussions of model papers; experience in scientific writing and oral presentation skills; for students who plan to investigate experimental models of human disease. Prerequisites: 156:201, 156:202, and 156:203.

069:270 Pathogenesis of Major Human Diseases  3 s.h.
Critical analysis of pathogenesis models in a series of major human diseases; clinical presentation, analysis of cellular and molecular events leading to the disease, discussion of key papers. Prerequisites: 156:201, 156:202, and 156:203.

069:272 Cancer Molecular Epidemiology Seminar  2 s.h.
Basic tumor biology and lab-based methods applied to development of translational approaches to prevention, early diagnosis, and treatment of human cancers. Offered fall semesters of even years. Same as 173:272.

069:288 Molecular and Cellular Biology of Cancer  3 s.h.
Fundamental aspects of oncology at the cellular and molecular levels; mechanisms of cancer initiation and progression, oncogene action, DNA damage and repair, carcinogenesis by radiation, chemicals, viruses; tumor immunology, anticancer therapies. Offered spring semesters of odd years. Requirements: strong basic science background. Same as 077:288.

069:290 Medical Student Fellowships in Pathology (Externships)  0 s.h.
First-hand experience in autopsy, surgical and clinical pathology, teaching, and research to further understanding of disease mechanisms, normal and pathologic anatomy, laboratory use.

069:291 Warner Fellowship in Experimental Pathology  0 s.h.
One-year, full-time membership in established research laboratory in the Department of Pathology or collaborating laboratory. Requirements: M.D. enrollment.

The Department of Pediatrics provides a solid foundation for M.D. students and postgraduate trainees. It offers extensive opportunities for general pediatrics and subspecialties.

Affiliated programs add depth to the educational program in community pediatrics and primary care. The department is affiliated with the child and material health programs of the Bureau of Family Health, Iowa Department of Public Health; the University of Iowa regional Child Health Specialty Clinics and the Center for Disabilities and Development; Blank Children’s Hospital in Des Moines; and community sites.

M.D. Student Training

Didactic lectures and physical examination of newborns, toddlers, and older children provide M.D. students with their initial pediatric patient contact. This experience includes taking a history, performing a physical examination, appraisal of growth and development, nutrition, and symptomatology of newborns, toddlers, and adolescents.

For junior and senior medical students, the inpatient service provides training in the complex problems of disease and critical illness. Students participate in daily rounds involving general pediatrics and all subspecialties. Challenging and interesting cases are presented for discussion of diagnosis and treatment.

Outpatient experience, available in the junior clerkship and fourth-year electives, stresses principles and practices required for the maintenance of children’s health, treatment of common general pediatric disorders, and the diagnosis and treatment of subspecialty ambulatory patients.

Residency Program, Fellowships

The department offers an accredited three-year residency program designed to prepare trainees for professional careers in general pediatrics or for further fellowship training. The program meets the eligibility requirements of the American Board of Pediatrics (ABP).

Fellowships are available in many pediatrics subspecialties. Fellowship programs encourage development of knowledge and skill through research and clinical orientations in the chosen discipline. Upon satisfactory completion of the program, fellows meet the ABP eligibility requirements in their subspecialty.

Facilities

The Department of Pediatrics is located in the University of Iowa Children’s Hospital at University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics. Inpatient and outpatient areas are adjacent to faculty offices.

The pediatric inpatient service has approximately 120 beds, and more than 50,000 patients are seen each year in the general, specialty, continuity care, and field clinics and in the Emergency Treatment Center. The Center for Disabilities and Development provides resources for children with developmental disabilities, cerebral palsy, or mental retardation.

The department maintains laboratories that perform both clinical and research studies.

Courses

070:002 Clinical Pediatrics  6 s.h.
Principles, practices of health maintenance and treatment of acute and chronic illnesses in children; emphasis on diagnosis and evaluation, nutrition, behavior problems, disorders affecting children; patient care, daily rounds, ward work. Requirements: third-year M.D. enrollment.

070:013 Subinternship in Pediatrics: Blank Children’s Hospital, Des Moines  arr.
Experience in the care of general pediatric inpatients; daily rounds and teaching by senior residents and faculty members; daily didactic conferences. Requirements: fourth-year M.D. enrollment.
070:014 Emergency Room Blank Children’s Hospital, Des Moines
Pediatric emergencies and urgent care, proficiency in pediatric medicine procedures; expansion of basic knowledge. Requirements: fourth-year M.D. enrollment.

070:015 Neonatal Intensive Care Unit, Blank Children’s Hospital
4 s.h.
Experience equivalent to intern on neonatal intensive care unit teaching service at Blank Children’s Hospital, Des Moines; four-week rotation.

070:016 Pediatric Hematology/Oncology
arr.
Basic concepts of clinical approach to hematologic and oncologic problems in children and adolescents; primarily outpatient experience. Requirements: fourth-year M.D. enrollment.

070:017 Pediatric Neurology
arr.
Participation in outpatient and inpatient activities, teaching, morning ward rounds. Requirements: fourth-year M.D. enrollment.

070:019 Pediatric Cardiology
arr.
Participation in clinical activities; observation of cardiac catheterization; experience in cardiac auscultation, ECG, radiography; emphasis on physical diagnosis, approach to heart disease and murmurs in children. Requirements: fourth-year M.D. enrollment.

070:023 Developmental and Behavioral Pediatrics
4 s.h.
Normal developmental sequence of gestation and early childhood, impact of environmental influences; antecedents of developmental disabilities; methods to detect cognitive and motor delays in preschool children; long-term consequences of developmental disabilities for children, their families; advantages of interdisciplinary teamwork. Requirements: fourth-year M.D. enrollment.

070:025 Child Abuse and Neglect
2,4 s.h.
Hospital- and community-based multidisciplinary responses to child abuse and neglect; experience developing diagnostic skills to recognize, assess, and report cases of child abuse and neglect. Requirements: fourth-year M.D. enrollment.

070:027 Neonatology (NICU)
arr.
Experience caring for ill neonates, proficiency in using diagnostic tests and procedures; responsibility for care of several infants; reference and literature review, conferences, teaching, clinical rounds. Requirements: fourth-year M.D. enrollment.

070:028 Pediatric Inpatient Care Subinternship
arr.
Experience on pediatric inpatient team caring for patients ranging from infants through adolescents; evaluation, formulation of differential diagnoses, diagnostic workups, appropriate therapy programs. Requirements: fourth-year M.D. enrollment.

070:029 Critical Care (PICU)
4 s.h.
Direct care of critically ill children in a multidisciplinary medical/surgical/cardiac intensive care unit, under supervision of pediatric residents and staff; participation in educational activities and formal clinical rounds. Requirements: fourth-year M.D. enrollment.

070:030 Medical Genetics for the Senior Student
arr.
Participation in diagnostic, therapeutic problems; techniques for evaluation, appropriate counseling in genetic cases; conferences. Requirements: fourth-year M.D. enrollment.

070:031 Pediatric Nephrology
2,4 s.h.
Introduction to general pediatric nephrology cases and management. Requirements: M.D. enrollment.
070:033 Pediatric Gastroenterology
Diagnosis, management, treatment of diseases of gastrointestinal tract, liver, pancreas in children; ward rounds, consultations, clinics, diagnostic procedures, conferences. Requirements: fourth-year M.D. enrollment.

070:043 Pediatric Allergy
Experience in evaluating and treating respiratory and allergic diseases in infants, children, and adolescents. Requirements: fourth-year M.D. enrollment.

070:055 General Pediatric Outpatient Clinic
4 s.h.
Work in general pediatric outpatient clinics with acutely or chronically ill patients and with well children. Requirements: fourth-year M.D. enrollment.

070:060 Continuity of Care in Outpatient General Pediatrics
4 s.h.
Work with experienced general pediatrician in a longitudinal clinical experience for the academic year; paired with faculty pediatrician to see patients in a weekly clinic, provide clinical care to a defined patient population; growth and development, health supervision, and management of common acute and chronic clinical problems. Requirements: fourth-year M.D. enrollment.

070:110 Medical Genetics
2 s.h.
Gene structure and function, basic genetics concepts, application to problems in human disease. Offered fall semesters. Requirements: M.D. enrollment or graduate standing in related health field.

070:201 Primary Care: Infants, Children, and Adolescents II
3 s.h.

070:245 Evaluation of Children with ADHD and LD
Clinical experience in conducting pediatric neuropsychology examinations in the Pediatric Attention/Learning Disorders Clinic. Requirements: course on psychological testing (including IQ) and graduate psychology standing (school, counseling, rehabilitation, clinical). Same as 07P:207.

070:247 Neuropsychology of Learning Seminar
Research and theory on varied approaches to learning disability; language disability, visual/perceptual disability, serial order and memory deficits. Prerequisites: 070:245 or 070:251. Requirements: course on psychological testing including IQ.

070:251 Clinical Pediatric Neuropsychology
Learning and behavior disorders resulting from central nervous system dysfunction; clinical experience in assessment of cognitive, behavioral patterns.

070:252 Assessment of Attention Deficit Disorder
3 s.h.
Participation in clinical, research, didactic work in evaluating children with attention deficit disorder. Requirements: experience in intellectual assessment of children.

070:253 Assessment of Behavior Disorders
Experience in diagnostic and behavioral assessments of children with conduct disorders.

070:255 Autism Spectrum Disorders
2 s.h.
Overview of autism spectrum disorders (ASDs), including autistic disorder, Asperger’s disorder, other pervasive developmental disorders; ASD diagnoses and their etiology; tools used in assessing individuals with ASDs; common interventions for ASDs; resources for work with individuals who have ASDs.
070:256 Pediatric Psychology Inpatient Practicum
1-3 s.h.
Knowledge and practical skills in implementing psychological practice with hospitalized pediatric patients; referrals include challenging behaviors (e.g., treatment adherence, disruptive behaviors), neuropsychological assessment (e.g., child with seizure disorder, child with TBI), and social-emotional evaluation; how to consult with medical teams and work with families with children who have acute and chronic health conditions, including asthma, diabetes, cancer, brain tumors, burns, head injury. Requirements: enrollment in an applied doctoral program in a psychological field. Recommendations: completion of a practicum in an outpatient Pediatric Psychology Clinic.

070:258 Seminar in Pediatric Psychology
2 s.h.
Basic introduction to the field of pediatric psychology; professional issues in pediatric psychology; consultation and professional relations with physicians; psychological services in pediatric psychology; specialized populations, such as childhood chronic illness, children’s hospitalization and surgery. Requirements: enrollment in an applied doctoral program in a psychological field.

070:260 Neurobehavioral Assessment and Intervention
1-3 s.h.
Experience evaluating the interaction between a child’s neurocognitive profile and their behavior at school and home; interviews with parents/children, assessments to assist in identifying cognitive and learning disorders, behavior analyses to identify interventions; follow-up with families and school teams.

070:261 Autism Assessment and Behavioral Intervention
1-3 s.h.
Experience evaluating children suspected of having an autism spectrum disorder; behavioral assessments/interventions with children who have been diagnosed with an autism spectrum disorder and who display challenging behaviors in home and/or school; interviews with parents, assessments to assist in the diagnosis of autism spectrum disorders, behavioral assessments/interventions; follow-up with families and school teams.

070:262 Biobehavioral Assessment and Intervention
1-3 s.h.
Experience conducting brief functional assessments and behavioral treatments for children and adults with developmental disabilities; interviews with caregivers, behavioral assessments, matched treatments (e.g., functional communication training); follow-up with caregivers.

070:263 Evaluation and Treatment of Pediatric Feeding Disorders
1-3 s.h.
Experience evaluating children with varied feeding disorders, such as food overselectivity by texture or type, dependence on gastrostomy or nasogastric tubes, failure to grow adequately due to inadequate caloric intake; methods to evaluate feeding behaviors, evaluate design interventions, and measure outcomes; caregiver training and follow-up.

070:264 Clinical Applications of Applied Behavior Analysis
1-3 s.h.
Experience behavioral observations, consultation, and/or conducting behavioral assessments (including preference assessments and functional analyses), matched treatments; interviews with care providers, collect behavioral data, conduct behavioral assessments, matched treatments; follow-up with care providers.

070:265 Research in Applied Behavior Analysis
1-3 s.h.
Experience developing and conducting research in applied behavior analysis; conduct behavioral observations, behavioral assessments, matched treatments; weekly readings and lab meetings; participate in research sessions as data collector or therapist.

Graduate programs: M.S., Ph.D. in Pharmacology
Web site: http://www.medicine.uiowa.edu/pharmacology

The Department of Pharmacology provides professional training for health science students and participates with other departments in educational and research activities such as the Medical Scientist Training (p. 1323) Program, the Physician Scientist Training Program, the Molecular and Cellular Biology (p. 1180) Program, the Neuroscience (p. 1183) Program, the Holden Comprehensive Cancer Center, and the Iowa Cardiovascular Center.

The department was a pioneer in offering pharmacology to undergraduate students with little or no science background. The lecture and discussion sessions in 071:120 Drugs: Their Nature, Action, and Use emphasize the mechanisms of drug action and give students a background for rational decisions concerning use of drugs. Undergraduates interested in science careers may attend an eight-week summer research program that provides opportunities for outstanding students to conduct research in faculty laboratories.

Pre- and postdoctoral students pursue research training in all areas of pharmacology in the department in preparation for career opportunities in academia, government, and industry.

Graduate Programs

• Master of Science in pharmacology
• Doctor of Philosophy in pharmacology

Department of Pharmacology graduate study includes both didactic and research experience. Qualified students may pursue an M.S. program in clinical pharmacology or a joint M.D./Ph.D. in the University’s Medical Scientist Training Program.

Master of Science

The Master of Science program in pharmacology requires a minimum of 30 s.h. of graduate credit. Core course requirements are as follows.

071:135 Principles of Pharmacology 1 s.h.
071:136 Pharmacogenetics and Pharmacogenomics 1 s.h.
071:137 Neurotransmitters 1 s.h.
071:203 Pharmacology Research arr.
071:204 Pharmacology Seminar 1 s.h.
071:302 Pharmacology for Graduate Students 6 s.h.
071:215 Graduate Physiology 4 s.h.
156:201 Fundamentals of Gene Expression 1 s.h.
156:202 Fundamentals of Protein Regulation 1 s.h.
156:203 Fundamentals of Dynamic Cell Processes 1 s.h.
156:204 Biostatistics for Biomedical Research 1 s.h.

Students are expected to gain maximum experience in laboratory research while completing their course work. Satisfactory preparation and oral defense of a thesis based on the student’s own research are required for completion of the program.

Doctor of Philosophy

The Doctor of Philosophy program in pharmacology requires a minimum of 72 s.h. of graduate credit. Core course requirements are as follows.

071:135 Principles of Pharmacology 1 s.h.
071:136 Pharmacogenetics and Pharmacogenomics 1 s.h.
071:137 Neurotransmitters 1 s.h.
071:138 Ion Channels 1 s.h.
071:203 Pharmacology Research arr.
071:204 Pharmacology Seminar 1 s.h.
071:208 G Proteins and G Protein-Coupled Receptors 1 s.h.
071:209 Steroid Receptor Signaling 1 s.h.
Individual faculty research advisors may require additional courses.

During the first semester in the program, students are required to work in two different faculty laboratories before selecting a laboratory in which to pursue thesis research. Students then are expected to gain maximum laboratory research experience while completing course work. The Ph.D. comprehensive examination (written and oral) is given at the end of the fourth semester. Satisfactory preparation and oral defense of the thesis complete the program.

There is no departmental foreign language requirement.

Admission

Applicants must meet the admission requirements of the Graduate College; see the Manual of Rules and Regulations of the Graduate College or the Graduate (p. 1117) College section of the Catalog. They should have a g.p.a. of at least 3.00 and a combined verbal and quantitative score of at least 1200 on the Graduate Record Examination (GRE) General Test. They should have completed undergraduate courses in chemistry, biology, biochemistry, and mathematics.

Admission to the graduate programs is determined by the faculty after receipt of a completed formal application and interview (if appropriate) by faculty members or other designated individuals. Each application is reviewed individually. Some standard admission criteria may be set aside for applicants who possess outstanding credentials in other areas.

Financial Support

The department provides all Ph.D. students and some M.S. students with financial support in the form of stipends and tuition support. Support is renewed annually based on satisfactory progress toward meeting degree requirements.

Courses

071:105 Pharmacology for Health Sciences: Medical
Principles of pharmacology, pharmacologic actions of drugs, correlation with therapeutic uses. Offered fall semesters. Prerequisites: 050:240 and 099:163. Requirements: M.D. enrollment.

071:111 Basic Pharmacology for Dental Students
Principles of pharmacology, pharmacologic actions of drugs, correlation with therapeutic uses. Offered spring semesters. Prerequisites: 072:152 and 099:161. Requirements: D.D.S. enrollment.

071:115 Pharmacology for Health Sciences: Nurse Anesthetist
Principles of pharmacology; pharmacologic actions of drugs, correlation with therapeutic uses. Offered fall semesters. Prerequisites: 060:270 or 096:270. Requirements: enrollment in Anesthesia Nursing Program.

071:120 Drugs: Their Nature, Action, and Use
Principles of drug action, toxicity; sedatives, stimulants, hallucinogens, narcotics, over-the-counter agents, antibiotics, oral contraceptives. Offered spring semesters. Recommendations: closed to Pharm.D. students.

071:125 Pharmacology for Health Sciences: Physician Assistant Students
Principles of pharmacology, pharmacologic actions of drugs, correlation with therapeutic uses. Offered fall semesters. Prerequisites: 072:164 and 099:164. Requirements: Physician Assistant Program enrollment.

071:130 Drug Mechanisms and Actions
Introduction to principles of pharmacology, pharmacologic actions of drugs. Offered spring semesters. Requirements: undergraduate biochemistry and physiology courses.

Detailed Course Descriptions:

- 071:135 Principles of Pharmacology: Basic pharmacological principles underlying drug absorption, drug distribution throughout the body, drug metabolism, and drug elimination; how these processes determine drug dosing and the means by which dosing parameters are characterized; drug receptor interactions and their quantitation. Offered spring semesters.

- 071:136 Pharmacogenetics and Pharmacogenomics: Impact of genetic variation on the actions and metabolism of drugs; database search techniques to identify variants. Offered spring semesters. Prerequisites: 071:135. Recommendations: undergraduate or graduate biochemistry.

- 071:137 Neurotransmitters: Mechanisms of neurotransmission focusing on mechanisms of synthesis, regulation of release, mechanisms of action, means of degradation, and CNS pathways for major neurotransmitters; disease states involving various neurotransmitter systems. Offered spring semesters.

- 071:138 Ion Channels: A heuristic, semiquantitative approach to concepts in ion channel physiology and pharmacology; discussions on up-to-date physical principles, classification, and structure/function relationships for major voltage-gated ion channels that facilitate the application of abstract concepts to physiological, pharmacological, and general biological problems. Offered spring semesters.

- 071:203 Pharmacology Research: 1 s.h.

- 071:204 Pharmacology Seminar: 1 s.h.

- 071:209 Steroid Receptor Signaling: Structure-function relationship and genomic and nongenomic actions of the steroid hormone receptor family; basis for actions of novel new ligands on these receptors. Offered spring semesters. Same as 072:209, 132:209.

- 071:210 Special Topics in Pharmacology: 1 s.h.

- 071:215 Topics in Neuropharmacology: Recent advances in neuropharmacology, developmental neurobiology, neuroendocrinology, related neurosciences.

- 071:225 Topics in Molecular Pharmacology: Recent advances in molecular pharmacology; receptor, postreceptor events in stimulus coupling.

- 071:235 Topics in Pain Analgesia: Recent advances in pain research, therapy.
071:250 Advanced Problem Solving in Pharmacological Sciences
1 s.h.
Discussion of methodologies, strategies, and approaches commonly used to solve pharmacological sciences problems; use of interpersonal problem-solving skills to develop experimental study plans for solving contemporary scientific problems in pharmacology.

071:277 Mechanisms of Pain Transmission
3 s.h.
Anatomical, physiological, and pharmacological mechanisms underlying peripheral and central neuronal processing of pain; emphasis on neuronal changes that occur during pathological conditions such as inflammation/arthritis, peripheral neuropathy. Offered fall semesters of even years. Same as 101:277, 132:277.

071:302 Pharmacology for Graduate Students
6 s.h.
Principles of pharmacology, pharmacologic actions of drugs, correlation with therapeutic uses. Offered fall semesters. Prerequisites: 072:153, 156:201, 156:202, and 156:203.

Graduate degrees: D.P.T.; M.A. in Physical Therapy, Ph.D. in Physical Rehabilitation Science

Web site: http://www.healthcare.uiowa.edu/PhysicalTherapy

Physical therapists provide services to patients and clients who have impairments, functional limitations, disabilities, pain, or changes in physical function resulting from injury, disease, or other causes. Physical therapists practice and collaborate with a variety of health professionals. In the area of health promotion and wellness, they provide screening examinations, prescribe fitness programs, and educate the public regarding healthy lifestyles. Research, teaching, consultation, and administration also are parts of a physical therapist’s professional role.

A wide variety of opportunities exist for professional practice in inpatient, outpatient, and community-based settings. Examples include practice in general or specialized hospitals, programs for children with disabilities, private physical therapy clinics, extended care facilities, nursing homes, community and governmental agencies, rehabilitation centers, the armed forces, foreign service, home health agencies, school systems, fitness centers, and athletic facilities. Research and teaching careers in academic institutions are available for those who earn a Ph.D. in rehabilitation science.

The Physical Therapy and Rehabilitation Science Program is located in the Carver College of Medicine on the University of Iowa health sciences campus, which includes University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics, one of the nation’s largest university-owned teaching hospitals. The program has eight state-of-the-art independent research laboratories and is well equipped for classroom and laboratory instruction and innovative research. Students have access to faculty members in the basic sciences and medicine, basic sciences courses, clinical specialty expertise, and innovative learning experiences associated with a medical college environment.

Graduate Programs
- Doctor of Physical Therapy
- Master of Arts in physical therapy
- Doctor of Philosophy in physical rehabilitation science

The Doctor of Physical Therapy (D.P.T.) is the entry-level professional degree for physical therapists. The Master of Arts in physical therapy is granted to students working toward the Doctor of Philosophy in physical rehabilitation science. Each year 36 students are admitted to the D.P.T. program and around 20 physical therapists are enrolled in the Ph.D. program.
Doctor of Physical Therapy

The Doctor of Physical Therapy requires a minimum of 101 s.h. and is completed in two and one-half years. The program is fully accredited by the Commission on Accreditation in Physical Therapy Education. Satisfactory completion of the professional program qualifies candidates to take the National Physical Therapy Examination for licensure to practice. The minimum passing score on the exam is the same in all jurisdictions.

Technical Standards for Graduation

Doctor of Physical Therapy graduates must possess and demonstrate the physical and cognitive skills and character attributes required to provide physical therapy services in a broad variety of clinical situations and environments. All D.P.T. candidates must perform, with or without reasonable accommodation, the following skills safely, effectively, efficiently, and in compliance with the legal and ethical standards set by the American Physical Therapy Association Code of Ethics and Standards of Practice:

- communicate effectively through appropriate verbal, nonverbal, and written communication with patients, families, and others;
- demonstrate ability to apply universal precautions;
- utilize appropriate tests and measures in order to perform a physical therapy examination; examples include, but are not limited to, examination and evaluation of cognitive/mental status, vital signs, skin and vascular integrity, wound status, endurance, segmental length, girth, volume, sensation, strength, tone, reflexes, movement patterns, coordination, balance, developmental stage, soft tissue, joint motion/play, cranial and peripheral nerve function, posture, gait, functional abilities, assistive devices fit/use, psychosocial needs, and the pulmonary system;
- demonstrate the ability to reach diagnostic and therapeutic judgments through analysis and synthesis of data gathered during patient/client examination in order to develop an appropriate plan of care;
- perform fully, or in a reasonably independent manner, physical therapy interventions appropriate to the patient’s status and desired goals;
- apply teaching/learning theories and methods in health care and community environments;
- accept criticism and respond by appropriate behavior modification;
- possess the perseverance, diligence, and consistency to complete the physical therapy curriculum and enter the practice of physical therapy.

Applicants with health conditions or disabilities who need accommodation to meet the technical standards for graduation should contact the University’s Student Disability Services office.

Curriculum

The Doctor of Physical Therapy degree requires the following course work (total of 101 s.h.). Students have the option to earn a total of 3 s.h. in electives.

Admission

Applicants must meet the admission requirements of the Graduate College; see the Manual of Rules and Regulations of the Graduate College or the Graduate (p. 1117) College section of the Catalog. They must have completed a baccalaureate degree from an accredited institution in the United States, or anticipate completing the degree before enrolling in the D.P.T. program. They must have a cumulative g.p.a. of at least 3.00 and must have completed the following prerequisite course work, preferably with a g.p.a. of at least 3.00. All science courses must include the appropriate laboratory instruction. The prerequisite courses must have been taken for a letter grade. Credit awarded through advanced placement testing may be applied only to the mathematics requirement.

Biological sciences: a complete introductory course in principles of general biology or zoology, and advanced course work in biology or zoology (for which an introductory course is prerequisite) equivalent to 12 s.h.

Physics: a complete introductory course equivalent to 8 s.h.

Chemistry: a complete introductory course equivalent to 8 s.h.

Physiology: a systemic human physiology course equivalent to 3 s.h.

Psychology: courses equivalent to 6 s.h.

Mathematics: a college-level mathematics course, at the level of trigonometry or higher, equivalent to 3 s.h.

Statistics: a statistical methods course equivalent to 3 s.h.

The program recommends that applicants have a combined verbal and quantitative score of at least 1000 on the Graduate Record Examination (GRE) General Test. They must take the test early enough for their scores to be received by the University in time for the November 1 application deadline.

Applications are submitted online through the Physical Therapist Centralized Application Service (PTCAS). PTCAS allows applicants to use a single application and one set of materials to apply to multiple physical therapy programs. Once the application portfolio is complete, PTCAS forwards it to The University of Iowa.

Personal interviews are required of applicants selected for consideration by the admissions committee. Interviews are conducted at The University of Iowa. The physical therapy admissions committee selects applicants who appear to be best qualified for the study and practice of the profession. Some preference is given to Iowa residents.

Applications are accepted from July 1 to November 1 for entry the following summer. Prospective students should apply as early as possible.

EARLY ADMISSION

The Doctor of Physical Therapy early admission plan is available to outstanding applicants. Generally, applicants have a g.p.a. of 3.75 or higher and a combined verbal and quantitative score above 1100 on the Graduate Record Examination (GRE) General Test. Application materials are the same as those for regular admission. Application deadline is September 15; applicants are notified of admission by December 1. Those who are interviewed but are not selected for early admission are automatically placed in the final general applicant pool. Contact the Physical Therapy and Rehabilitation Science Program for more information.

Background Checks

Enrollment in the Doctor of Physical Therapy program is contingent on a successful criminal background check. Drug screening may be required for some clinical rotations.

Expenses

Applicants admitted to the D.P.T. program must make an advance tuition payment of $300, which is forfeited if the applicant does not enroll. In addition to paying University tuition and fees, students are assessed laboratory fees for the human anatomy and medical neuroscience courses and are responsible for purchasing lab coats, patient evaluation kits, and course syllabi.

All students are required to comply with the pre-entry and periodic health screening program developed by Student Health Service in cooperation with University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics. Students must pay for the health screenings. Students also are required to have health insurance.

Ph.D. in Physical Rehabilitation Science

The Doctor of Philosophy in physical rehabilitation science requires a minimum of 72 s.h. of graduate credit. The program is designed to advance the student's ability to independently develop and carry out research that establishes the scientific basis for prevention, evaluation, and treatment of impairments, functional limitations, and disability. The curriculum is flexible enough to accommodate research focusing on basic, applied, or clinical studies in the rehabilitation sciences. Students have access to the program's research laboratories (see "Research Facilities" later in this section).

Graduates who complete the program are prepared for academic appointments that emphasize research, scholarship, and teaching. They possess:

• theoretical and scientific knowledge to perform basic, applied, or clinical-level original research that leads to scientific presentations, publication in peer-reviewed journals, and competition for extramural funding through scientific grant writing;

• breadth of knowledge in exercise physiology, biomechanic, neuroscience, or motor control specialty areas as they relate to impairment, functional limitation, and disability; and

• theoretical and practical skills required for college or university teaching at the professional entry and advanced graduate levels.

Curriculum

Ph.D. students complete a minimum of 72 s.h. beyond the baccalaureate. Each student and his or her faculty advisor develop an individualized study plan. A preliminary study plan is developed within the first 9 s.h. of graduate study; a final plan is submitted to the Graduate College when the Ph.D. comprehensive examination is scheduled.

To ensure breadth of knowledge, all students complete specific core, research, and scientific specialty area content courses. Elective courses are selected to provide in-depth study of the specialty; they are complemented by an advanced seminar course specific to the student's specialty and taken in preparation for the comprehensive examination.

Students must satisfactorily complete the comprehensive examination, which is taken after all required course work is completed. Doctoral study culminates with 12 s.h. of thesis research and an oral examination.

GENERAL CORE REQUIREMENT

Ph.D. students must complete the following core requirements. Exception: the capstone course (101:300 Rehabilitation Research Capstone Project) is recommended but not required for students who enter the program with a master's or doctoral-level degree; however, it is required for all students who enter the program with a bachelor's degree.

Admission

Applicants must meet the admission requirements of the Graduate College; see the Manual of Rules and Regulations of the Graduate College or the Graduate (p. 1117) College section of the Catalog. They should have a cumulative g.p.a. of at least 3.00 and a combined verbal and quantitative score of at least 1100 on the Graduate Record Exam (GRE) General Test. A minimum of two years of clinical experience is desirable.

Applicants whose first language is not English must score at least 600 (paper-based), 250 (computer-based), or 100 (Internet-based) on the Test of English as a Foreign Language (TOEFL).

Application materials must include a complete Graduate College application form, test scores, transcripts, three letters of recommendation, and a statement of purpose. Completed applications should be sent to the Physical Therapy and Rehabilitation Science Program.

Personal interviews are required of all applicants selected for consideration by the admissions committee. On-campus interviews are preferred, but telephone interviews may be substituted when necessary.

Application deadlines are October 15 for spring semester entry (notification by December 15); March 15 for summer entry (notification by May 15); and May 15 for fall semester entry (notification by July 15).

Financial Support

A number of research assistantships are available for Ph.D. students. Faculty advisors provide guidance for students seeking external scholarship support through foundations and federal programs that support Ph.D. training.

Research Facilities

The program’s state-of-the-art research facilities include the Orthopedic Gait Analysis Laboratory and a spinal cord research laboratory at University Hospitals and Clinics; the Neuromuscular Research/Motor Control Laboratory; the Musculoskeletal Biomechanics and Sports Medicine Research Laboratory; the Neurobiology of Pain Laboratory; the Neural Control of Movement Laboratory; and the Neuromuscular Biomechanics Laboratory. Use of other laboratories may be arranged.

Courses

101:119 Physical Therapy Management and Administration I 2 s.h.

The changing U.S. health care system; access to physical therapy services, reimbursement to health care providers, mechanisms for controlling costs while providing quality care; clinical vignettes, small group problem solving. Requirements: Physical Therapy and Rehabilitation Science Program enrollment.

101:120 Professional Issues and Ethics 1 s.h.

Evolution of physical therapy and rehabilitation science as a profession; contemporary issues in education and practice; ethical theory and approaches to analyzing and acting on ethical problems; professional and peer relationships. Requirements: Physical Therapy and Rehabilitation Science Program enrollment.

101:121 Physical Therapy Management and Administration II 1 s.h.

101:122 Psychosocial Aspects of Patient Care 1 s.h.

Emotional reactions to disability, psychosocial aspects of disability as they relate to patient-physical therapist interaction; specific problems of the angry, non-compliant, or chronic-pain patient; complementary roles of other health professionals; cultural competence in professional behavior and patient treatment; importance of holistic health care. Requirements: Physical Therapy and Rehabilitation Science Program enrollment.

101:131 Therapeutic Physical Agents 2 s.h.

Theoretical and practical applications for safe, effective use of physical agents (superficial and deep heat, cold, hydrotherapy), electrotherapeutic modalities (biofeedback, NMES, TENS, iontophoresis); massage and soft tissue mobilization; emphasis on problem solving, clinical decision making. Requirements: Physical Therapy and Rehabilitation Science Program enrollment.

101:133 Pain Mechanisms and Treatment 1-2 s.h.

Introduction to basic science mechanisms, assessment, and management of pain; basic science mechanism involved in transmission and perception of painful stimuli after tissue injury, assessment and physical therapy management of pain; emphasis on scientific principles and published literature to support treatment techniques. Requirements: Physical Therapy and Rehabilitation Science Program enrollment.
101:134 Physical Therapy
Management of Integumentary System
2 s.h.
Overview of physical therapy examination and management of the integumentary system; wound pathology, diagnosis associated with the integumentary system, inflammation and repair, examination and reexamination techniques, documentation, clinical decision making, lecture and laboratory formats; interventions, including patient/client information, physical agents, electrotherapy, wound dressing. Requirements: Physical Therapy and Rehabilitation Science Program enrollment.

101:140 Introduction to Physical Therapy Practice
2 s.h.
Lectures, case presentations, and group activities using the Guide to Physical Therapist Practice; elements of the patient/client management model, concepts of the disablement model, preferred practice patterns as applied in clinical problems; importance of professionalism, professional socialization; introduction to evidence-based practice; competence in medical terminology. Requirements: Physical Therapy and Rehabilitation Science Program enrollment.

101:141 Principles of Physical Therapy I
2 s.h.
Patient management skills: interviewing, medical history taking, vital signs, positioning, draping, transfers, body mechanics, assisted gait, wheelchairs, and negotiation of architectural barriers. Requirements: Physical Therapy and Rehabilitation Science Program enrollment.

101:142 Principles of Physical Therapy II
2 s.h.
Continuation of 101:141; expansion of existing skills and provides new learning experiences in documentation, assessment of joint range of motion/goniometry, manual muscle testing, preambulatory intervention strategies, gait analysis; musculoskeletal, neuromuscular, and integumentary systems review. Prerequisites: 101:141. Requirements: Physical Therapy and Rehabilitation Science Program enrollment.

101:143 Selected Topics in Physical Therapy Practice
2 s.h.
Specialty topics in physical therapy, such as women’s health, aquatic therapy, patient care across the lifespan, alternative or new treatments; guest lectures, lab component.

101:151 Progressive Functional Exercise
2 s.h.
Therapeutic exercise options (e.g., isometrics, isotonics, isokinetics, plyometrics, endurance exercises, stretching exercises) and training principles; application to functional activities, including those of daily living, work, recreation, and sport; laboratory component. Requirements: Physical Therapy and Rehabilitation Science Program enrollment.

101:170 Prosthetics and Orthotics
2 s.h.
Physical therapy management and assessment of patients in need of prosthetic and orthotic devices; principles and components of prosthetic and orthotic design and use. Requirements: Physical Therapy and Rehabilitation Science Program enrollment.

101:172 Radiology/Imaging for Physical Therapists
2 s.h.
Basic principles and procedures for acquisition and interpretation of radiology and imaging in clinical practice and research; plain film radiographs, CT, MRI, other common imaging modalities; case-based, multidisciplinary approach. Requirements: Physical Therapy and Rehabilitation Science Program enrollment.

101:173 Differential Diagnosis in Physical Therapy
2 s.h.
Use of physical therapy examination and evaluation skills to diagnose physical therapy problems; focus on use of good clinical decision-making skills when analyzing a patient’s history and administering physical therapy tests and measures to confirm or rule out differential diagnoses; components of the medical examination; importance of collaboration between therapists and other health professionals; interactive case studies presented by clinical experts. Requirements: Physical Therapy and Rehabilitation Science Program enrollment.
101:176 Pharmacology for Physical Therapists
3 s.h.
Contemporary pharmacology; overview of basic pharmacokinetic and pharmacodynamic principles; relation of drug therapy to therapeutic interventions provided by physical therapists; small group clinical case presentations. Requirements: Physical Therapy and Rehabilitation Science Program enrollment.

101:185 Musculoskeletal Therapeutics I
3 s.h.
Musculoskeletal techniques and biomechanical principles applied to assessment and evaluation of common orthopedic problems of the spine; problem solving, case-study approach to clinical methods, skill acquisition. Requirements: Physical Therapy and Rehabilitation Science Program enrollment.

101:189 Clinical Education I
1 s.h.
Integrated clinical experiences in area physical therapy clinics; overview of the diverse nature of practice through half- or full-day experience; basic skills in examination, intervention, documentation. Requirements: Physical Therapy and Rehabilitation Science Program enrollment.

101:190 Clinical Education II
1 s.h.
Continuation of 101:189; integrated half-day clinical experiences. Prerequisites: 101:189. Requirements: Physical Therapy and Rehabilitation Science Program enrollment.

101:191 Clinical Education III
1 s.h.
Two-week, full-time clinical experience in physical therapy clinics in Iowa, under the guidance of physical therapists; theory and practice of physical therapy procedures, competence building in basic skills. Prerequisites: 101:190. Requirements: Physical Therapy and Rehabilitation Science Program enrollment.

101:194 Clinical Internship
arr.
Full-time clinical education divided among varied settings; development of competence in independent examination, evaluation, and treatment of patients under supervision of clinical faculty. Requirements: Physical Therapy and Rehabilitation Science Program enrollment.

101:200 Pediatric Physical Therapy
arr.
Preparation for physical therapy practice in pediatric settings using interdisciplinary family-centered practice; normal and abnormal development, standardized assessment, service-delivery settings, interventions, management strategies specific to pediatrics. Requirements: Physical Therapy and Rehabilitation Science Program enrollment.

101:201 Applied Clinical Medicine
2 s.h.
Pathological disorders frequently encountered by physical therapists in clinical practice, addressed by physicians and health professionals who are not physical therapists; physical therapy management. Requirements: Physical Therapy and Rehabilitation Science Program enrollment.

101:202 Musculoskeletal Therapeutics II
3 s.h.
Pathology, assessment, management of orthopedic disorders of the upper quarter; problem-solving approach to evaluation and management of patients with musculoskeletal conditions. Prerequisites: 101:185. Requirements: Physical Therapy and Rehabilitation Science Program enrollment.

101:203 Musculoskeletal Therapeutics III
4 s.h.

101:205 Health Promotion and Wellness
3 s.h.
Overview of health promotion, fitness, and wellness strategies, including information on levels of health promotion, risk assessment, applied physiology (skeletal muscle, energy metabolism, and physiological responses to exercise), exercise testing and training guidelines, body composition assessment, and development of individual weight management and exercise training programs; classroom and laboratory experiences. Requirements: Physical Therapy and Rehabilitation Science Program enrollment.
101:206 Cardiopulmonary Therapeutics
Cardiorespiratory anatomy, physiology, and application of basic concepts, techniques in management of patients with acute and chronic cardiac, pulmonary disorders; laboratories. Requirements: Physical Therapy and Rehabilitation Science Program enrollment.

101:209 Surface Anatomy
Laboratory teaching activities that parallel the human anatomy course; observation, palpation, and problem solving skills; upper and lower-limb, head and neck, thorax, and abdomen. Requirements: Physical Therapy and Rehabilitation Science Program enrollment.

101:210 Kinesiology and Pathomechanics
Normal and pathological movement based on understanding of muscle mechanics, segment and joint mechanics, muscle function; instructor- and student-centered learning experiences; EMG laboratories. Requirements: Physical Therapy and Rehabilitation Science Program enrollment.

101:212 Biomedical Instrumentation and Measurement
Introduction to biomedical instrumentation and measurement, with focus on understanding sources of error and noise in biomedical research applications; basic circuit analysis, calibration of measurement tools, A/D conversion, digital filtering; lab components. Offered fall semesters of even years.

101:214 Advanced Seminar in Rehabilitation Science
Current status of research for biological, mechanical, psychological components pertinent to cardiopulmonary, musculoskeletal, neuromuscular areas of rehabilitation science; preparation for comprehensive exam.

101:220 Seminar in Rehabilitation Science
Exploration of research related to rehabilitation science; lectures by faculty, graduate students, and guest scholars with expertise in areas relevant to rehabilitation science (e.g., neuroscience, physiology, medicine, engineering, pharmacology, integrated physiology).

101:224 Principles of Motor Control
Sensorimotor mechanisms involved with normal and abnormal neuromuscular systems function; skeletal muscle properties/plasticity, muscle fatigue, neural mechanisms of muscle strengthening, spinal circuitry, simple and complex reflexes, spasticity, rigidity, posture control/balance, motor learning, applied neurological assessment of pathological conditions, such as stroke, SCI. Requirements: Physical Therapy and Rehabilitation Science Program enrollment.

101:225 Neuromuscular Therapeutics
Application of clinical neuroscience knowledge and motor control and motor learning concepts to the practice of neurological physical therapy; emphasis on diagnosis and therapeutic intervention for persons with central nervous system dysfunction of adult onset. Prerequisites: 101:224. Requirements: Physical Therapy and Rehabilitation Science Program enrollment.

101:235 Case-Based Learning I
Small group case study seminars and simulated patient instructor learning experiences; clinical problems coordinated with concurrent courses; student-centered, problem-based learning format with emphasis on evidence-based practice objectives. First in a two-course sequence. Requirements: Physical Therapy and Rehabilitation Science Program enrollment.
101:236 Case-Based Learning II 1 s.h.
Small-group seminars, consisting of six students and one faculty facilitator per group, and simulated patient clinical assessment labs; three clinical cases presented each semester with three one-and-one-half hour seminars per case; simulated patient experience; clinical problems coordinated with concurrent courses taken in the curriculum; student centered, problem-based learning format; emphasis on evidence-based practice objectives. Second in a two-part series of integrated courses. Prerequisites: 101:235. Requirements: Physical Therapy and Rehabilitation Science Program enrollment.

101:237 Service Learning I 1 s.h.
Service-learning work experience with one of four community partners (Miracles in Motion, Camp Courageous, Elder Services, Pathways Adult Daycare); students develop individual learning goals for the semester-long experiences; classroom reflection on service activities, experiences with the elderly and/or disabled, and on social responsibility, advocacy, and professionalism in physical therapy; written reflection assignments. First in a two-course sequence. Requirements: Physical Therapy and Rehabilitation Science Program enrollment.

101:238 Service Learning II 1 s.h.
Service-learning work experience with a community partner; learning goals, papers, journals, final project poster presentation. Prerequisites: 101:237. Requirements: Physical Therapy and Rehabilitation Science Program enrollment.

101:248 Research in Physical Therapy 2 s.h.
Topics relevant to evidence-based practice and research design; identification of appropriate questions for research and clinical applications, location and evaluation of available evidence, identification of issues that affect validity of research designs, interpretation of basic statistical analyses. Requirements: Physical Therapy and Rehabilitation Science Program enrollment.

101:251 Critical Inquiry in Physical Therapy I 2 s.h.
Experience conducting group research projects under faculty supervision; data collection and analysis, manuscript preparation, oral defense of research findings during a formal poster presentation. Prerequisites: 101:248. Requirements: Physical Therapy and Rehabilitation Science Program enrollment.

101:252 Critical Inquiry in Physical Therapy II 1 s.h.
Principles and procedures learned in 101:248 and 101:251 applied to a clinical setting; students write and present a case report with an evidence-based practice focus, using a clinical case from their final internships. Requirements: Physical Therapy and Rehabilitation Science Program enrollment.

101:275 Analysis of Sensori-Motor Systems in Health and Disease 3 s.h.
Neurophysiological mechanisms underlying posture, movement in normal and pathologic conditions; systems approach to neuromuscular system function, including skeletal muscle plasticity, muscle fatigue, neurological adaptations to strengthening, spinal circuitry, complex reflexes, spasticity, rigidity, posture/balance, motor learning; specific applications to CNS disease states (SCI, stroke, degenerative diseases). Offered fall semesters.

101:277 Mechanisms of Pain Transmission 3 s.h.
Anatomical, physiological, and pharmacological mechanisms underlying peripheral and central neuronal processing of pain; emphasis on neuronal changes that occur during pathological conditions such as inflammation/arthritis, peripheral neuropathy. Offered fall semesters of even years. Same as 071:277, 132:277.

101:280 Teaching Practicum arr.
Individual instruction, observation, experimentation in teaching, guidance, analysis of evaluation processes in Physical Therapy and Rehabilitation Science Program.
101:284 Practicum in Research
Laboratory experiences connected with investigative process; individual instruction, observation, activities in methodological development, data acquisition, data analysis aspects of research.

101:285 Biomechanical Analysis in Rehabilitation
Assessment of pathological movement through human movement analysis techniques, including link segment modeling and analysis, mechanical energy and power analysis, electromyography and muscle modeling.

101:300 Rehabilitation Research Capstone Project
Specific phases of the research process; development of a research question and associated hypotheses, collection and analysis of data, interpretation and discussion of the information’s meaning; presentation to sponsoring mentor’s laboratory/program, and written document.

101:301 Thesis: Rehabilitation Science

101:325 Independent Study
Problem-solving experience in physical therapy; commensurate with student’s interest, ability.

101:326 Scientific Writing in Rehabilitation Science
Knowledge of and experience related to scientific writing, critical review of scientific literature, publication in the biomedical sciences, thesis/dissertation writing, grant writing, scientific presentation, writing used in academic and scientific careers.

101:327 Research in Rehabilitation Science
Placement of physical therapy on sound scientific base; therapy; initiation, refinement, establishment of methods in physical therapy evaluation, treatment; direct clinical and laboratory approach, philosophical treatise, or research proposal.

The physician assistant profession is one of the newest and most exciting in health care. Physician assistants (PAs) are licensed to practice medicine with physician supervision. They are responsible for making medical decisions and providing a broad range of diagnostic and therapeutic services.

Physician assistants work in a variety of settings, including medical offices, hospital emergency rooms, nursing homes, rural satellite clinics, health maintenance organizations, and patients’ homes.

In the traditional office setting, PAs see patients, obtain histories, perform physical examinations, and order necessary laboratory and/or radiological studies. Based on this information, the PA establishes a diagnosis, develops an appropriate management plan, and initiates treatment that may include prescribing medications. The physician is consulted as needed and remains ultimately responsible for the care provided by the physician/PA team. PAs also are involved in both patient and community health education.

The Physician Assistant Program is administered by the Carver College of Medicine. It is located on the University of Iowa health sciences campus, which includes University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics, one of the nation’s largest university-owned teaching hospitals.

Graduate Program

- Master of Physician Assistant Studies

The Master of Physician Assistant Studies (M.P.A.S.) program emphasizes primary care medicine, particularly family medicine. It also offers elective clinical rotations in selected medical subspecialties. Students who complete the program are eligible to take the National Certifying Examination for Primary Care Physician Assistants, which they must complete successfully in order to register as physician assistants in the United States.

The Physician Assistant Program is accredited by the Accreditation Review Commission on Education for the Physician Assistant, Inc., and is a member of the Physician Assistant Education Association.

Master of Physician Assistant Studies

The Master of Physician Assistant Studies requires a minimum of 104 s.h. The curriculum spans 25 months and is divided into two phases, didactic and clinical. Both phases emphasize primary health care delivery and the physician assistant’s role as a member of the health care team. The program is integrated with teaching at the Carver College of Medicine, permitting interdisciplinary activities between Doctor of Medicine and health care professions students. Physician assistant students complete approximately 65 percent of the curriculum’s didactic phase with second-year M.D. students; see Doctor of Medicine (p. 1300) in the Catalog.

The first phase is conducted on the University’s health sciences campus. It begins in late May with seven months of course work in a number of basic science areas, including anatomy, biochemistry, infectious disease, pathology, pharmacology, and physiology. Whenever appropriate, related subjects are integrated to provide sequential lecture and laboratory experience. The first phase also includes 050:174 Foundations of Clinical Practice for Physician Assistants as well as courses in clinical decision making and an introductory course on taking a medical history and performing a physical examination.

The program’s patient assessment curriculum couples a sequence of didactic instruction with practical experiences involving simulated and real patients. The level and intensity of patient interactions increase throughout the curriculum as the student gains confidence and clinical competence.
The spring semester of the first phase consists of 050:175 Foundations of Clinical Practice IV for Physician Assistants, an 18-week course. Three interrelated courses focus on the application of basic science knowledge to understanding clinical-pathologic correlations of common and/or catastrophic disorders encountered in clinical medicine’s major disciplines. The courses continue with instruction in obtaining a problem-oriented medical history and performing a physical examination. The semester also includes continuation of the clinical decision-making course and a short course in clinical pathology.

Before clinical rotations begin, students complete 117:110 Introduction to Clinical Skills, which includes instruction in several skill areas (e.g., suturing, injections, prescription writing, medical orders, Advanced Cardiac Life Support).

The program’s second phase concentrates on clinical education. In 117:201 Clinical Decision Making III, students select a pertinent health question and apply an evidence-based medicine review of the data. They give a PowerPoint presentation of their findings to their colleagues, write a paper for submission to a journal, or prepare a poster presentation for a conference. They also complete 117:107 Seminar for Physician Assistant Students, in which they research and discuss professional issues that will affect their practice as physician assistants.

Students complete a 40-week core of required primary care clinical rotations, including six weeks each of general internal medicine and surgery and four weeks each of family medicine I, family medicine II, pediatrics, long-term care, emergency medicine, gynecology, and psychiatry. Students also select eight weeks of electives, which may include rotations such as geriatrics, cardiology, dermatology, and orthopaedics.

The primary care clinical rotations are designed to provide instruction and experience in caring for patients in a way that enables students to integrate the knowledge, skills, behaviors, and attitudes they learned in the program’s didactic phase. Clinical training is provided at University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics, the Iowa City Veterans Affairs Medical Center, the Veterans Affairs Central Iowa Health Care System and Broadlawns Medical Center in Des Moines, and other affiliated hospitals throughout Iowa. In elective rotations, students gain additional clinical experience through placement with selected preceptors involved in office-based practices, typically in medically underserved rural areas.

The Master of Physician Assistant curriculum is as follows.

FIRST YEAR (PHASE I)

Summer and Fall

050:174 Foundations of Clinical Practice for Physician Assistants 5 s.h.
060:111 Gross Human Anatomy for Physician Assistant Students 6 s.h.
061:104 Principles Infectious Diseases--Physician Assistant 5 s.h.
069:133 Introduction to Human Pathology for Graduate Students 4 s.h.
071:125 Pharmacology for Health Sciences: Physician Assistant Students 6 s.h.
072:164 Human Physiology for Physician Assistant Students 4 s.h.
099:164 Biochemistry for Physician Assistant Students 3 s.h.
117:101 Introduction to Medical History and Physical Examination for Physician Assistant Students 3 s.h.
117:103 Clinical Decision Making I 1 s.h.

Spring

050:175 Foundations of Clinical Practice IV for Physician Assistants 13 s.h.
050:183 Healthcare Ethics, Law, and Policy 2 s.h.
069:130 Clinical Laboratory Medicine for Physician Assistants 1 s.h.
117:104 Clinical Decision Making II 1 s.h.

SECOND YEAR (PHASE II)

117:107 Seminar for Physician Assistant Students 1 s.h.
117:110 Introduction to Clinical Skills 1 s.h.
117:201 Clinical Decision Making III 1 s.h.

The following are required clinical rotations.

117:300 Emergency Medicine for Physician Assistant Students 4 s.h.
117:301 Gynecology for Physician Assistant Students 4 s.h.
117:302 Family Practice I for Physician Assistant Students 4 s.h.
117:303 Family Practice II for Physician Assistant Students 4 s.h.
117:304 General Surgery for Physician Assistant Students 6 s.h.
117:305 Internal Medicine for Physician Assistant Students 6 s.h.
117:306 Pediatrics for Physician Assistant Students 4 s.h.
Elective clinical rotations are selected from the following.

Admission

Applicants must meet the admission requirements of the Graduate College; see the Manual of Rules and Regulations of the Graduate College or the Graduate (p. 1117) College section of the Catalog.

Applicants must be citizens or permanent residents of the United States. Applicants whose first language is not English and who do not hold a master’s or doctoral degree from an accredited U.S. institution must score at least 93 (total score, Internet-based) and 26 (speaking score, Internet-based) on the Test of English as a Foreign Language (TOEFL). Only the Internet-based test is accepted. Scores must be sent to the Physician Assistant Program by the Educational Testing Service.

Applicants must have taken the Graduate Record Examination (GRE) General Test or the Medical College Admission Test (MCAT) within the 10 years before they apply. They must hold a baccalaureate degree from an accredited institution in the United States and have a cumulative g.p.a. and a science g.p.a. of at least 3.00 on a 4.00 scale or a g.p.a. of at least 3.00 on their last 40 s.h. of college-level science course work. They must have completed preparatory science courses in organic and inorganic chemistry, introductory animal biology or zoology, and general statistics or biostatistics. They also must have completed upper-level courses in human or animal physiology (lower-level combined anatomy/physiology courses do not satisfy this requirement); three upper-level courses in endocrinology, microbiology, histology, and/or related disciplines; and an introductory biochemistry course (combined organic/biochemistry courses do not satisfy this requirement). Courses in cell biology, cell physiology, genetics, immunology, molecular biology, neurobiology, and parasitology are recommended.

Applicants must have at least 1,200 hours of health care experience.

The admissions committee gives special attention to applicants’ performance in science courses. Some successful applicants have had a g.p.a. of at least 3.70, both cumulative and in science; up to 141 s.h. of college credit, including at least 81 s.h. in the sciences; and more than 3,000 hours of clinical and/or research experience.

Satisfaction of the basic admission requirements does not ensure acceptance to the program. The admissions committee selects the applicants it considers best qualified. Previous health care experience involving direct patient contact is preferred. The committee requests interviews with the most qualified applicants.

Applications are accepted from April 1 to November 1 for entry the following May. Each applicant must complete the Physician Assistant Education Association centralized application, which includes three letters of recommendation, GRE scores, and transcripts. The majority of prerequisite course requirements must be completed by the November 1 application deadline.

Expenses

In addition to University of Iowa tuition and fees, Physician Assistant Program students must purchase their medical uniforms and diagnostic equipment, an expense of approximately $1,700. Microscopes are not required.

Courses

117:001 Physician Assistant Clinical Second Year 0-3 s.h.

117:101 Introduction to Medical History and Physical Examination for Physician Assistant Students 1 s.h.

117:103 Clinical Decision Making I 1 s.h.

117:104 Clinical Decision Making II 1 s.h.

117:107 Seminar for Physician Assistant Students 1 s.h.

117:110 Introduction to Clinical Skills 1 s.h.

117:201 Clinical Decision Making III 1 s.h.
117:300 Emergency Medicine for Physician Assistant Students
Obtaining and recording pertinent historical data, obtaining indicated laboratory studies, assessing the results, arriving at a diagnosis, formulating a treatment plan, implementing appropriate therapy.

117:301 Gynecology for Physician Assistant Students 4 s.h.
Opportunity to develop proficiency in history and physical exams of gynecological patients; outpatient, family planning, gynecological cancer, concepts of diagnostic techniques and therapy.

117:302 Family Practice I for Physician Assistant Students 4 s.h.
Obtaining and recording complete history and physical exams; formulation of differential diagnosis and problem list; ordering, obtaining, and interpreting lab and diagnostic studies; implementation of therapeutic procedures and treatment plans.

117:303 Family Practice II for Physician Assistant Students 4 s.h.
Opportunity to participate in delivery of ambulatory primary care; at a different site from 117:302.

117:304 General Surgery for Physician Assistant Students 6 s.h.
Preparation for work as an assistant to the generalist; outpatient and inpatient surgical services, including surgical procedures and management of postoperative course.

117:305 Internal Medicine for Physician Assistant Students 6 s.h.
Eliciting a medical history, doing a pertinent physical exam, obtaining indicated lab studies, assessment of results, formulation of management plan and implementation of appropriate therapy for common internal medicine problems.

117:306 Pediatrics for Physician Assistant Students arr.
Knowledge and skills required for providing appropriate medical care to infants, children, and adolescents; initiation and promotion of interpersonal relationships.

117:307 Psychiatry for Physician Assistant Students 4 s.h.
Training in history and physical exams of psychiatry patients, including individual and family therapy, vocational testing and guidance, development of interviewing skills.

117:308 Long-Term Care for Physician Assistant Students arr.
Development of clinical knowledge and skill in diagnosing, treating, and performing procedures for patients of long-term care settings; knowledge of relevant conditions.

117:321 Dermatology Elective for Physician Assistant Students arr.
Recognizing dermatologic diseases and disorders, instituting appropriate management of patients with dermatologic problems.

117:322 Neurology Elective for Physician Assistant Students arr.
Performing general and neurological exams, establishing diagnosis, recommending lab studies, instituting appropriate management of common neurological diseases and disorders, recognizing the need for urgent treatment.

117:323 Obstetrics for Physician Assistant Students arr.
Proficiency in physical exam of OB patients; applying concepts of diagnostic techniques and therapy; following patients’ course, including labor, delivery, and postpartum care.

117:324 Ophthalmology Elective for Physician Assistant Students arr.
Proficiency in recognizing ophthalmology problems; how to institute appropriate management of these conditions.
117:325 Otolaryngology Elective for Physician Assistant Students
Proficiency in recognizing otolaryngology problems; how to institute appropriate management of these conditions; opportunity for involvement in varied surgical procedures.

117:326 Pediatric Elective for Physician Assistant Students Experience working with children and adolescents.

117:327 Radiology Elective for Physician Assistant Students
Proficiency in systematic evaluation of normal and abnormal routine radiologic examinations; listing indications for special exam procedures, including details of prepping the patient.

117:328 Pediatric Elective (Bone Marrow Transplant) for Physician Assistant Students
Basic clinical knowledge and skills for diagnosis, treatment, and management of pre- and post-bone-marrow transplant patients.

117:329 Pediatric (Cardiology) Elective for Physician Assistant Students
Cardiovascular assessment and problem management of pediatric patients; experience with a range of acute, chronic, common, and rare cardiology diseases.

117:330 Psychiatry Elective for Physician Assistant Students
Training in evaluation and treatment of psychiatry patients.

117:331 Surgery Elective for Physician Assistant Students
Experience in a wide range of surgical problems, procedures, and treatments, including diagnosis, care and treatment, and postoperative courses of surgical patients.

117:332 Surgery Elective (Transplant/Organ Retrieval) for Physician Assistant Students
Extensive experience in care of patients with end-stage organ failure; evaluation of potential transplant candidates, participation in surgical procedures on transplant service.

117:333 Surgery Elective (Burn Unit) for Physician Assistant Students
Involvement in care on burn unit and in operating room; skills in burn debridement, grafting techniques, skin storage techniques, dressing changes, tub baths, and physical therapy procedures.

117:334 Surgery Elective (Cardiac Surgery) for Physician Assistant Students
Development of technical skills in operating room; essentials of preoperative evaluation and postoperative management of cardiac surgical patient.

117:335 Orthopedics Elective for Physician Assistant Students
Recognition of varied orthopedic problems and treatments; musculoskeletal diseases and disorders, both emergencies and common conditions, and how to establish appropriate management.

117:336 Internal Medicine Elective for Physician Assistant Students
Training in varied internal medicine problems; recognition, appropriate treatment.

117:337 Internal Medicine (Cardiology) Elective for Physician Assistant Students
Cardiovascular assessment and problem management; experience with wide range of acute, chronic, common, and rare diseases.
117:338 Internal Medicine (EKG) Elective for Physician Assistant Students Experience reading electrocardiograms, interpreting cardiac arrhythmias, performing and evaluating EKG stress tests.

117:339 Internal Medicine (Gastroenterology) Elective for Physician Assistant Students Experience with a wide range of gastrointestinal pathology; history and physical exams of gastrointestinal diagnostic procedures, follow-up care of patients through outpatient clinics.

117:340 Internal Medicine (Oncology) Elective for Physician Assistant Students Experience to develop diagnostic skills in clinical oncology and gain familiarity with methods of staging common cancers; assistance in therapy and outpatient management of cancer patients.

117:341 Internal Medicine (Geriatrics) Elective for Physician Assistant Students
Familiarity with broad spectrum of medical conditions among the elderly; experience in history and physical exams, diagnosis of geriatric patients along with follow-up visits.

117:342 Internal Medicine (Pulmonary) Elective for Physician Assistant Students
Development of basic clinical knowledge and skills for diagnosis, treatment, and management of pulmonary diseases.

117:343 Internal Medicine (Hospice) Elective for Physician Assistant Students
Work on a hospice care team performing evaluation, treatment, and education of patients with terminal illnesses; dealing with the prospect of death.

117:344 Internal Medicine (Infectious Disease) Elective for Physician Assistant Students
Development of basic clinical knowledge and skills for diagnoses, treatment, and management of infectious diseases.

117:345 Internal Medicine (Correctional Medicine) Elective for Physician Assistant Students Experience with ambulatory medicine in a correctional institution; management of acute and chronic diseases, including HIV, hepatitis B&C, psychiatric conditions; focus on confidentiality, security.

117:347 Urology Elective for Physician Assistant Students
Proficiency in managing patients with urologic conditions; skill in taking a urologic history, performing physical exams, interpreting laboratory studies and data.

117:348 Family Practice Elective for Physician Assistant Students
Proficiency in delivering ambulatory primary care.

117:349 Gynecology Elective (Women’s Health) for Physician Assistant Students Experience in annual gynecologic exams, PAP screening, gynecology problems, contraception issues, STD screening and counseling, common gynecologic procedures.

117:350 Migrant Health Elective for Physician Assistant Students
Basic clinical knowledge and skills for diagnosis, treatment, and prevention of diseases, injuries, and conditions related to environmental exposure in migrant worker populations.

117:351 Occupational Medicine Elective for Physician Assistant Students
Basic clinical knowledge and skills for diagnosis, treatment, and prevention of work-related diseases, injuries, and conditions related to environmental exposure.
117:352 Pediatrics (Neonatology) Elective for Physician Assistant Students
Basic clinical knowledge and skill for diagnosis, treatment, and management of critically ill infants.

117:353 Internal Medicine (Rheumatology) for Physician Assistant Students
Basic clinical knowledge and skills for diagnosis, treatment, and management of rheumatologic diseases.

117:354 Medical Intensive Care for Physician Assistant Students
Basic clinical knowledge and skills for diagnosis, treatment, and management of critically ill patients.

117:355 International Medicine for Physician Assistant Students
Basic clinical knowledge and skills for diagnosis, treatment, and prevention of diseases, injuries, and conditions relevant to international medicine. Repeatable.

117:356 Interventional Radiology for Physician Assistant Students
Basic clinical knowledge and skills for diagnosis and treatment of conditions requiring interventional therapy. Repeatable.

117:357 Gynecologic Oncology Elective for Physician Assistant Students Experience developing diagnostic skills in clinical gynecologic oncology, learning methods of staging specific cancers; and assisting in therapy and outpatient management of patients with varied cancers.

117:358 Wilderness Medicine for Physician Assistant Students
Four-week emergency medicine elective taken in conjunction with Carver College of Medicine; mix of didactic and experiential learning; ten-day trip to Colorado to learn about hypothermia, altitude medicine, search and rescue, field evaluation, treatment and evacuation of common backcountry injuries; lectures and simulations.

The Department of Psychiatry teaches M.D. students, principally during their third year, and trains resident physicians for academic and clinical careers in psychiatry.

Residency Programs

The department offers a four-year training program approved by the Residency Review Committee of the American Medical Association. Training experiences are available at University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics and at the Iowa City Veterans Affairs Medical Center. Additional experiences are available at affiliated institutions: Broadlawns Medical Center in Des Moines, the Iowa Medical and Classification Center at Oakdale, the Mid-Eastern Iowa Community Mental Health Center in Iowa City, and the Independence Mental Health Institute (Iowa Department of Human Services).

The department also offers an approved two-year residency in child psychiatry. Fellowships in geriatrics and psychosomatic medicine are available after residency training.

Research

Department of Psychiatry staff members are involved in genetic and family studies of psychiatric disorders and research in genetic and biological psychiatry, neurochemistry, neuroimaging, neuropysiology, neuropsychiatry, and psychosocial aspects of behavior.

The department’s students and residents have many research opportunities in psychiatry and in the basic science areas of neurochemistry, neurophysiology, and electrophysiology. The clinical areas of psychology, child psychiatry, and psychotherapy also offer opportunities for research and further study to a limited number of students.
Courses

073:255 Psychiatric Epidemiology  3 s.h.
Population-based studies of psychiatric disorders and associated etiologic tools; diagnostic criteria used in psychiatric research, common structured interviews and rating scales; recent research relevant to common psychiatric disorders; experience writing a research idea using NIH PHS grant form. Offered spring semesters. Prerequisites: 173:140. Recommendations: 173:240 or two years of resident training in psychiatry. Same as 173:267.

For M.D. Students

073:005 Clinical Psychiatry  4 s.h.
Requirements: third-year M.D. enrollment.

073:033 Adult Psychiatry, Pappajohn Pavilion  arr.
Requirements: M.D. enrollment.

Roles of child psychiatry as a consultation service. Requirements: M.D. enrollment.

073:045 Adult Outpatient Psychiatry and Psychotherapy  2,4 s.h.
Diagnostic assessment, evaluation, treatment of psychiatric patients; exposure to both psychotherapeutic, psychopharmacologic treatments. Requirements: M.D. enrollment.

073:047 Women’s Wellness and Counseling Service  4 s.h.
Experience evaluating and treating women with mental illness, with some emphasis on practitioner’s autonomy; four-week rotation. Requirements: psychiatry clerkship.

073:049 Eating Disorders  4 s.h.
Inpatient rotation emphasis on co-occurring psychiatric and comorbid medical conditions associated with eating disorders; patient assessment and management at an advanced level; direct patient care and engagement in clinical decision making for complex patients with substantial comorbidity; call is required; student experience maximizes autonomy and responsibility; didactic curriculum; focus on critical appraisal of relevant medical literature. Prerequisites: 073:005. Requirements: fourth-year M.D. enrollment.

073:050 Intellectual Disability  2,4 s.h.
In-depth two week clinical experience in the interdisciplinary approach to assessment and management of individuals with intellectual disability. Requirements: M.D. enrollment.

073:051 Substance Abuse  2,4 s.h.
In-depth clinical experience in assessment and management of individuals with alcohol and drug abuse. Requirements: M.D. enrollment.

073:052 Emergency Psychiatry  2,4 s.h.
In-depth clinical experience in assessment and management of acute psychiatric illness under supervision of faculty with expertise in care within this setting; clinical experiences centered in emergency department at University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics. Prerequisites: 073:005. Requirements: third- or fourth-year M.D. enrollment.

073:053 Advanced Clinical Psychiatry, Des Moines  4 s.h.
Work in adult psychiatry setting and/or child-adolescent psychiatry setting for a four-week rotation; optional participation in psychiatric emergency/crisis care team, substance abuse clinics, and/or ECT treatment sessions.

073:060 Continuity of Care in Psychiatry  4 s.h.
Experience in Psychiatry Continuity of Care Clinic; maximizes autonomy and responsibility in an outpatient continuous care setting. Requirements: fourth-year M.D. enrollment.

073:105 Research Psychiatry  arr.
Experience, training in practical application of scientific methodology; work with research project at Psychiatric Service or affiliated cooperating research centers. Requirements: fourth-year M.D. enrollment.
073:835 Subinternship in Medical Psychiatry
Hands-on experience in evaluation and treatment of patients with combined medical and psychiatric disease; decisions regarding appropriate consultations, diagnostic tests, treatment; etiology and pathophysiology. Requirements: M.D. enrollment.

073:836 Subinternship in Mood/Psychotic Disorders
Subinternship in adult psychiatry; experiences that maximize autonomy and responsibility; inpatient rotation focuses on one subspecialty area (psychotic disorders or mood disorders); emphasis on substantial medical comorbidity; assess and address medical and psychiatric needs of assigned patients in a collaborative and integrative fashion; assess and manage patients independently at the level of a psychiatry intern, reporting directly to the attending; call is required; didactic curriculum focuses on critical appraisal of medical literature. Prerequisites: 073:005. Requirements: fourth-year M.D. enrollment.

073:998 Psychiatry on Campus
Arranged by student with departmental approval. Requirements: M.D. enrollment.

073:999 Psychiatry off Campus
Requirements: M.D. enrollment.

Radiation oncology specializes in the delivery of radiation treatments for cancer patients. It includes treatments with linear accelerators as well as isotopes and temporary and permanent surgically implanted sources. Radiation oncologists also use these methods to treat some benign diseases, such as Graves’ ophthalmopathy and trigeminal neuralgia.

The department’s professional staff provides training in radiation therapy technology for undergraduate students in the Radiation Sciences (p. 1386) Program by teaching courses 672:803 Radiation Therapy I and 672:804 Radiation Therapy II.

The department provides a four-year physician residency training program in radiation oncology that includes clinical care and education. It also has a residency program in medical physics. M.D. students can elect a two- or four-week radiation oncology rotation. Nursing students, dental residents, and fellows in gynecologic oncology and in adult and pediatric hematology and oncology do rotations in the department.

The department also offers specialized research projects and sponsors postdoctoral students in biology, physics, and clinical disciplines by arrangement with the instructor or mentor.

Courses

186:202 Radiation Oncology 4 s.h.
Integration of clinical oncology, physics, and cancer biology; clinical work with faculty mentors; experience in clinical evaluation, technical physics, biological application.

186:998 Radiation Oncology on Campus arr.
Development of new markers for normal tissue toxicity following radiation treatment.

186:999 Radiation Oncology off Campus arr.
Arranged by the student with department approval.

Radiation sciences professionals work with physicians to gather accurate patient information for diagnosis, treatment, and/or research of disease and injury. They provide direct patient care, producing quality images and delivering treatment using a variety of radiation sources. The radiation sciences professional must apply knowledge, skill, and mature judgment while operating complex equipment safely and efficiently.

The University of Iowa’s radiation science educational programs are designed to provide students with opportunities for intellectual, professional, and social growth. Students learn with faculty members and instructors who are committed to radiation science education.

Undergraduate Program

• Major in radiation sciences (Bachelor of Science)

Undergraduate study in radiation sciences is guided by the academic rules and procedures outlined under "Undergraduate Programs" in the Carver College of Medicine section of the Catalog.

Bachelor of Science

The Bachelor of Science with a major in radiation sciences requires a minimum of 124 s.h. The program has a dual focus on radiologic technology and a professional specialty (modality).

Radiation sciences students complete required foundation courses, including some courses approved for the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences General Education Program (p. 381); a professional radiography program; a professional specialty (modality program); and advanced course work. The modality program requirement must be completed at The University of Iowa. All students must meet admission, credit, residency, and g.p.a. requirements as detailed in this Catalog section and in the Carver College of Medicine section under "Undergraduate Programs."

Students who wish to complete all requirements for the Bachelor of Science at The University of Iowa must enroll first in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences. While they are liberal arts students, they complete the courses listed under "Foundation Courses" below. During the fall semester of their first year, students apply to the University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics Radiologic Technology Program. Admission is selective. Accepted students enroll for their second and third years as nondegree students in the Carver College of Medicine. After completing the Radiologic Technology Program, they apply to the Carver College of Medicine as Bachelor of Science students with a major in radiation sciences. Once admitted, they complete the modality and advanced course requirements.

Radiographers who hold national certification from the American Registry of Radiologic Technologists and student radiographers intending to take the national certification exam must be admitted to the Carver College of Medicine as undergraduate students with a major in radiation sciences. Students must meet all University of Iowa admission requirements. Once they have completed a professional modality program through The University of Iowa and all other requirements for the major and for graduation, they receive a Bachelor of Science from the Carver College of Medicine.

The major in radiation sciences requires the following work.

Foundation Courses

All radiation sciences students must complete the following course work.

- 22M:009 Elementary Functions 4 s.h.
- 22M:015 Mathematics for the Biological Sciences 4 s.h.

Students also complete 6 s.h. of course work in the Culture, Society, and the Arts category of the General Education Program (College of Liberal Arts and Sciences) by earning 3 s.h. in each of two of the General Education areas listed below; for lists of approved courses in each area, see General Education Program (p. 381) in the Catalog.

- Historical Perspectives 3 s.h.
- International and Global Issues 3 s.h.
- Literary, Visual, and Performing Arts 3 s.h.
- Values, Society, and Diversity 3 s.h.

RADIOLOGIC TECHNOLOGY PROGRAM

Students must complete a radiologic technology program and pass the American Registry of Radiologic Technologists national certification exam. In the Radiologic Technology Program, students complete 670:901 Radiologic Technology I and 670:902 Radiologic Technology II, which provide education in pathology, radiation biology, radiation protection, patient care, and ethics. Students learn about anatomy and physiology, medical terminology, and radiographic procedures, imaging, and evaluation. They become acquainted with imaging equipment, study quality assurance, and participate in supervised clinical education. The 24-month program begins in July. Graduates of the program are eligible to take the national certification exam; upon successful completion of the exam, they are granted 60 s.h. of credit toward the B.S. in radiation sciences.

SPECIALTY (MODALITY PROGRAM)

Radiation sciences students must complete one of the following specialties, or modality programs, at University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics. Students must apply to and be accepted by the program of their choice; distance education courses do not require application or have a selection process, except for the elective clinical internships. Program duration varies, as does the number of students accepted. Each program offers modality-specific didactic and supervised clinical education courses. Graduates of the modality programs and associated internships are eligible to take certification exams.

Nuclear Medicine Technology Modality

The nuclear medicine technology modality program provides instruction in radiopharmacy, radiobiology, nuclear medicine and PET clinical procedures, radiation protection, patient care, medical terminology, instrumentation, computer applications, administration, and ethics. The 12-month program (30 s.h.) begins in August and includes the following courses.

- 074:101 Principles of Nuclear Medicine I 6 s.h.
- 074:102 Introductory Clinical Nuclear Medicine 6 s.h.
- 074:103 Principles of Nuclear Medicine II 3 s.h.
- 074:104 Intermediate Clinical Nuclear Medicine 9 s.h.
- 074:105 Advanced Clinical Nuclear Medicine 6 s.h.

Radiation Therapy Modality

The radiation therapy modality program teaches theory and techniques of radiation therapy technology, with emphasis on competence in areas of oncology treatment planning, treatment delivery, dosimetry, and use of megavoltage radiation-producing equipment to administer treatment. The 12-month program (30 s.h.) begins in August and includes the following courses.

- 672:803 Radiation Therapy I 12 s.h.
- 672:804 Radiation Therapy II 12 s.h.
- 672:805 Radiation Therapy III 6 s.h.

Diagnostic Medical Sonography Modality

The diagnostic medical sonography modality program focuses on principles and methods in using ultrasound and offers specialties in abdominal, pediatric, obstetric, and gynecologic imaging as well as interventional procedures and vascular technology. The 18-month program (36 s.h.) begins in August and includes the following courses.
673:803 Diagnostic Medical Sonography I 9 s.h.
673:804 Diagnostic Medical Sonography II 9 s.h.
673:805 Diagnostic Medical Sonography III 3 s.h.
673:806 Diagnostic Medical Sonography IV 9 s.h.
673:807 Diagnostic Medical Sonography V 6 s.h.

Magnetic Resonance Imaging Modality
The magnetic resonance imaging modality program features distance education courses and elective clinical internships. It offers intensive study and practice in magnetic resonance imaging, including patient care procedures, pathophysiology, physics, sectional anatomy, and instrumentation. It includes the following courses (22 s.h.) and clinical internships (9 s.h.). Internships begin in August and February.

674:110 Fundamentals for the MRI Technologist 3 s.h.
674:120 MRI Procedures I 4 s.h.
674:130 MRI Procedures II 3 s.h.
674:140 MRI Acquisition and Principles I 3 s.h.
674:150 MRI Acquisition and Principles II 3 s.h.
676:100 Sectional Anatomy for Imaging Sciences 3 s.h.
676:110 CT/MRI Pathology 3 s.h.

Recommended elective clinical internships for the Magnetic Resonance Imaging program:

674:160 MRI Clinical Internship I 3-6 s.h.
674:170 MRI Clinical Internship II 3-6 s.h.

Cardiovascular Interventional Modality
The cardiovascular interventional modality program features distance education courses and elective clinical internships. It teaches about imaging equipment, pharmacology, sterile techniques, cardiac monitoring, vascular anatomy and physiology, cardiovascular intervention technology imaging procedures, therapeutic intervention techniques, and digital angiography. It includes the following courses (20 s.h.) and recommended elective clinical internships (12 s.h.). Internships begin in August.

675:110 Vascular Anatomy 3 s.h.
675:120 CVI Principles 4 s.h.
675:130 Electrocardiogram and Hemodynamics 3 s.h.
675:140 CVI Peripheral Procedures and Pathology 3 s.h.
675:150 CVI Neurology and Nonvascular Procedures and Pathology 3 s.h.
675:160 CVI Cardiac Procedures and Pathology 4 s.h.

Recommended elective clinical internships for the Cardiovascular Interventional Program:

675:170 Cardiac Interventional Clinical Internship 6 s.h.
675:180 Vascular Interventional Clinical Internship 6 s.h.

Computed Tomography Modality
The computed tomography modality program features distance education courses and an elective clinical internship. It concentrates on sectional anatomy, single and multislice computed tomography (CT), electron beam CT, physiologic and 3-D imaging, CT simulation, physics and imaging, and procedures and pathology. The program includes the following courses (19 s.h.) and a recommended elective clinical internship (6 s.h.). The internship begins in August and January.

676:100 Sectional Anatomy for Imaging Sciences 3 s.h.
675:110 Vascular Anatomy 3 s.h.
676:110 CT/MRI Pathology 3 s.h.
676:120 Computed Tomography Procedures I 3 s.h.
676:125 Computed Tomography Procedures II 3 s.h.
676:130 Computed Tomography Physical Principles and QC 4 s.h.

Recommended elective clinical internship for the Computed Tomography Program:

676:140 Computed Tomography Clinical Internship 6 s.h.

ADVANCED COURSES
Management and leadership—one of these:

06J:048 Introduction to Management 3 s.h.
036:019 Organizational Leadership 3 s.h.
06J:147 Nonprofit Organizational Effectiveness I 3 s.h.

Statistics—one of these:

22S:025 Elementary Statistics and Inference 3 s.h.
22S:102 Introduction to Statistical Methods 3 s.h.

ELECTIVES
Elective course work, to complete the minimum of 124 s.h. required for the Bachelor of Science, should be planned in consultation with the student’s advisor.
Advising

Students who have declared a radiation science interest and are completing the required foundation courses before admission to the Radiologic Technology Program are advised at the University’s Academic Advising Center. After admission to the Radiologic Technology Program, they are advised by the program’s director. Students admitted to the radiation sciences major are advised by Radiation Sciences Program personnel.

Admission

Students who plan to complete all requirements for the Bachelor of Science at The University of Iowa must be admitted to the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences with a radiation sciences interest. For information on admission requirements, contact the University’s Office of Admissions.

Admission to the Radiologic Technology Program is competitive; enrollment is limited. Applications to the program must be submitted in time to meet the December application deadline. Students accepted to the program are admitted to the Carver College of Medicine as nondegree students and must meet specific program requirements; see the Radiologic Technology Program web site. A g.p.a. of at least 2.50 in General Education courses is recommended.

Admission to specialties (modality programs) is competitive; enrollment is limited. See “Clinical Internships” and “Distance Education” on the Radiation Sciences Program web site or contact the individual modality program directors for more information. The application deadline for modality programs is February 1. Acceptance to a modality program does not guarantee acceptance to the radiation sciences major.

Admission to the Carver College of Medicine radiation sciences major requires national certification in radiologic technology from the American Registry of Radiologic Technologists and a cumulative g.p.a. of at least 2.50, excluding grades earned in radiologic technology courses. Admission to the major does not guarantee admission to a professional specialty (modality) program. Deadlines for application to the radiation sciences major are April 1 for summer or fall entry and November 15 for spring entry.

To learn more about radiation sciences study at Iowa, visit the Radiation Sciences Program web site.

Two-week clerkship. Requirements: M.D. enrollment.

074:101 Principles of Nuclear Medicine I  0,6 s.h.
Didactic and laboratory work in radiopharmacy, patient care, radiation protection, math and statistics, radiation physics, anatomy and physiology, radiochemistry and tracer techniques, medical terminology, computer applications. Requirements: Nuclear Medicine Technology Program enrollment.

074:102 Introductory Clinical Nuclear Medicine  0,6 s.h.
Experience in preparing radiopharmaceuticals, performing routine nuclear imaging and in vitro procedures; work with clinical instructors. Requirements: Nuclear Medicine Technology Program enrollment.

074:103 Principles of Nuclear Medicine II  0,3 s.h.
Didactic and laboratory work in nuclear medicine instrumentation, radiobiology, professional ethics, administration and management, computer applications. Requirements: Nuclear Medicine Technology Program enrollment.

074:104 Intermediate Clinical Nuclear Medicine  0,9 s.h.

074:105 Advanced Clinical Nuclear Medicine  0,6 s.h.
Proficiency in performance, quality assurance of all radiopharmacy and nuclear medicine procedures; opportunities for independent study, research. Requirements: Nuclear Medicine Technology Program enrollment.
074:150 Medical Imaging and Radiology Informatics
Issues in informatics used in medical imaging and radiology; basic concepts, principles, terminology, and technology in medical imaging informatics; PACS operation, design, implementation; digitalization and acquisition of medical images; storage retrieval; image data formation and conversion, image data communication, workflow, visualization and display; medical imaging informatics; web application/services-based telemedicine and teleradiology.

074:191 Health Informatics I

074:192 Health Informatics II
Selected health informatics initiatives, including computer-based patient records, physiologic monitoring, networking, imaging, virtual reality; participation in an interdisciplinary project team focused on an informatics innovation; application and research seminars. Same as 021:280, 051:189, 056:287, 096:289, 200:120.

074:201 Advanced Clinical Radiology
Requirements: M.D. enrollment.

074:203 Vascular and Interventional Radiology
Requirements: M.D. enrollment.

074:220 Radiation Safety and Radiobiology
Instruction on safe operation of radiation producing equipment and handling of radioactive materials; origin and/or derivation of certain formulae and techniques useful in radiation protection programs; regulatory agencies, regulations, and regulatory guides pertinent to the student’s field; emphasis on applied aspects of radiation protection; characteristics and biological effects of ionizing radiations, properties and uses of radioisotopes, medical applications, and biological basis for protection procedures.

074:901 Community Radiology
Requirements: M.D. enrollment.

074:998 Radiology on Campus
Requirements: M.D. enrollment.

074:999 Radiology off Campus
Requirements: M.D. enrollment.

The Department of Surgery offers didactic instruction as well as clinical and other practical experiences for medical students. It also hosts a wide spectrum of clinical and scientific research.

M.D. Student Training

Department of Surgery courses provide a unique combination of experience oriented toward patient care and understanding of surgery’s place among the physician’s skills. Surgery courses are open only to M.D. students and qualified students in associated health sciences.

Students develop an awareness of surgery’s role in the treatment of disease. Emphasis is placed on general surgery, basic emergency surgery, trauma, oncology, burns, gastrointestinal and biliary tract disease, endocrine disease, pediatric surgery, transplantation, plastic and reconstructive surgery, and peripheral vascular surgery.

The majority of surgery courses involve patient-centered discussions and practical exercises interwoven with operating room experience. Lectures and conferences are scheduled regularly on specific topics.

The department offers independent study courses in selected surgery topics and clinical experiences; some are available to fourth-year M.D. students by arrangement with the faculty.

Faculty

The faculty’s strengths center in pathophysiology and problems of severe burns, trauma, organ transplantation, surgical control of morbid obesity, surgical oncology, bowel disease, biliary tract disease, pediatric surgery, endocrine disease, plastic surgery, and vascular surgery.

Facilities

Abundant patient contact provides education in a wide variety of surgical diseases. The Department of Surgery provides training in the only burn unit in Iowa approved by the American College of Surgeons and in the Level I Trauma Center at University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics.

Laboratories provide equipment, space, and technical expertise to support teaching and a wide spectrum of clinical and scientific research. Projects are available in gastrointestinal surgery, surgical microbiology, peripheral vascular surgery, transplantation, wound healing, organ preservation, vascular surgery, pediatric surgery, and surgical oncology.

Urology encompasses the subspecialty areas of urologic nephrology, oncology, and endocrinology; male reproductive physiology; erectile dysfunction; urology; urinary tract stone and infection, including endourology; laparoscopic urology; diagnostic urology, and urinary tract obstruction.

The Department of Urology offers instruction in all of these areas at both the undergraduate and graduate levels and provides continuing education for the delivery of urologic care.

M.D. Student Training

The Department of Urology cooperates with several University of Iowa basic science departments to educate first-year M.D. students in the relationship between urology and the basic sciences. It collaborates with the Department of Microbiology (p. 1325) in teaching and research concerning immunology of genitourinary cancers and renal transplantation.

In the second-year M.D. course, 050:165 Foundations of Clinical Practice IV ICD, the department presents illustrative lectures and demonstrations related to diagnosis and treatment of genitourinary tract diseases.

Third- and fourth-year M.D. students take Department of Urology courses that provide experience in all areas of urology. The department's required two-week clerkship covers the fundamentals of these areas through experience in outpatient clinics and inpatient units at University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics and the Iowa City Veterans Affairs Medical Center as well as in daily interactive teaching seminars. Fourth-year M.D. students can take advanced elective courses of intensive study in any of the urologic subspecialties.

Continuing Education

The department offers continuing education activities throughout the year for urologic and family practitioners. These activities are conducted by the senior staff, whose interests include pediatric urology, reproductive physiology, urologic oncology, urinary tract stone (including endourology/laparoscopy), and prostatic diseases.

Research

The department has earned international recognition for its studies of prostatic diseases. The urological laboratories conduct research and offer instruction in experimental oncology, cellular immunology, and infertility.

Courses

079:104 Clinical Urology 2 s.h.
Work in urology unit, clinic; responsibility for patient care, working with residents.

079:108 Advanced Clerkship in Urology 4 s.h.
Experience as integral member of urological staff, junior resident level.

079:109 Advanced Clerkship Pediatric Urology 2-4 s.h.
In-depth study of pediatric urology topics. Prerequisites: 079:104. Requirements: M.D. enrollment.

079:110 Individual Study and Research arr.
Preclinical or clinical projects; may include research presentation, collaboration on a publication.
079:115 Urology Oncology 2,4 s.h.
Multispecialty exposure to diagnosis and treatment of patients with current and newly-diagnosed urologic malignancies. Requirements: M.D. enrollment.

079:117 Female Pelvic Floor Dysfunction 2,4 s.h.
Requirements: M.D. enrollment.

079:120 Community General Urology, Des Moines 4 s.h.
Exposure to the entire spectrum of private practice urology, in office and operating room settings; experience with preoperative and postoperative care; nonoperative aspects of office-based community urology. Prerequisites: 079:104.

079:999 Urology off Campus arr.
Individually arranged by students with department approval.

The College of Nursing is an integral part of the University of Iowa health science campus, sharing in and contributing to teaching, research, and patient care resources that have earned international recognition. The University provides an unusually fine setting for nursing preparation because the educational and clinical resources vital to educating nurses are available on or near the campus. Faculty and students participate fully in University life and contribute their time, interests, and abilities to the many general and special activities of a major research university.

The college’s Bachelor of Science in Nursing (B.S.N.), Master of Science in Nursing (M.S.N.), and clinical nurse leader (in the M.S.N.) programs are accredited by the Commission on Collegiate Nursing Education (CCNE), an autonomous accrediting arm of the American Association of Colleges of Nursing (AACN). They also are approved by the Iowa Board of Nursing. The anesthesia nursing program (in the Doctor of Nursing Practice) is accredited by the Council on Accreditation of Nurse Anesthesia Educational Programs.

Graduates of the B.S.N. and the M.S.N. clinical nurse leader programs qualify to take the licensure examination required for practice as registered nurses (RN). Graduates of advanced practice majors in the graduate program are eligible to take certification examinations and apply for Advanced Registered Nurse Practitioner (ARNP) licensure.

Undergraduate Programs

• Bachelor of Science in Nursing

The Bachelor of Science in Nursing (B.S.N.) prepares students for careers caring for patients in hospitals and in community agencies such as public health services, schools, homes, and industries. It also provides a base for graduate study in nursing.

The College of Nursing offers two B.S.N. programs: a prelicensure program for students without a nursing license (see "Bachelor of Science in Nursing" below), and a program for registered nurses (see "RN/B.S.N. for Registered Nurses" below).

In addition to combining general education with specialized career preparation, a college or university program in nursing offers the advantages of full participation in the social, cultural, and recreational activities of a highly diverse campus community. In nursing, no less than in other pursuits, a college or university background enables people not only to prepare for a career but to achieve a life of thought and action informed by knowledge, introspection, and contemplation.

The nursing major provides a basis for nurses’ roles in wellness and health promotion, in acute care, and in long-term care for chronic illness. The professional nurse provides care to individuals, families, groups, and communities along a continuum of health, illness, and disability in any sector of the health care system.

In addition to providing care, the nurse serves as a coordinator of health care by organizing and facilitating the delivery of comprehensive, efficient, and appropriate service to individuals, families, groups, and communities. The nurse demonstrates the ability to conceptualize the total continuing health needs of the patient, including legal and ethical aspects of care. The University of Iowa program’s goal is to produce graduates who are competent, committed, creative, and compassionate.

Bachelor of Science in Nursing

The Bachelor of Science in Nursing prelicensure program requires 128 s.h., including 68 s.h. in the nursing major and 60 s.h. in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences General Education Program (p. 381) and supporting pre-nursing courses. The program is intended for students beginning their education in nursing. A B.S.N. program for registered nurses is described under "RN/B.S.N. for Registered Nurses" below.

B.S.N. students may complete their entire program at Iowa, enrolling for their first year in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, or they may transfer from an institution that offers comparable courses approved by The University of Iowa and the College of Nursing. Highly qualified applicants may be admitted to the College of Nursing directly from high school. See "Admission to the B.S.N." later in this section.

Students who are part of the B.S.N. early admission program can expect to complete their plan of study in four academic years after enrolling at The University of Iowa. Other students who win admission to the college may expect to complete the degree in three academic years after they enter the B.S.N. program.

Nursing courses are based on concepts of health, deviations from health, and nursing intervention. Course work progresses in complexity from the sophomore through the senior year. The curriculum reflects the current trend in health care delivery toward emphasis on nursing as a service provided both inside and outside hospitals. Students have access to clinical experiences selected from a multitude of agencies in Iowa, and around the country.

Advising

University of Iowa students who have declared an interest in the prelicensure nursing program are advised at the University’s Academic Advising Center until they are admitted to the College of Nursing. After admission to the college, each student is assigned a College of Nursing faculty advisor and a professional advisor in the college’s Office of Student Services.

RN/B.S.N. for Registered Nurses

The RN/B.S.N. progression program requires 32 s.h. of credit. RN/B.S.N. students must have a valid Iowa nursing license.

The program is designed to offer registered nurses the opportunity to build on their nursing knowledge and experience by earning a Bachelor of Science in Nursing. RN/B.S.N. students take courses that focus on professionalism and patient safety, research, improvement of health systems, leadership, and professional engagement.

Students may transfer course work completed at other colleges and universities to satisfy course requirements for admission to the College of Nursing, general education requirements, and elective course work requirements. Once a student is admitted to the RN/B.S.N. program, he or she has the option of completing the required 32 s.h. in three semesters (full-time study) or in five semesters (part-time study).

Most of the RN/B.S.N. program is delivered online, with limited face-to-face meetings, usually associated with the practicum experience. Students must complete a practicum experience in Iowa and may be required to drive up to 100 miles to the practicum setting. The College of Nursing participates as a receiving institution in the Iowa Statewide Articulation Plan for Nursing Education: RN to Baccalaureate.

Honors

The College of Nursing Honors Program provides seminars and independent study experience for qualified students. In order to pursue honors studies in nursing, students must have completed the first clinical nursing course and must maintain a University of Iowa g.p.a. of at least 3.33 and a nursing major g.p.a. of at least 3.50.

The honors program enables students to explore subject matter based on individual interests, needs, and goals. It provides opportunities for self-initiative, research experience, and intellectual and personal development and challenges students to grow and excel. Students who fulfill the requirements of the program graduate with honors in nursing.

Related Certificate or Minor: Aging Studies

College of Nursing students may participate in the Aging Studies Program, which provides undergraduate students with a multidisciplinary approach to gerontology. The program offers a certificate (21 s.h.) and a minor (15 s.h.). Students plan their course of study with their academic advisor in close cooperation with the Aging Studies Program coordinator. See Aging Studies (p. 38) in the Catalog for details. The Aging Studies Program is administered by the School of Social Work (College of Liberal Arts and Sciences).

Study Abroad

The College of Nursing advocates study abroad as a rich educational experience for students. Nursing students have the opportunity to encounter another culture directly through the college’s cultural nursing experiences abroad. The intent of these regular programs is to introduce students to health care systems in other countries. In addition, students learn about health conditions and circumstances not widely prevalent in the United States (e.g., diphtheria, nutritional deficiencies). For more information, contact the College of Nursing Office of Student Services.

Expenses and Insurance

Students pay University of Iowa student fees throughout the B.S.N. program. They must purchase uniforms, shoes, a stethoscope, a watch with a full-sweep second hand, and supplies and materials for required nursing courses. Students arrange and pay for their own health screening requirements, health insurance, and transportation once they are enrolled in clinical nursing courses. They also pay fees that cover the cost of computer testing, criminal background checks, laboratory equipment, and a professional liability insurance group policy for students who do not yet hold an RN license; see “Professional Liability Insurance” below.

Mandatory Health Insurance

All students must show upon admission to the College of Nursing and each August afterward verification that they have obtained and currently hold health insurance sufficient to satisfy the following minimal standards of coverage (or an equivalent alternative care plan):

- $250,000 lifetime benefit;
- coverage for hospitalization, including coverage for room and board, physician visits, surgeon services, X-ray, and lab services;
- inpatient deductible under an individual policy not exceeding $500 per admission and a 20 percent copayment/coinsurance requirement;
- coverage for medically necessary care, including both physician services for treatment of emergencies, illness, accident, injury, X-ray, and lab services.

Professional Liability Insurance

All students in the College of Nursing are required to carry professional liability insurance throughout the duration of their program. Agencies that provide clinical practicums for College of Nursing programs require that students have insurance coverage. The College of Nursing provides students with information about the liability insurance requirement during orientation.

B.S.N. students in the prelicensure program are covered by a group policy supported by student fees.

RN/B.S.N. students must provide verification that they are covered by professional liability insurance for registered nurses with a minimum coverage of $1 million per single occurrence and $3 million aggregate coverage.
Admission

Students entering the University who are not licensed registered nurses (RNs) apply to the B.S.N. prelicensure program. Registered RNs apply to the RN/B.S.N. program.

All entering first-year and undergraduate transfer students who have earned fewer than 24 s.h. when they apply for admission to The University of Iowa must complete the American College Test (ACT) or the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT). For information about the ACT, write to ACT Inc., P.O. Box 168, Iowa City, Iowa 52243.

Applicants to the B.S.N and RN/B.S.N. programs whose first language is not English must score at least 550 (paper-based), 213 (computer-based), or 81 (Internet-based) on the Test of English as a Foreign Language (TOEFL). Registered nurses educated outside the United States are required to present verification of having passed the Commission on Graduates of Foreign Nursing Schools (CGFNS) examination and specified Excelsior baccalaureate nursing examinations. They also must meet the University’s English proficiency requirements.

Applicants admitted to the College of Nursing are expected to be able to meet the curriculum’s performance standards; see “Core Performance Standards” below.

A criminal background check is conducted for all prelicensure and undergraduate students upon admission.

Admission to the B.S.N. Prelicensure Program

B.S.N. prelicensure students may complete their entire program at Iowa, enrolling for their first year in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences; contact the College of Nursing or the University of Iowa Office of Admissions for details. Highly qualified applicants may be admitted to the College of Nursing directly from high school; see "B.S.N. Early Admission Program" below. Applicants to the B.S.N. prelicensure program must meet the following requirements:

- completion of all courses required for admission to the College of Nursing, or current enrollment in any remaining courses;
- a grade of C or higher in all courses required for admission to the College of Nursing; and
- a cumulative g.p.a. of at least 3.00.

Applicants to the B.S.N. prelicensure program must have completed the following minimum high school course requirements.

- English: four years
- Mathematics: three years, including algebra I, algebra II, and geometry
- Science: one year of biology, one year of chemistry, and one year of physics
- Social science: three years
- World languages: four years of the same world language or two years of each of two world languages

Other college preparatory courses selected with the help of the high school counselor

Students admitted to the B.S.N. prelicensure program must satisfy the preclinical background requirements before they may begin to take nursing courses; see “Required Pre-Nursing Course Work” below.

B.S.N. Early Decision Program

A limited number of highly qualified applicants are admitted to the College of Nursing directly from high school through the B.S.N. Early Decision Program (EDP). To be considered for the EDP, students must have an ACT composite score of at least 28, an ACT science reasoning score of at least 25, and a g.p.a. of at least 3.80. They must complete the minimum high school course requirements for admission to the B.S.N. prelicensure program, and they must complete the requirements listed under “Required Pre-Nursing Course Work” below before they may begin taking College of Nursing courses. EDP students must maintain a cumulative g.p.a. of at least 3.20 and have no criminal charges brought against them (including but not limited to offenses involving drugs, alcohol, assault, or fraud) in order to maintain their EDP standing.

Required PRE-Nursing Course Work

For fall 2011, students must complete the following requirements before they may begin College of Nursing course work. Some requirements change for fall 2012, as noted in the following list.

- Rhetoric: 4 s.h. or the equivalent
- Mathematics: three years of high school mathematics, or a score of 26 or higher on the mathematics battery of the ACT, or completion of a college mathematics course comparable to or more advanced than 22M:008 Intermediate Algebra
Physics: one-half year of high school physics or the equivalent (effective fall 2012: one full year of high school physics or the equivalent)

World languages: two years of the same high school world language or the equivalent (effective fall 2012: four years of the same high school world language or the equivalent)

Other course work: animal biology, human anatomy, human development and behavior, inorganic chemistry, microbiology, and psychology (effective fall 2012, add these: economics, human physiology, math for the biological sciences, organic chemistry, sociology, all general education requirements, and all non-nursing electives)

Admission to the RN/B.S.N. Program

RN/B.S.N. students may complete all courses required for admission to the College of Nursing, all general education requirements, and all elective course work requirements at a community college. Applicants to the RN/B.S.N. program must meet the following requirements:

- completion of all courses required for admission to the College of Nursing, or current enrollment in any remaining courses;
- completion of all general education requirements and elective course work requirements; and
- a cumulative g.p.a. of at least 3.00.

The world language requirement for admission to the RN/B.S.N. program varies according to the applicant’s year of high school graduation:

- before 1991: applicant is exempt from the world language requirement;
- 1991-2010: applicant must demonstrate second-level proficiency in a single world language;
- 2011 and after: applicant must demonstrate fourth-level proficiency in a single world language or second-level proficiency in each of two world languages.

Core Performance Standards

Applicants to the College of Nursing are expected to be capable of completing the entire nursing curriculum and of earning a B.S.N. The nursing curriculum requires demonstrated proficiency in a variety of cognitive, problem-solving, manipulative, communicative, and interpersonal skills. Therefore, College of Nursing students must meet the following performance standards (examples in the following list are not all-inclusive):

- possess and use critical thinking skills sufficient for clinical judgment (e.g., identify cause-effect relationships in clinical situations, develop nursing care plans);
- demonstrate interpersonal abilities sufficient for interaction with individuals, families, and groups from a variety of social, emotional, cultural, and intellectual backgrounds (e.g., establish rapport with patients, clients, colleagues);
- possess and use communication skills sufficient for interacting with others (e.g., explain treatment procedures, initiate health teaching, observe patient/client responses, document and interpret nursing actions and patient/client responses);
- administer cardiopulmonary procedures and other clinical procedures necessary for nursing care; calibrate and use equipment, position patients and clients; and
- possess the tactile abilities (with or without an assistive device) sufficient for performing physical assessment (e.g., perform palpation functions of physical exam and those related to nursing interventions).

Applicants who may not meet these standards are encouraged to contact the College of Nursing associate dean for academic affairs for a personal interview.

Selection

The college’s admission committee recommends to the dean the applicants who appear to be best qualified. Fulfillment of minimum admission requirements does not guarantee admission to the College of Nursing. The committee may require personal interviews. A physical examination report and specific health screening requirements must be on file at the University of Iowa Student Health Service 10 days before the class opens for the first clinical nursing course.

Application Deadlines

Deadlines to apply to the B.S.N. prelicensure program are January 31 for entry the following fall semester and September 30 for entry the following spring semester. The Early Decision Program application deadline is January 1.

The deadline to apply to the RN/B.S.N. program is April 30; entry is for fall semester only.

Financial Support

In addition to general assistance available to University students, there are assistance programs specifically for nursing students. Information about financial aid is available from the University’s Office of Student Financial Aid.
Graduate Programs

- Master of Science in Nursing
- Doctor of Nursing Practice
- Doctor of Philosophy in nursing

Graduate students in the College of Nursing must adhere to all Graduate College policies regarding academic standing, probation, and dismissal; see the Manual of Rules and Regulations of the Graduate College or the Graduate (p. 1117) College section of the Catalog.

Master of Science in Nursing

The Master of Science in Nursing requires a minimum of 39 s.h. of graduate credit. The program has a clinical nurse leader focus. It is designed to build on general and professional baccalaureate study. The M.S.N. curriculum consists of a core component of 28 s.h., which students take with College of Nursing doctoral students, and a specialization component of 11 s.h. that centers on the clinical nurse leader role.

Students must maintain a g.p.a. of at least 2.75 and must successfully complete a thesis, project, or portfolio.

Graduate students in the College of Nursing must adhere to all Graduate College policies regarding academic standing, probation, and dismissal. Transfer credit applicable to the M.S.N. is limited and must be approved by the assistant dean for graduate programs in nursing. Course work taken 10 years or more before the students plans to graduate from the M.S.N. program must be updated according to University policy.

Doctor of Nursing Practice

The Doctor of Nursing Practice requires a minimum of 72 s.h. of graduate credit. Students may complete the program in three years of full-time study; part-time study also is available. Individuals who have been granted an M.S.N. may complete the D.N.P. with a minimum of 31 s.h. of graduate credit.

The D.N.P. program prepares nurses for leadership and advanced practice roles. Students choose from a number of specialties, including adult/gerontology nurse practitioner, anesthesia nursing, family nurse practitioner, health systems, neonatal nurse practitioner, pediatric nurse practitioner, and psychiatric/mental health nursing.

All D.N.P. students complete basic graduate core courses, specialty courses, advanced core courses, and a practicum. They enroll in didactic courses exploring clinical leadership, public policy and advocacy, specialty systems, change theory, finance and business, and entrepreneurial tools.

D.N.P. students must complete 1,000 clinical hours. Individuals who enter the program having completed an M.S.N. may transfer the approved clinical hours from their M.S.N. program to the D.N.P. program. The clinical hours requirement is evaluated for each student who has completed an M.S.N. with a specialty program. Students who completed more than 1,000 clinical hours in an M.S.N. advanced practice program still must complete the number of D.N.P. practicum and capstone project hours determined in consultation with their advisor and the D.N.P. program’s director.

Other transfer credit applicable to the D.N.P. is limited and must be approved by the assistant dean for graduate programs in nursing. Transcripts for individuals who have completed an M.S.N. are evaluated individually.

Graduate students in the College of Nursing must adhere to all Graduate College policies regarding academic standing, probation, and dismissal. Course work taken 10 or more years before the students plans to graduate from the D.N.P. program must be updated according to University policy.

Doctor of Philosophy

The Doctor of Philosophy program in nursing requires a minimum of 74 s.h. of graduate credit. The program prepares students to advance nursing science and contribute to the body of nursing knowledge. It emphasizes student participation with faculty members on research teams; focused course work; presentation and publication of research-based knowledge; and interdisciplinary learning experiences. Graduates are prepared for careers as researchers, college and university faculty members, consultants, and leaders in the profession.

The program is open to individuals who have earned a B.S.N. or an M.S.N. degree. Applicants who hold an advanced degree outside nursing may be admitted; their curriculum will be based on a review of their transcripts.

The Ph.D. in nursing requires the following work.

Required Courses

Basic core (required for students who enter with a B.S.N.):
096:201 Applied Epidemiology 3 s.h.

Advanced core:

096:202 Foundations of Nursing Science I 3 s.h.
096:330 Health Policy, Law, and Advocacy 3 s.h.
096:338 Designing Research 3 s.h.
096:339 Social Determinants of Health and Health System Inequities 3 s.h.
096:497 Seminar: Research Scholarship Role Development 3 s.h.

Intermediate statistics 3 s.h.
Clinical specialization courses 6 s.h.
Elective course 3 s.h.

Advanced research methods:

096:340 Foundations of Nursing Science II 4 s.h.
096:342 Qualitative Research 4 s.h.
096:344 Quantitative Research 4 s.h.
096:490 Research Practicum I 1 s.h.
096:491 Research Practicum II 1 s.h.
650:270 Principles of Scholarly Integrity 0-1 s.h.
Advanced statistics 6 s.h.

Content focus:

Advanced seminar in health research 3-6 s.h.
Cognate courses 6-9 s.h.

Dissertation (students must earn a minimum of 11 s.h.):

096:499 Dissertation Research arr.

COMPREHENSIVE EXAM AND DISSERTATION

All Ph.D. students must complete a written and oral comprehensive examination before they begin work on the dissertation. They must write the dissertation and defend it orally.

Admission

Applicants to College of Nursing graduate programs must meet the admission requirements of the Graduate College; see the Manual of Rules and Regulations of the Graduate College or the Graduate (p. 1117) College section of the Catalog. Applicants must have a g.p.a. of at least 3.00.

The College of Nursing has additional application requirements, as follows.

Applicants whose first language is not English must score at least 550 (paper-based), 213 (computer-based), or 81 (Internet-based) on the Test of English as a Foreign Language (TOEFL); or they must score at least 7.0 on the International English Language Testing System (IELTS).

A criminal background check is required for all graduate students upon admission.

Admission to the M.S.N. and D.N.P. Programs

Application requirements specific to the M.S.N. and D.N.P. programs are:

- a bachelor’s degree with a major in nursing from an accredited program (limited options are available for registered nurse applicants who have earned a bachelor’s degree with a major other than nursing or a bachelor’s degree in nursing from an institution outside the United States);
- a g.p.a. of at least 3.00;
- satisfaction of the legal requirements for the practice of nursing in Iowa;
- current written recommendations from three persons knowledgeable about the applicant’s competence in the practice of nursing and potential for leadership and scholarship (forms required);
- a current résumé, goal statement, and supplemental/information form; transcripts from all undergraduate and graduate course work;
- completion of an upper-division nursing research course in the undergraduate program; and
- completion of an upper-level biostatistics course within five years of the application deadline; acceptable University of Iowa courses include 22S:101, 22S:102, and 171:161; see How Do My Courses Transfer on ISIS for information about using equivalent courses from other institutions.

Application deadline for the M.S.N. program is October 1.

Application deadline for the D.N.P. program is October 1 for all specialties except anesthesia nursing, which has a June 1 application deadline.

Applications to both programs are reviewed once a year. In order to be reviewed, the application must be complete, with all materials submitted.

Applicant interviews are required for the D.N.P. program; in some cases, telephone interviews may be arranged. D.N.P. applicants with master’s degrees in nursing from other schools must provide verification of completed clinical hours from their school’s graduate director or must submit appropriate course syllabi.

Admission to the Ph.D. Program

The Ph.D. program accepts applications from individuals who have earned a B.S.N. as well as from those who have completed a master’s degree program.

Applicants to the Ph.D. program must have taken the Graduate Record Examination (GRE) General Test, preferably within the preceding five years. They must have completed an accredited basic nursing program and must hold a current license to practice nursing (special license for international students). They also must have a g.p.a. of at least 3.00. Applicants must submit:

- a two-to-three-page statement describing their educational objectives and identifying an area of research for their doctoral study;
- three recommendations from nursing professionals that speak to the applicant’s potential as a scholar;
- a current résumé or curriculum vitae; and
- a complete transcript of all college programs and courses.

Applicants who hold a master’s degree must have successfully completed at least one graduate-level course in research and inferential statistics (3 s.h.).

B.S.N. graduates who apply directly to the Ph.D. program must have successfully completed an upper-division course in statistics. They also must submit a strong statement of their research focus and career goals.

Application deadline for the Ph.D. program is November 15. Applications are reviewed once a year. In order to be reviewed, the applicant’s file must be complete, with all materials submitted.

Certificate in Advanced Practice Nursing

The Certificate in Advanced Practice Nursing allows nurses who hold a master’s degree to pursue advanced clinical training in one of four specialty tracks: pediatric nurse practitioner, adult/gerontology nurse practitioner, family nurse practitioner, or psychiatric/mental health nursing. Certificate requirements include advanced clinical core courses and a sequence of specialty courses. Students formulate a plan of study in consultation with their advisor and/or the director of the master’s degree program. Successful completion of the specialty sequence qualifies a student to sit for professional certification examinations. Completion of the certificate program is noted on the student’s transcript.

Certificate in Nursing Informatics

The Certificate in Nursing Informatics focuses on data, information, and knowledge of management in nursing. It familiarizes students with the development, support, and evaluation of applications, tools, processes, and structures that help nurses manage data in direct patient care and administrative and management support systems. The program is open to students enrolled in graduate degree programs and to post-master’s degree and postdoctoral students. Completion of the certificate is noted on the student’s transcript.

Certificate in Nursing Service Administration

The Certificate in Nursing Service Administration is designed to upgrade the skills and expertise of nurses practicing in management and nursing administration. Certificate requirements include advanced nurse manager core courses and related support courses. The program is open to students enrolled in graduate degree programs and to postbaccalaureate and post-master’s degree students. Completion of the certificate is noted on the student’s transcript.

Related Certificate: Informatics

The Graduate College offers the Certificate in Health Informatics with a health informatics subtrack, which requires 18 s.h. of credit. The subtrack emphasizes the organization, management, and use of health care information; health care research, education, and practice; and information technology developments in the socioeconomic context of health care.

College of Nursing students in the certificate’s health informatics subtrack complete two interdisciplinary core courses: 096:283, which explores decision-making processes and technological tools to support health care administration, management, and practice; and 096:289, which focuses on field projects related to health informatics topics and includes a seminar. Students earn an additional 12 s.h. of credit in courses outside their major program of study, chosen in consultation with their major program advisor and their certificate advisor.

Students who earn credit for a thesis, project, or independent study in their major program of study may apply the credit to the Certificate in Health
Informatics if the certificate advisor determines that the subject matter is pertinent.

See Informatics (p. 1163) (Graduate College) in the Catalog.

Professional Improvement

Registered nurses who wish to take University of Iowa course work to fulfill professional or personal improvement objectives may request admission in the professional improvement (PI) category. This admission status allows students to take some graduate courses at the University without committing to a degree objective.

Admission as a nursing professional improvement student requires a formal application, including submission of three current written recommendations and all academic transcripts. GRE General Test scores, required by the University, must be submitted before the end of first semester registration.

Application deadlines are July 15 for fall semester admission, December 1 for spring semester admission, and May 1 for summer session admission.

Since acceptance as a PI student does not influence acceptance to the college’s graduate degree programs, PI students interested in earning a graduate degree in nursing must apply for admission to the degree program (see "Admission" under "Graduate Programs" above). Students may count a maximum of 6 s.h. or two required nursing core courses that they complete as PI students toward M.S.N. requirements. Professional improvement students may not enroll in Ph.D. courses.

Student Organizations

All College of Nursing undergraduate students are members of the National Student Nurses Association and its local chapter, the Iowa Association of Nursing Students. The University of Iowa Association of Nursing Students (UIANS) provides opportunities for professional growth and development in nursing. UIANS representatives are members of the University of Iowa Student Government (UISG), and there is a UIANS representative on the Academic Council of the College of Nursing.

The University of Iowa Minority Student Nurse Association (UIMNSA) provides opportunities for professional growth and development for students from populations underrepresented in nursing. UIMNSA board members are members of the University of Iowa Student Government.

University of Iowa Men in Nursing (UIMiN) provides opportunities for nurses to meet, to recruit, to talk, and to influence the environment for men in nursing. It is open to all nursing students.

The college’s Association of Graduate Nursing Students (AGNS) provides opportunities for professional growth sharing of research, and representation on varied college and University committees.

Continuing Education

The college offers nonacademic, short-term continuing education programs for registered nurses. Continuing Education Units (CEUs) are awarded for each program on the basis of one unit per 10 clock hours of instruction. The College of Nursing is approved by the Iowa Board of Nursing as an approved provider, number 1, and is accredited by the American Nurses Association Board of Accreditation and the National Association of Pediatric Nurse Associates and Practitioners.

Facilities

The Nursing Building is centrally located on the University’s main campus, in close proximity to the Carver College of Medicine, the College of Dentistry, the College of Pharmacy, the College of Public Health, University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics, Bowen Science Building, and the Hardin Library for the Health Sciences. Completed in 1971, the building consists of five floors with varied and specialized facilities. Administrative offices are located on the first floor. Faculty offices are located on every floor except the second, which is used entirely for classrooms and laboratories.

The Nursing Clinical Education Center provides clinical experiences for nursing students and serves as a resource for the University’s professional nursing staff. Opened in 2006 at University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics (UIHC), the center offers the latest technology in an 11-room clinical simulation lab. It also has an 86-seat classroom, a resource library, and gathering spaces for private study. The center is operated collaboratively by the College of Nursing and the UIHC Department of Nursing Services and Patient Care.
Courses

Primarily for Undergraduates

096:029 First-Year Seminar 1 s.h.
Introduces first-year undergraduate students to the intellectual life of the University of Iowa; provides an opportunity to work closely with a faculty member or senior administrator; seminars help students make the transition to college-level learning through active participation in their own learning.

096:030 Human Development and Behavior 3 s.h.
Normal developmental transitions experienced by individuals and family systems throughout the lifespan, including physical, cognitive, and social-emotional development. Prerequisites: 031:001. Requirements: nursing or nursing-interest major.

096:107 Distance Education: Independent Study 1-3 s.h.
Supervised study designed for individual undergraduate students.

096:108 Basic Aspects of Aging 3 s.h.

096:109 Leadership U 1-3 s.h.
Development of leadership in nursing; application of leadership theory in practice by participating in activities such as attending professional organization meetings, acting as a delegate, writing legislation, holding a board position, or being part of a multidisciplinary or international team to organize events for community involvement. Requirements: nursing major.

096:110 Healthcare Finance 3 s.h.
Basic structure of U.S. health care system and how it is funded; tools for making decisions about available financial resources.

096:112 Human Sexuality, Diversity, and Society 1-3 s.h.
Physiological, psychological aspects; parameters defined by students, instructor. Same as 042:112.

096:113 Distance Education: Honors Independent Study 1-3 s.h.
Supervised study designed for individual honors undergraduate students.

096:114 Human Pathophysiology: Organ Systems 3 s.h.
Normal and abnormal functioning of human cells, tissues, and organ systems over the lifespan; focus on cardiovascular, respiratory, renal, gastrointestinal, endocrine, and reproductive systems, and on processes of metabolism and homeostasis of the internal milieu. Requirements: approved courses in biology, inorganic chemistry, microbiology, and human anatomy.

096:115 Human Pathophysiology: Cellular/Neurology/Immunology 3 s.h.
Normal and abnormal functioning of human cells, tissues, and organ systems over the lifespan; focus on processes of communication, control, defense, and movement. Requirements: approved courses in animal biology, inorganic chemistry, microbiology, and human anatomy.

096:116 Introduction to Human Genetics 3 s.h.
Introduction to organization of the human genome and basic principles of inheritance in humans; cells and development, chromosome structure and function, gene structure and function, genes in pedigrees and populations, implications of genetic variation on health.

096:117 Pathology 3 s.h.
Introduction to abnormal functioning of cells, tissues, organs, and systems over the human lifespan; focus on hematological, immune, neurological, musculoskeletal, cardiovascular, respiratory, renal, gastrointestinal, endocrine, and reproductive system; alterations in metabolic processes and alterations in homeostatic mechanisms impacting the internal milieu; emphasis on critical thinking. Prerequisites: 002:002, 004:007, 004:008, 027:130, 060:110, and 061:164.
096:118 Pathophysiology 3 s.h.
Abnormal physiological health transitions; disorders in cells, organs; systems involved in vegetative functioning and biological defense of the human organism. Requirements: one course each in anatomy, chemistry, microbiology, physics, physiology, and psychology.

096:119 Neurological and Behavioral Pathology 1-2 s.h.
Abnormal physiological and psychological health transitions that have well-documented physiological and/or behavioral bases; focus on neurological and behavioral disorders. Corequisites: 096:118, if not taken as a prerequisite. Requirements: one course in anatomy, chemistry, microbiology, physics, physiology, and psychology.

096:120 Health Assessment and Communication Across the Lifespan 3 s.h.
Assessment and communication skills; development and application of cognitive skills to perform systematic, holistic, and culturally competent health assessments; emphasis on application of clinical reasoning involving assessment, nursing diagnoses, interventions, and outcomes. Corequisites: 096:117, 096:121, 096:122, and 096:123. Requirements: admission to the College of Nursing.

096:122 Clinical Simulation Laboratory I 3 s.h.
First of a two-part series focusing on laboratory-based learning and simulation experience involving basic biophysical and psychosocial assessment skills needed to provide safe and effective nursing care across diverse settings and populations; emphasis on development of nurse-patient and intra- and inter-professional communication skills. Requirements: admission to the College of Nursing.

096:123 Professional Role I: Professionalism and Patient Safety 3 s.h.
Introduction to inherent nursing values, history, theories, and scope of professional nursing; concepts of safety, risk identification, and clinical decision making; information technologies that promote quality and safety. Requirements: admission to the College of Nursing.

096:124 Pharmacotherapeutics in Nursing 3 s.h.
Basic principles of pharmacotherapeutics and pharmacologic interventions; focus on mechanism of drug actions in patient treatment. Prerequisites: 096:114 and 096:115.

096:125 Health Disparities and Cultural Competence 2-4 s.h.
Characteristics, causes, and effects of health disparities in the U.S. health care system; foundation for development of knowledge, attitudes, and skills required of culturally competent health care providers; definitions and models of cultural competence, characteristics of culturally effective practitioners and workplaces; health disparities among specific populations, evidence for cultural competence as a remedy; taking a culturally appropriate history; working with interpreters; legal and professional imperatives for cultural competence. Same as 046:377, 172:135.

096:126 Communication for Health Professionals 2 s.h.
The communication process in health care settings; emphasis on theory-based strategies to improve communication with individuals, families, other health care professionals. Requirements: admission to prelicensure BSN program.
096:127 Health Assessment Across the Life Span
Knowledge and skills health professionals need to perform holistic health assessments of individuals across the life span; emphasis on history taking, physical assessment skills; laboratory practices. Requirements: admission to the College of Nursing and courses in anatomy, human development and behavior, and animal biology.

096:130 Teaching and Learning Online
Synthesis and critical evaluation of current knowledge regarding use of online learning as a tool; empirical research, best practices, and available resources to support effective implementation and management of online learning; skill development and practice; web-based course.

096:131 Nursing and Pharmacological Interventions II
Second of a two-part series focusing on complex biophysical concepts that inform nursing and pharmacological interventions, including fluids and electrolytes, shock, and perioperative care; focus on selected disorders and/or diseases, including neurological, immune, musculoskeletal, cardiovascular, respiratory, renal, and endocrine disorders. Prerequisites: 096:121 and 096:122. Corequisites: 096:132, 096:133, 096:148, and 096:149.

096:132 Clinical Simulation Laboratory II
Second of a two-part series focusing on laboratory-based learning and simulation experience involving complex biophysical and psychosocial assessment skills, critical thinking, and decision making needed to provide safe and effective nursing care across diverse settings and populations; emphasis on development of clinical reasoning skills across the lifespan, including end-of-life care. Prerequisites: 096:117, 096:120, 096:121, 096:122, and 096:123. Corequisites: 096:131.

096:133 Professional Role II: Research
Introduction to concepts and process of research in nursing; primary focus on understanding research and its foundation for nursing practice. Requirements: basic statistics. Recommendations: upper-level statistics.

096:134 Basic Concepts of Nursing Care
Physiological and behavioral concepts, nursing interventions, and activities across settings and populations; based on nursing interventions classification taxonomy. First in a two-course sequence. Corequisites: 096:114 or 096:115, and 096:127, if not taken as prerequisites. Requirements: nursing major.

096:135 Complex Concepts of Nursing Care
Continuation of 096:134; physiological and behavioral concepts, nursing interventions, and activities across settings and populations. Prerequisites: 096:134. Corequisites: 096:136, 096:114 or 096:115, and 096:124, if not taken as prerequisites. Requirements: nursing major

096:136 Core Clinical Practicum
Acute care of adult clients in the clinical setting; in-depth practicum experience applying basic and complex concepts of nursing care; focus on clinical decision-making skills. Prerequisites: 096:126, 096:127, and 096:134. Corequisites: 096:135.

096:137 Nursing Care of the Patient in Pain
Assessment, pharmacological and nonpharmacological nursing intervention, evaluation of acute, chronic-benign, and chronic-malignant pain. Requirements: RN license or successful completion of 096:134.

096:139 Parent-Child Nursing
Health promotion, maintenance, and restoration for parents, infants, children, and adolescents in childbearing and child-rearing families. Prerequisites: 096:124 and 096:135.
096:140 Parent-Child Nursing Practicum 3 s.h.

096:141 Gerontological Nursing 3 s.h.
Nurse’s role in promoting, maintaining, and restoring the health of aging adults; nursing science applied to care of older adults in diverse settings. Prerequisites: 096:124 and 096:135.

096:142 Gerontological Nursing Practicum 3 s.h.
Nursing process applied to promote, maintain, and restore health of older adults; opportunities to provide nursing care to well elderly and to acutely and/or chronically ill elderly in a variety of settings. Prerequisites: 096:124, 096:135, and 096:136. Corequisites: 096:141, if not taken as a prerequisite.

096:143 Research for Nursing Practice 1-3 s.h.
Introduction to the concepts and process of nursing research; focus on critique of published research and application to nursing practice. Requirements: nursing major and an approved statistics course.

096:144 Parent-Child Nursing 3 s.h.

096:146 Health Promotion for Older Adults 3 s.h.
Problems, strategic efforts toward long-term goal of health promotion; slowing the decline caused by chronic conditions to extend independent, rewarding lives. Same as 153:146, 169:146.

096:147 End-of-Life Care for Adults and Families 2-4 s.h.

096:148 Gerontological Nursing 3 s.h.
Nurse’s role in promoting, maintaining, and restoring the health of aging adults; internal and external influences on older adults, application of nursing science to the care of older adults in diverse settings. Prerequisites: 096:117, 096:120, 096:121, 096:122, and 096:123. Corequisites: 096:131, 096:132, 096:133, and 096:149.

096:149 Adult/Gerontological Nursing Practicum 5 s.h.
In-depth clinical experience designed to apply basic and complex concepts of nursing care for adults of all ages in a variety of settings; focus on older adults; development and application of critical thinking skills necessary to understand disease process and the associated signs and symptoms, interventions, and outcomes. Prerequisites: 096:117, 096:120, 096:121, 096:122, and 096:123. Corequisites: 096:131, 096:132, 096:133, and 096:148.

096:150 Independent Study arr.
Supervised study designed for individual undergraduate students.

096:151 Honors Independent Study 1-3 s.h.
Supervised study designed for individual honors students.

096:152 Honors Seminar 1 s.h.
Supervised study designed for individual honors students.
096:153 Community and Public Health Nursing Theory: Generalist 3 s.h.
Nursing’s role in the relationship between community conditions and public health; principles of public health with nursing knowledge and skills to address health needs of individuals, families, communities, populations. Prerequisites: 096:135.

096:154 Community and Public Health Nursing Practicum 3 s.h.
Application of public health principles with nursing knowledge and skills to address the health needs of communities and populations. Prerequisites: 096:124, 096:135, and 096:136. Corequisites: 096:153, if not taken as a prerequisite.

096:155 Psychiatric/Mental Health Nursing 3 s.h.
General principles and practices of psychiatric/mental health nursing; psychiatric disorders, populations at risk, continuity of care, problems in daily living. Prerequisites: 096:124 and 096:135.

096:156 Psychiatric/Mental Health Nursing Practicum 3 s.h.
Nursing process used to deliver nursing care to individuals and families with mental illness in a variety of clinical settings; focus on promotion, maintenance, restoration of the mental health of individuals and families. Prerequisites: 096:124, 096:135, and 096:136. Corequisites: 096:155, if not taken as a prerequisite.

096:157 Nursing Leadership and Care Management 3 s.h.
Analysis of nursing leadership, care management, and models of care in the context of society and the interdisciplinary health care system. Requirements: senior standing in nursing.

096:158 Clinical Nursing Internship 5 s.h.
Independent internship in one of a variety of health care settings to promote role transition, lifelong learning; emphasis on integration and application of knowledge and skills to design, provide, manage, and coordinate care. Requirements: senior standing in nursing.

096:159 Contemporary Nursing Practice Issues 3 s.h.
Identification, exploration, analyses of selected issues in nursing and health care; impact of significant historical, social, political, genetic, legal, and ethical factors on development of the nursing discipline. Requirements: senior standing in nursing.

096:160 Psychiatric/Mental Health Nursing 3 s.h.

096:161 Mental Health and Parent-Child Nursing Practicum 4 s.h.
Application of nursing knowledge to promote, maintain, and restore health; vulnerable populations of interest include persons with mental health disorders, infants, children, adolescents, and families; processes of childbearing and childrearing within the context of families. Prerequisites: 096:149. Corequisites: 096:144, 096:160, and 096:162. Requirements: successful completion of two semesters in BSN curriculum.

096:162 Professional Role III: Improving Health Systems 2 s.h.
Legal and regulatory processes that impact health care, how disparities influence health care, and evidence-based approaches for improving quality of care; strategies for working effectively in intra and interdisciplinary teams; integration of a culture of safety. Prerequisites: 096:123 and 096:133.
096:163 Information Management and Patient Care Technology in Practice

Information management, patient care technology; information systems for quality improvement data, regulatory reporting; range of technologies and infrastructure of evidence-based information for clinical care, including patient monitoring systems, medication administration systems, longitudinal electronic records, clinical decision support tools, and other data gathering devices to support patient care; open to continual learning. Prerequisites: 096:136. Requirements: admission to the prelicensure BSN program.

096:164 Community and Public Health Nursing

096:165 Community and Public Health Nursing Practicum

Learning opportunities to apply principles of public health with nursing knowledge and skills to address health promotion, disease and injury prevention, and nursing management of infectious disease and chronic health conditions; nursing activities focus on improvement of health outcomes at individual, family, community, and global levels within the context of population-focused practice. Corequisites: 096:164. Requirements: (for pre-licensure BSN student) successful completion of 096:149 and 096:161, and concurrent enrollment in 096:166 and 096:167; (for post-licensure RN-BSN student) successful completion of 096:110, 096:116, 096:117, 096:123, 096:133, 096:162, 096:167, and 096:170; 6 s.h. of required nursing electives; completion of general education electives; RN licensure in state of practicum; and concurrent enrollment in 096:116, if not taken as a prerequisite.

096:166 Senior Nursing Internship

096:167 Professional Role IV: Leadership and Professional Engagement

Concepts of leadership, fellowship, management, informatics, and professional engagement; quality improvement strategies and skills; professional development, career trajectory, and role transitions. Prerequisites: 096:123, 096:133, and 096:162. Corequisites: 096:162, if not taken as a prerequisite.

096:168 Nonprofit Organizational Effectiveness I

Operational and financing aspects of nonprofit management; mission and governance of organization; strategic planning for effective management, including finance, budget, income generation, fund-raising. Same as 024:147, 032:127, 042:157, 06J:147, 06T:144.
096:169 Nonprofit Organizational Effectiveness II 3 s.h.
Qualities for leadership of nonprofit organizations, including relationships with staff and volunteers; relationship of nonprofit and outside world; marketing, public relations, advocacy strategies for nonprofits. Same as 024:148, 032:128, 042:158, 06J:148.

096:170 Professional Role IV: Leadership and Professional Engagement Practicum 2 s.h.

096:171 Nursing and Society 3 s.h.
Introduction to health care systems and the nursing profession; health care systems, resources, financing health care, and health care accessibility in the United States; the creative and scientific processes that underlie and guide the practice of nursing. Requirements: admission to the prelicensure BSN program.

096:172 Providing Culturally Congruent Care for Diverse Populations 3 s.h.
Role of health care professionals in providing care that is culturally congruent with the client’s values, beliefs, and traditions; opportunity to build knowledge, attitudes, awareness, and skills necessary in providing culturally congruent care for specific populations; demonstration of essential skills; exploration of personal attitudes, biases; issues and trends that impact delivery of care to specific populations. Offered online. Requirements: sophomore standing.

096:176 Clinical Reasoning 4 s.h.
Skills to help nontraditional nursing students synthesize, expand, and refine nursing concepts and clinical reasoning competencies; development and application of cognitive and psychomotor skills necessary for performing systematic, holistic, and culturally competent health assessment. Prerequisites: 096:115. Corequisites: 096:114 and 096:177. Requirements: admission to MSN:CNL program.

096:177 Therapeutic Nursing Interventions I 4 s.h.

096:178 Therapeutic Nursing Interventions II 4 s.h.

096:179 Selected Topics in Nursing 1-2 s.h.
In-depth study of topics in professional nursing practice and health care; workshop format.

096:180 Intensive Practicum I 3 s.h.

096:181 Clinical Instruction in Nursing Education 3 s.h.
Role and functions of the nurse educator in the clinical setting; development of teaching strategies and learning activities that support effective clinical and laboratory instruction; evidence-based teaching and evaluation practices; how to incorporate the core concepts of critical thinking for clinical decision-making, effective communication, and cultural competence into clinical experiences; learners with diverse learning styles and backgrounds; ethical and legal implications in clinical teaching and evaluation of learning; technology and emerging trends that impact teaching in the clinical setting. Requirements: RN-BSN or graduate standing.

096:183 Intensive Practicum II  3 s.h.
Experience in varied acute and community-based settings; opportunity to apply principles to the care of diverse populations, consistent with the three specialty theory courses; proficiency with advanced care management interventions and technologies. Prerequisites: 096:180. Corequisites: 096:139, 096:141, and 096:155. Requirements: admission to MSN:CNL program.

096:184 Hairitage: African American Women's Hair Culture  2-3 s.h.
Hair and its centrality to the experience of women of African descent; emotional, political, economical, and historical significance; political, legal, and educational implications; connections to ideas of aesthetics, race relations, family dynamics, consumerism, and so forth.

096:187 Legal Issues for Health Care Providers  3 s.h.
Legal issues faced by health care providers, counselors, and social services providers; administrative and regulatory requirements, civil lawsuits, issues that affect students as providers, advocates, and individuals.

096:190 Dimensions of Professional Nursing  3 s.h.
The nursing discipline; identification, exploration, analysis of contemporary issues and trends in nursing; professional roles and responsibilities; the health care environment; importance of nursing science, theory, and research to nursing practice. Requirements: computer literacy and RN/BSN standing.

096:191 Health Assessment  4 s.h.
Health assessment of adults; experience demonstrating assessment skills, compiling a health history, conducting a physical exam, and developing nursing diagnoses for clients. Requirements: RN/BSN standing.

096:194 Leadership and Care Management in Professional Nursing Practice  3 s.h.
Nursing leadership and management in a dynamic practice environment; focus on context in which nurses practice, leadership and management principles in changing health care system. Prerequisites: 096:153, 096:154, and 096:143.

096:195 Practicum for Leadership and Care Management in Professional Nursing  3 s.h.
Experience applying concepts of leadership, management, and evidence-based practice in a variety of settings; development of individualized plan of study for the experience. Prerequisites: 096:153, 096:154, and 096:143. Corequisites: 096:194, if not taken as a prerequisite. Requirements: RN licensure in state of practicum.

096:196 Special Studies in Nursing  3 s.h.
Identification, exploration, and analysis of contemporary issues that confront the professional nurse; the practice of nursing, regulation of health care systems, available resources. Prerequisites: 096:153.

096:199 Intensive Practicum III  4 s.h.
Intensive clinical experience in nursing care management in collaboration with nurse preceptors; complex, collaborative nursing care management of diverse populations; enhancement of care management skills as a basic foundation for achieving optimal clinical outcomes; experience in application of evidence-based practice, clinical decision making, delegation and supervision, fiscal accounting; focus on interdisciplinary collaboration within complex organizational systems. Prerequisites: 096:139, 096:141, 096:153, 096:155, and 096:183. Requirements: admission to MSN:CNL program.
Primarily for Graduate Students

Courses are offered only if minimum enrollments are maintained.

096:200 Capstone: Clinical Immersion and Microsystem Improvement Leadership

Intensive immersion into role and practice expectations of clinical nurse leaders (CNL) at microsystem level; mentoring in design and delivery of care; application of evidence-based practice; collection and evaluation of client-outcomes data; assessment and mitigation of cohort risk; interdisciplinary collaboration; client advocacy; client and staff education; direct provision of care in complex situations; principles of effective use of resources; application of systems thinking to capstone project; improvement science and quality tools to address Institute of Medicine aims for health care improvement. Prerequisites: 096:208, 096:209, 096:263, and 096:266. Requirements: all didactic and clinical courses for general and specialty practice (gerontology, parent-child, mental health, and community); and master’s portfolio.

096:201 Applied Epidemiology

Basic principles and methods of epidemiology; application to field of nursing and nursing research; historical perspective of epidemiology, epidemiological models of health and disease, measures of disease occurrence and association, disease screening, causal inference, study design and application of epidemiological approaches to clinical practice, program planning and evaluation.

096:202 Foundations of Nursing Science I

Integration of interdisciplinary theories and philosophies of science relevant to nursing; emphasis on application of theory and philosophy in advanced nursing practice and research. Requirements: doctoral standing.

096:203 Healthcare Infrastructure and Policy

Health care infrastructure; health care reform and its implementation; political theories, policy definition, role of health professionals in policy-making process, information technology and its role in patient care, cultural factors affecting access and quality of care.

096:204 Quality and Safety

Foundation for understanding concepts of safety and quality across health care settings; providing a safe environment; elevating staff performance and clinical outcomes related to safety and quality; methods for continuous improvement.

096:205 Clinical Practicum: Health of Children in Schools

Delivery of health care in school settings; educational, legal, cultural, ethical issues in school nursing practice; developmental issues and their relationship to risk factors and the school population’s health; application of nursing interventions, evaluation of nursing and educational outcomes; clinical practicum with children in a school setting; seminar, 90 clock hours in clinical practicum. Requirements: MSN enrollment with school health focus.

096:207 Clinical Education in the Care Environment

Preparation to assume role of educator with individuals, groups, and communities, including staff and students; teaching/learning process for providing client education; knowledge and skills needed to effectively fill role of preceptor/mentor.

096:208 Leadership and Management Essentials

Roles and strategies for leading and managing others in health care environments to influence health care delivery and provide a healthy, innovative working environment; focus on selected leadership and organizational concepts essential to leaders in health care.

096:209 Health Systems/Economics/Policy

Global, economic, organizational, political, and technological contexts for advanced nursing practice.
096:211 Research for Evidence-Based Practice
3 s.h.
Opportunity for clinicians to develop proficiency in use of research- and evidence-based practice; essentials of the research process, qualitative and quantitative research, components of evidence-based practice; acquisition of knowledge and skills necessary for research (knowledge) utilization initiatives and application of evidence-based practice principles in clinical settings; identification of appropriate research questions, synthesis of knowledge base for evidence-based practice, revision of clinical practice guidelines, and evaluation of research utilization and evidence-based practice initiatives.

096:212 Research for Evidence-Based Practice II
3 s.h.
Innovation models applied to nursing practice; implementation and evaluation research applied to planning, initiating, and monitoring best-care practices; factors that impede or facilitate evidence-based practice changes within and across health care systems; strategies for successful implementation of evidence-based practice change in organizations; students participate in evidence-based implementation process. Requirements: DNP enrollment or 096:211.

096:213 Physiology and Pathophysiology for Advanced Clinical Practice
3-4 s.h.
Regulation of cellular, organ, and system function; regulation of internal milieu; functional interrelationships among body systems; cellular and body-wide mechanisms of self-defense; illustrative examples of pathological phenomena.

096:214 Advanced Health Assessment for Clinical Practice
3 s.h.
Knowledge and skills necessary for advanced health assessment of individuals and families across the life span. Requirements: graduate standing in the College of Nursing.

096:215 Health Systems, Finance, and Economics
3 s.h.
Global, economic, organizational, legal, political, and technological contexts in advanced nursing practice; knowledge and skills necessary for understanding the evolution of health services organizations, financing of health care, and relationships among socioeconomic systems influencing health care and nursing practice; impact of macrosystems on distribution, acquisition, and use of financial and economic principles in delivery of health care services. Prerequisites: 096:208.

096:216 Group Facilitation in Human Sexuality
0-3 s.h.
Principles of group dynamics, group process; leadership skills for small, task-oriented discussion groups on human sexuality. Prerequisites: 042:112. Same as 042:216.

096:217 Health Promotion and Assessment for Advanced Clinical Practice
3-5 s.h.
Didactic and clinical laboratory instruction; emphasis on knowledge and skills necessary for advanced health assessment and health promotion interventions for individuals and families across the lifespan; clinical practicum consisting of intensive assessment experiences relevant to role.

096:218 Mental Disorders in Advanced Practice
3 s.h.
Foundation for advanced practice nurse to provide care for common mental health disorders; presentation of neurophysiological, genomic, environmental/social, and developmental theories to understand etiology and presentation of common mental health conditions; psychopharmacological and nonpharmacological principles and modalities for treatment of common mental health problems. Requirements: admission to direct care DNP program.

096:219 Primary Care: Infants, Children, and Adolescents I
3 s.h.
096:220 Primary Care: Infants, Children, and Adolescents II  3 s.h.

096:222 Health Promotion and Intervention for Primary Care  3 s.h.
Theories of health promotion in primary care, levels of prevention, epidemiological principles and methods; specific interventions designed to maintain, promote, optimize health across the lifespan.

096:223 Clinical Applications for Health Assessment and Health Promotion  1-3 s.h.
Advanced health assessment and promotion skills applied to planning, implementing, and evaluating interventions designed to maintain, promote, and optimize health across the lifespan. Corequisites: 096:214 and 096:222, if not taken as prerequisites. Requirements: graduate standing in the College of Nursing.

096:224 Pharmacotherapeutics for Advanced Clinical Practice  4 s.h.
Pharmacologic, pharmacokinetic, and pharmacodynamic principles essential for advanced clinical practice; classes of drugs frequently used in management of common clinical conditions; legal considerations in prescriptive authority. Prerequisites: 096:213.

096:225 Biopsychosocial Dimensions of Healthy Aging  3 s.h.
Biopsychosocial dimensions of healthy aging in individuals; healthy aging, including behavior and normal age-related physiological changes, psychosocial and cultural implications of aging; expansion of gerontological nursing based on integration of theory, research, standardized nursing languages.

096:226 Clinical Nurse Leader Seminar  2 s.h.
Evolution of clinical nurse leader (CNL) role, eight core role functions, and the process of integration of CNL role into health care system. Requirements: admission to MSN-CNL program.

096:227 Leadership in the Microsystem  3 s.h.
Assessment of the microsystem of practice, clinical nurse leader role as leader embedded in a microsystem, and identification of opportunities to enhance care delivery in the microsystem. Requirements: admission to MSN-CNL program.

096:228 Advanced Practice Genetic Nursing I  1-3 s.h.
Advanced practice genetic nursing for those at risk for genetic conditions or a condition with a genetic component; application of genetic/genomic science to nursing practice including chromosomal variations; Mendelian and nontraditional inheritance; preconception and prenatal health care in genetics; dysmorphology examinations; developmental delay associated with genetic conditions; application of molecular methodology to clinical and research practice; beliefs about race and ethnicity in the genomic era; ethical, legal, and social implications of genetic nursing. Prerequisites: 096:214 and 096:223. Corequisites: 096:116. Requirements: enrollment in APN-Genetics MSN program.

096:229 Advanced Practice Genetic Nursing Practicum I  2 s.h.
Integration and application of advanced practice in genetic nursing assessment and counseling skills with individuals and families. Corequisites: 096:228.
096:230 Advanced Practice Genetic Nursing II
Advanced practice genetic nursing for individuals, families, and populations who are at risk for genetic conditions or who have a condition with a genetic component; application of genetic science to nursing assessments, interventions, and outcomes; genomics and the delivery of health care in primary and public health; pharmacogenetics; genomic therapeutics; childhood onset genetic disorders; adult onset genetic disorders; part two of the Advanced Practice Nursing Genetics course series. Prerequisites: 096:116, 096:214, 096:223, and 096:228. Requirements: enrollment in APN-Genetics MSN program.

096:231 Advanced Practice Genetic Nursing Practicum II
Application of advanced practice in genetic nursing; emphasis on conditions that present in the adult years and the nurse’s role in an interdisciplinary genetic delivery system. Prerequisites: 096:229. Corequisites: 096:230.

096:232 Professional Aspects of Clinical Nursing Practice
Advanced nursing role competencies and related settings in which advanced nursing practice occurs; history and development, core competencies, advanced practice roles, practice management issues. Prerequisites: 096:208.

096:239 CNL Capstone Clinical Immersion
Intensive immersion in role and practice expectations of the CNL; experienced leaders within the microsystem, who are experts in the provision of clinical services at the point of care/services, serve as mentors. Requirements: concurrent enrollment in master’s portfolio.

096:241 The Care of the Frail Elderly
Clinical management of the elderly; emphasis on economic considerations, principles of gerontological care, common syndromes, ethical issues; clinical application experience in a long-term care setting. Prerequisites: 096:214, 096:222, and 096:224. Same as 153:241.

096:245 Distance Education: Master’s Independent Study
Supervised study and/or clinical practice adjusted to needs of master’s degree students. Requirements: M.S.N. enrollment.

096:246 Nursing Education: Process, Roles, and Strategies
Role of nurse educator through study, application of teaching/learning theories; learning tasks of students in nursing education programs. Corequisites: 096:208, if not taken as a prerequisite.

096:247 Curriculum Development in Nursing Education
Societal, educational, professional factors in undergraduate curriculum design; evaluation of components in basic nursing education programs.

096:248 Distance Education: Master’s Portfolio
Clear and cohesive synthesis of clinical or professional experiences and competencies, including those gained in graduate study; students’ clinical or professional strengths and career goals. Requirements: M.S.N. enrollment.

096:249 Master’s Portfolio
Opportunity for clear and cohesive synthesis of clinical or professional experiences and competencies, including those gained in graduate study, that portray students’ clinical or professional strengths and career goals.

096:250 Psychiatric/Mental Health Nursing Theory I
Basic psychological principles, theories related to mental health and intersections between physical and mental health; psychological theory viewed through framework of lifespan development, infancy through adulthood.

096:251 Psychiatric/Mental Health Nursing Theory II
Advanced psychiatric nursing practice with selected populations; definition and expansion of practice based on the integration of theory, standardized languages, research, self-evaluation. Prerequisites: 096:250.
096:256 Occupational Health Nursing I

096:257 Occupational Health Practicum I

096:258 Occupational Health Nursing II

096:259 Occupational Health Practicum II
Transition from student role to clinical specialist role in occupational health nursing; in-depth experience in student’s interest area. Corequisites: 096:258.

096:260 Nursing Systems Administration I
Leadership concepts and theories, and their application to the nurse administrator’s unique roles in community and institutional health care organizations; environmental, technological, and professional influences on structure and functions of health care and nursing service organizations and on the nurse administrator’s role; course modules on leading patient care delivery, health care systems, and strategic management; practicum component for nurse administrator students. Prerequisites: 096:208.

096:261 Nursing Systems Administration II
Concepts and theories regarding administration of financial, material, and human resources and quality of service, related to selected functions of the nurse administrator; course modules on financial management, human resources management, and outcomes and safety management; financial, human resources, and outcomes management in context of institutional settings (hospitals, nursing homes) or community and ambulatory care settings; influence of economic and social forces on administration of resources, personnel, and quality of service; research in nursing, business, and behavioral science related to administrative functions; practicum component for nurse administrator students. Prerequisites: 096:208 or 096:260.

096:262 Executive Leadership and Management
Leadership and management concepts and theories; application to roles unique to executive nurse leader in health care organizations in institutional and community settings; emphasis on executive leadership roles for facilitating, integrating, and coordinating complex structures, processes, and outcomes in health care systems.

096:263 Informatics in Nursing and Health Care
Foundation of information management and processing principles that support data, information, and knowledge in provision and delivery of nursing and health care. Requirements: competence in computer use and nursing major.

096:264 Financial Management
Preparation for nurse leaders and practitioners to use techniques for financial analysis and decision making for patient care programs across the health care continuum; focus on efficient and effective management of resources for delivery of quality health care services.

096:265 Managing Care in an Organizational Environment
Manage operations of patient care services across health care continuum within the framework of an established health care organization; focus on efficient and effective management of the structure, governance, patient care delivery system of care, and outcomes of care.
096:266 Advanced Case Management: Interdisciplinary Approach
Theory, evidence, and strategies for health care coordination and integration examined through analysis of case management and disease management interventions; interdisciplinary approach; leadership for interdisciplinary teamwork; analysis and critique of case and disease management theory and models; synthesis of case and disease management principles as a framework for managing health care outcomes for cost and quality, identification of evidence-based clinical care guidelines; analysis of financial, legal, ethical, and outcomes management components of case and disease management practice. Same as 174:266.

096:267 Seminar on Innovations
Strategizing about taking meaningful action, disrupting stable processes, diffusing innovation, and sustaining change; emerging innovations in nursing and health care systems that impact the functions and responsibilities of nurse leaders.

096:268 Seminar on Healthy Work Environments
Application of leadership and management knowledge specific to creating and sustaining healthy work environments in health care; current and emerging issues focused on health care work environments.

096:269 Human Physiology and Pathophysiology for Advanced Practice
Detailed study of normal and abnormal human physiology, including mechanisms that govern and support cell, organ, and system function; builds on basic sciences required for undergraduate nursing curriculum and on clinical skills from experience in intensive care setting. Requirements: admission to anesthesia nursing program.

096:270 Human Anatomy for Advanced Practice
Interrelationships between anatomic structure and physiological function in health and disease; clinical assessment of functional integrity of organ systems; implications of pathophysiology for anesthesia. Requirements: admission to anesthesia nursing program. Same as 060:270.

096:271 Chemical and Physical Principles of Anesthesia Practice
Chemistry and physics, as applied to anesthesia. Requirements: admission to anesthesia nursing program. Same as 116:271.

096:273 Pharmacology of Anesthesia Practice II
Continuation of 071:115; vascular, hepatic, renal, GI, endocrine aspects; cellular mechanisms, electrolytes alterations, anesthesia specific implications. Requirements: grade of 2.75 or higher in 071:115 and enrollment in anesthesia nursing program. Same as 116:273.

096:274 Basic Principles of Anesthesia Practice
Overview of anesthesia as a nursing specialty; patient assessment, anesthetic planning and management, pertinent regulations; principles of general and regional anesthesia for surgical specialties. Requirements: (for 096:274) grades of 3.00 or higher in 071:115 and 096:271; (for 116:274) grades of 3.00 or higher in 071:115 and 116:271. Same as 116:274.

096:275 Advanced Principles of Anesthesia Practice I
Special needs and intraoperative management of obstetric, pediatric, and neurological patients; emphasis on pathophysiology, monitoring, ancillary requirements. Prerequisites: 096:274 or 116:274. Requirements: grade of 3.00 or higher in 096:273 or 116:273. Same as 116:275.

096:277 Advanced Principles of Anesthesia Practice II
Acute and chronic pain management; anesthetic problems with concurrent multisystem disease, advanced age, altered physical and/or mental status. Prerequisites: 096:274 or 116:274. Requirements: grade of 3.00 or higher in 096:273 or 116:273. Same as 116:277.
096:279 Equipment and Technological Principles of Anesthesia Practice 3 s.h.
Anesthesia delivery systems, ancillary equipment, monitoring devices; correlation of applicable chemical and physical principles for use, safe operation, care, and cleaning of anesthesia-related equipment. Prerequisites: 116:271. Requirements: anesthesia nursing program enrollment. Same as 116:279.

096:280 Primary Care: Adults and Older Individuals I 3 s.h.
Pathophyslogic alterations and clinical management of associated health care problems in adults, the elderly. Prerequisites: 096:213, 096:214, 096:222, and 096:224.

096:283 Health Informatics I 3 s.h.

096:284 Primary Care: Adults and Older Individuals II 3 s.h.
Continuation of 096:280. Prerequisites: 096:280.

096:289 Health Informatics II 3 s.h.
Selected health informatics initiatives, including computer-based patient records, physiologic monitoring, networking, imaging, virtual reality; participation in an interdisciplinary project team focused on an informatics innovation; application and research seminars. Same as 021:280, 051:189, 056:287, 074:192, 200:120.

096:290 Introductory Clinical Anesthesia 1 s.h.
Initial anesthesia preceptorship; development of basic clinical skills for work as a nurse anesthetist. Requirements: (for 096:290) grades of 3.00 or higher in 096:273 and 096:279; (for 116:290) grades of 3.00 or higher in 116:273 and 116:279. Recommendations: basic science core courses and anesthesia nursing program enrollment. Same as 116:290.

096:291 Clinical Anesthesia I 1 s.h.

096:292 Clinical Anesthesia II 1 s.h.

096:293 Advanced Clinical Anesthesia 1 s.h.
Clinical anesthesia experiences in neurologic surgery, cardiovascular/thoracic surgery; experience providing anesthesia for patients with complex pathophysiology in varied surgical settings. Requirements: (for 096:293) anesthesia nursing program senior standing, anesthesia nursing concentration courses, and grade of 3.00 or higher in 096:292; (for 116:293) anesthesia nursing program enrollment, anesthesia nursing concentration courses, and grade of 3.00 or higher in 116:292. Same as 116:293.

096:294 Obstetrical Anesthesia 1 s.h.
Experience providing anesthesia for the parturient, initial neonatal care; two one-month rotations off campus. Requirements: (for 096:294) anesthesia nursing program enrollment and grade of 3.00 or higher in 096:292; (for 116:294) anesthesia nursing courses, anesthesia nursing program enrollment, and grade of 3.00 or higher in 116:292. Same as 116:294.
096:295 Rural Anesthesia 1 s.h.
Anesthesia experience in community hospitals; three one-month rotations at UI-affiliated clinical sites in rural Iowa. Requirements: (for 096:295) anesthesia nursing program enrollment and grade of 3.00 or higher in 096:292; (for 116:295) anesthesia nursing courses, anesthesia nursing program enrollment, and grade of 3.00 or higher in 116:292. Same as 116:295.

096:296 Independent Study arr.
Supervised study and/or clinical practice adjusted to needs of master’s degree students. Requirements: MSN enrollment.

096:298 Master’s Project 2-3 s.h.
Opportunity for in-depth analysis and synthesis of a chosen topic that contributes to some aspect of nursing practice.

Opportunity for systematic investigation of a nursing problem of student’s choice under guidance of faculty.

For Doctoral Students

Open to doctoral students or to others with consent of instructor.

096:301 Distance Education: Master’s Project 2-3 s.h.
In-depth analysis and synthesis of a chosen topic that contributes to some aspect of nursing practice. Requirements: M.S.N. enrollment.

096:302 Emerging Science 3 s.h.
Emerging science to prepare leaders, advanced practice practitioners, and researchers to meet challenges of today’s workforce and health care environment; opportunities to apply emerging health care science that influence health care policy, education, research, and practice.

096:303 DNP: Advanced Role Development I 3 s.h.
Organizational and leadership skills that enhance practice and emphasize clinical care, ongoing improvement of health outcomes, and patient safety; case management, business practices, multidisciplinary role setting, leadership and ethics, conflict resolution, community or aggregate populations, vulnerable populations. Corequisites: 096:304. Requirements: admission to Doctor of Nursing Practice program.

096:304 DNP: Advanced Role Development Practicum I 3 s.h.
Opportunities to apply advanced leadership and clinical knowledge in health care systems; application of content from 096:303; identification of needs and/or interests to define student’s clinical practice; experience in selected clinical or agency sites to increase competencies in areas such as clinical acumen, case management, leadership, business practices. Requirements: admission to Doctor of Nursing Practice program.

096:305 Emerging Science 3 s.h.
Acquisition of emerging scientific knowledge in health care and application to individuals, families, populations; integration of epidemiologic approaches, genomic factors, and socio-cultural influences in processes of conducting risk assessment, intervention implementation, and health care delivery evaluation; importance of research and statistical methods in establishing risk profiles; studies of clinical, community, vulnerable, and marginalized populations as essential for developing and implementing individualized health care plans for populations, family units, and individuals. Corequisites: 096:211. Requirements: admission to Doctor of Nursing Practice program.

096:306 DNP: Advanced Role Development II 3 s.h.
Builds on 096:304; continued development of in-depth clinical knowledge and skills in student’s interest area; advanced levels of interprofessional collaborative skills and team building. Prerequisites: 096:303. Corequisites: 096:307.
096:307 DNP: Advanced Role Development Practicum II
3 s.h.
Builds on 096:304; advanced leadership skills and clinical knowledge applied at practicum site; enhancement of competencies in areas such as clinical acumen, case management, leadership, business practices. Prerequisites: 096:303 and 096:304. Corequisites: 096:306.

096:308 Clinical Leadership Project
1-5 s.h.
Opportunity for in-depth analysis and synthesis of a topic that contributes to an aspect of advanced nursing practice; students relate projects to evidence-based practice/translational science courses and/or 096:332 and 096:333.

096:309 Data Mining and Machine Learning
3 s.h.

096:310 Advanced Nursing Informatics
3 s.h.
Management and processing of data and information, evaluation of information systems; related informatics research methods that support knowledge development. Requirements: graduate-level informatics course.

096:312 Advanced Practice in Clinical Information Systems
3 s.h.
Nursing informatics theory applied to design, modification, implementation, and evaluation of nursing and health information systems; supervised clinical preceptorship. Prerequisites: 096:263 and 096:310.

096:313 Computational Intelligence
3 s.h.
Concepts, models, algorithms, and tools for development of intelligent systems; data mining, expert systems, neural networks for engineering, medical and systems applications. Prerequisites: 056:171. Same as 056:235.

096:315 Advanced Practice Clinical Practicum I
3 s.h.
Application of advanced physical assessment, pathophysiology, and diagnostic reasoning in a clinical setting appropriate to a specific population.

096:316 Advanced Practice Clinical Practicum II
3 s.h.
Continuation of 096:315; emphasis on diagnostic reasoning and formulation of treatment plans.

096:317 Advanced Practice Clinical Practicum III
3-4 s.h.
Synthesis of role expectations for advanced practice with focus on clinical competencies appropriate to the specialization.

096:318 Practicum in Executive Leadership and Management
4 s.h.
Immersion experience in application of principles and methods of leadership, management, and evaluation to facilitate health care operations in various settings; student collaboration with a preceptor for mentored in-depth immersion in systems practice.

096:319 Distance Education: Master’s Thesis
arr.
Systematic investigation of a nursing problem of student’s choice under guidance of faculty. Requirements: M.S.N. enrollment.

096:330 Health Policy, Law, and Advocacy
3 s.h.
Knowledge and skill in three areas that promote effective policy making—health care policy, legislative and rule-making processes at state and federal levels, role of nursing in public policy; issues that shape health care economics and policy development; the health care system—economics, financing, role of government, not-for-profit entities, nongovernmental organizations; global health issues in developing countries. Requirements: graduate standing.

096:331 Clinical Decision Making for Advanced Practice
3 s.h.
Coordination and integration of care delivery for population health and clinical effectiveness across the continuum of care; management of optimized outcomes; emphasis on informatics infrastructure and translation of evidence-based practice to managing care provision and achieving desired outcomes as a result of care provision.

Colleges and Other Academic Units
096:412 Methods and Measurement in Clinical Pain Research
2 s.h.
Basic theoretical models for understanding pain; insight into the state of science of clinical pain research; issues and challenges related to conduction of clinical pain research; designs, vulnerable populations, methodology, and measurement strategies relevant to clinical trials; comparative effectiveness and translational research studies; interdisciplinary presentations of research experiences, issues, and solutions to provide a foundation for discussion and analysis of best practices for clinical pain research. Corequisites: 101:133. Requirements: Ph.D. standing. Recommendations: graduate-level research methods/design course and pathophysiology.

096:415 Genetic Nursing Research
3 s.h.
Concepts in human genetics integrated with nursing research; methodological issues in study of populations with specific genetic problems; generation of testable hypotheses.

096:420 State of the Science in Geriatric Mental Health Research
3 s.h.
Analysis, evaluation; emphasis on program evaluation, geriatric mental health services research, methodological issues. Requirements: (for 153:420) Ph.D. enrollment. Same as 153:420.

096:423 Advanced Seminar in Health Research
3 s.h.
Health research across the lifespan and health care continuum; specific topics based on the state of the science and emerging science initiatives put forth by NIH and other funding agencies. Requirements: doctoral standing.

096:425 Research in Sociocultural Perspectives for Family and Women’s Health
3 s.h.
Health experiences of U.S. women and families from oppressed, marginalized cultural and social groups; approaches to developing and testing interventions, outcomes promoting and enhancing health of women and families; mid-range theory related to health care access and utilization.

096:430 Nursing Research in Sociocultural Phenomena and Interventions for the Elderly
3 s.h.
Sociocultural issues for aging clients, corresponding nursing interventions; theoretical orientations to dynamics of aging, transitions and role changes, social/environmental issues. Requirements: (for 153:430) Ph.D. enrollment. Same as 153:430.

096:435 Research in Cognitive and Behavioral Interventions for Children
3 s.h.
Research on cognitive and behavioral problems in children, research designs and data analysis, evaluation of instruments, areas that need further development, development of testable research questions.

096:440 Research Utilization Residency in Care of the Elderly
3 s.h.
Project based on relevant gerontological nursing research. Requirements: two courses from 096:410, 096:420, or 096:430.

096:445 Research Residency in Child and Family Nursing
3 s.h.
Research or research utilization project based on relevant child and/or family nursing research; guided by preceptor.

096:450 Research Seminar in Nursing Administration I: Organizational Systems Concepts
3 s.h.
Health care organization, nurses in the organization; data collection instruments; directions for further research, implications for model building, research methods, practice.

096:451 Research Seminar in Nursing Administration II: Health Care System Concepts
3 s.h.
Management concepts, health care factors that influence delivery of care systems; patient outcomes; measurement of quality nursing care. Prerequisites: 096:450.

The pharmacy profession is concerned with a wide variety of activities, from developing new drug products to caring for patients. An important concept in the delivery of pharmacy services is medication therapy management—the responsible provision of drug therapy to achieve defined outcomes that improve patients’ quality of life. These outcomes include preventing, arresting, or curing a disease, and/or eliminating or reducing its symptoms.

In order to carry out these activities, pharmacists specialize in the science of drugs and drug information.

The dispensing of medications and information at the corner pharmacy is just one aspect of the profession. Pharmacists work in many health care settings, engaging in research, clinical practice, teaching, and counseling. Along with their training in science and drug preparation, they learn the business and communication skills necessary for their multifaceted careers.

Demand for qualified pharmacists is high. Iowa’s pharmacy students study with professors who, in many cases, are pioneering the development of new drugs and are defining the appropriate use of others to solve chronic health problems. They also enjoy advanced research facilities, including those of Iowa’s drug research and manufacturing area, where experimental drugs are produced for testing and licensing by manufacturers before being introduced worldwide.

The University of Iowa College of Pharmacy is accredited by the Accreditation Council for Pharmacy Education.
Their interests include dosage form development and performance, industrial and manufacturing pharmacy, pharmacokinetics and pharmacodynamics, and the chemistry of drugs and their action on human systems. The department offers courses through its Medicinal and Natural Products Chemistry Division and its Pharmaceutics and Translational Therapeutics Division.

Medicinal and Natural Products Chemistry Division: Course work in this division relates to understanding the chemistry of drugs and their action on human systems, principles of drug discovery and drug design, natural product chemistry, and biotechnology and genomic strategies for producing new drug molecules. The division’s curricula for the M.S. and Ph.D. programs provide abundant opportunities for interface with researchers in other areas, including medicine, pharmacology, biochemistry, chemistry, and pharmaceutics.

Pharmaceutics and Translational Therapeutics Division: This division prepares students to become leaders in developing and evaluating drugs, drug products, and drug delivery systems. It offers two M.S. and Ph.D. subtracks: the pharmaceutics subtrack, which focuses on characterization of pharmaceuticals and their component materials, development of delivery systems for optimal human or veterinary use, and the pharmacokinetic and pharmacodynamic evaluation of drug actions and interactions; and the clinical pharmaceutical sciences subtrack, which focuses on investigating drug therapy outcomes in patients and identifying factors responsible for specific drug actions in individual patients, related patient groups, and large patient populations. The division also offers multidisciplinary opportunities with programs in chemistry, engineering, biomedical science, dentistry, and veterinary medicine. Its national and international collaborations enhance the breadth of research activities available to students.

For more about the department and its two divisions, visit the Pharmaceutical Sciences and Experimental Therapeutics Department web sites.

Professional Program (Pharm.D.)

- Doctor of Pharmacy

The College of Pharmacy collaborates with the College of Public Health to offer the joint Master of Public Health/Doctor of Pharmacy (M.P.H./Pharm.D.) program.

Doctor of Pharmacy

The Doctor of Pharmacy program prepares students for careers in pharmacy. It provides professional education in a number of areas, including pharmaceutical technology, biopharmaceutics, medicinal chemistry and natural products, pharmaceutical socioeconomics, pharmacotherapy, patient care, clinical and hospital pharmacy, and aspects of biotechnology.

The program requires four years of full-time study preceded by at least two years of pre-pharmacy study in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences at The University of Iowa or at any accredited community or liberal arts college in the United States or Canada. Graduates of the program are qualified to take the Iowa Board of Pharmacy examination that is required for licensure as a pharmacist.

The Pharm.D. requires satisfactory completion of required courses, including at least 12 s.h. of professional electives and 20 s.h. of general education courses; a cumulative g.p.a. of at least 2.00; and a pharmacy g.p.a. of at least 2.00. The pharmacy grade-point average is computed from grades earned in all required courses that students have completed while enrolled in the College of Pharmacy, excluding general education electives and professional electives.

Students must earn a grade of C-minus or higher in transfer courses applied to the Pharm.D.

Rules and regulations concerning academic probation, pass/nonpass, credit by examination, maximum schedule, second-grade-only option, waiver or substitution of courses, cancellation of registration, drop date, and correspondence study are provided in the College of Pharmacy section of the ISIS Student Handbook and in the College of Pharmacy Student Handbook.

The Tippie College of Business (p. 775), the Carver College of Medicine (p. 1261), the College of Dentistry (p. 861), and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences (p. 26) contribute to the education of pharmacy students by providing instruction in the physical sciences, basic medical sciences, business, the humanities, and social sciences.

The College of Pharmacy provides students with the highest possible quality in the professional experiential program. Faculty and adjunct faculty serve as preceptors, providing introductory and advanced practice experience at institutions and pharmacies in Iowa, nationwide, and around the world.
Professional Curriculum

In addition to the specific courses listed here, students must complete 20 s.h. of general education courses chosen from behavioral, social, humanistic, and business disciplines.

FIRST YEAR

Students must complete one semester of 046:001 Introduction to Pharmacy Practice during the first professional year. They also complete 046:004 Student Pharmacist Professionalism throughout the first, second, and third professional years.

FOURTH YEAR: ADVANCED PHARMACY PRACTICE ROTATIONS

During the fourth year, students are required to complete eight advanced pharmacy practice rotations. All students must complete the first four rotations listed below (24 s.h.); they also must complete an additional four rotations of their choice (24 s.h.).

All of these (24 s.h.):

- 046:178 Hospital Pharmacy Rotation 6 s.h.
- 046:179 Community Pharmaceutical Care Rotation 6 s.h.
- 046:180 Acute Care Medicine Rotation 6 s.h.
- 046:196 Ambulatory Care Rotation 6 s.h.

Four of these (24 s.h.):

- 046:136 Elective: Academic Rotation 6 s.h.
- 046:140 Elective: Ambulatory Care Rotation 6 s.h.
- 046:142 Elective: Compounding/Complimentary Alternative Medicine Rotation 6 s.h.

PROFESSIONAL ELECTIVES

Pharm D. students must complete 12 s.h. of professional electives, which they may choose from the following list.

Joint M.P.H./Pharm.D.

The College of Pharmacy and the College of Public Health offer the joint Master of Public Health/Doctor of Pharmacy program. The joint M.P.H./Pharm.D. requires 42 s.h. of graduate credit in addition to the requirements of the Pharm.D. degree. Students who complete the program are granted both degrees.

The M.P.H./Pharm.D. program helps students develop expertise in public health related to pharmacotherapy, health promotion, disease prevention, and medication safety. Its graduates may work in areas of interest common to pharmacy and public health, such as spread and treatment of disease, community health, and immunology; bioterrorism, terrorism, and preparedness; genetics; insurance; managed care; family and juvenile health; and protection of special populations. Employment opportunities are available in hospitals and clinics and with health care providers; private practice; insurance and managed care organizations; local, county, state, and federal government; public health governmental agencies; and colleges and universities.

Separate admission to each degree program is required. Applicants must be admitted to both programs before they may be admitted to the joint degree program.

See "Joint M.P.H./Pharm.D." in the Master of Public Health Program (p. 1486) section of the Catalog to learn about curriculum and admission requirements for the joint program.

Admission

Application deadline for the Pharm.D. program is December 1.

Students admitted to the College of Pharmacy are required to submit a $250 admission acceptance fee. The fee is applied to tuition for the student’s first semester of enrollment in the college. The deposit is not refunded to applicants who do not enroll in the College of Pharmacy.

The college-level course work outlined below is the minimum academic requirement for admission to the College of Pharmacy. The Pharmacy College Admission Test (PCAT), a personal statement, personal interviews, and two letters of reference are required for admission. Students must have an overall cumulative g.p.a. of at least 2.50 to be considered for admission.

Fulfillment of these requirements does not ensure admission to the college; the admission committee selects the best-qualified applicants. Questions concerning satisfaction of degree requirements should be directed to the College of Pharmacy Office of Academic Affairs.

Rhetoric: 4 s.h. (010:003 Rhetoric) or 6 s.h. of transfer credit in English composition and rhetoric and 3 s.h. in speech

Human anatomy: 3 s.h. (060:110 Principles of Human Anatomy)

General biology: 8 s.h. (002:010 Principles of Biology I and 002:011 Principles of Biology II)

General chemistry: 8 s.h. (004:011 Principles of Chemistry I and 004:012 Principles of Chemistry II)

Organic chemistry: 6 s.h. (004:121 Organic Chemistry I and 004:122 Organic Chemistry II)

Mathematics: 3-4 s.h. of a satisfactory differential and integral calculus course (22M:016 Calculus for the Biological Sciences)

Microbiology: 4 s.h. (061:112 Pharmacy Microbiology)

Microeconomics: 3-4 s.h. (06E:001 Principles of Microeconomics)

Physics: one year of high school physics or one semester of college-level physics with a lab (029:008 Basic Physics)

Human physiology: 3 s.h. (027:130 Human Physiology)

Statistics: 3 s.h.

General education electives: at least 12 s.h.

Each student must complete 20 s.h. of general education courses in order to graduate. Courses in moral reasoning or ethics, communications, computer science, and business are recommended. Courses in the behavioral and social sciences and the humanities are acceptable. Courses in physical education skills, applied music, and studio art are not acceptable.

Students must earn a grade of C-minus or higher in transfer courses applied to the Pharm.D.

Financial Support

All second-, third-, and fourth-year pharmacy students are encouraged to apply for College of Pharmacy scholarships. Applications are available each April from the College of Pharmacy Office of Academic Affairs. Students complete a single application form in order to be considered for all scholarships. Award amounts vary. The Awards and Recognition Committee selects the best-qualified applicant for each scholarship.

Seymour M. Blaug Memorial Award: for a pharmacy student with above-average academic achievement.

Ilse O. Buckner Scholarship: for a pharmacy student who maintains satisfactory academic progress; nonrenewable, financial need is considered.

Burroughs-Wellcome Scholarship Fund: for a student of the committee’s choice.

Class of 2008 Scholarship: criteria to be determined.
Class of 2009 Scholarship: criteria to be determined.

Class of 2010 Scholarship: criteria to be determined.

David and James Carlson Scholarship: for two pharmacy students interested in clinical or hospital practice; preference given to students from north of U.S. Interstate 80 and west of U.S. Interstate 35 who show financial need.

Jordan and Jana Cohen Doctor of Pharmacy Scholarship: for a pharmacy student in good academic standing; based on merit and need; renewable.

Vernon Conzemius Scholarship: for a pharmacy student who demonstrates financial need; preference given to students in the upper half of their class.

Ben M. Cooper Memorial Award: for an academically outstanding pharmacy student; preference is given to students from Scott County, Iowa; financial need is considered.

CVS Scholarships: for five pharmacy students in good academic standing who are interested in community pharmacy.

John and Margo Daniel Scholarship: preference given to a student from Webster County, Iowa.

Don and Sue Dunshee Scholarship Bequest to Teeters Memorial Scholarship

Alice Coxon Gates Scholarship: for a pharmacy student in good academic standing.

Max Eggleston Scholarship: for a student who has completed one year; preference is given to students from Iowa; based on financial need.

Lori A. Grimes Memorial Scholarship: based on financial need; renewable.

Gary Hadley Scholarship: for a student of the committee’s choice.

Dick and Brenda Hartig Scholarship: for a student who demonstrates financial need; preference is given to students from Dubuque, Waukon, Dyersville, and Iowa City, Iowa; and Galena and Stockton, Illinois; based on financial need.

Thomas D. Hill Scholarship: for a pharmacy student in good academic standing.

Janet Hinderliter Scholarship: for a P3 or P4 student with a g.p.a. of at least 3.00 and demonstrated involvement in campus and community affairs.

Frances T. and Charles Holub Memorial Award: for a third-year pharmacy student; financial need is considered; renewable once.

Iowa Pharmacy Foundation Scholarships: for selected pharmacy students who are residents of Iowa and who demonstrate outstanding academic ability; financial need is considered.

Kuever Scholarship Fund: for a pharmacy student from Iowa who is in good academic standing.

Ernest Kyle Memorial Scholarship: for a student of the committee’s choice.

Ronald Madden Scholarship: for an Iowa high school graduate in good academic standing.

Charles J. Malecek Pharmacy Scholarship: for a student of the committee’s choice.

Lloyd E. Matheson and Randal P. McDonough Honorary Scholarship: for a student who demonstrates financial need.

Virgil R. McCutchan Memorial Scholarship: for a deserving pharmacy student.

McQuery Brothers Scholarship: for a deserving pharmacy student.

Carleton Mikkelsen Scholarship: for the top P4 student based on final P3 grade-point average; in case of a tie, the committee chooses the recipient.

Miller-Ruegnitz Scholarships: based on financial need, non-renewable.

NACDS Scholarship: for a student interested in community pharmacy.

Petersen Linder Scholarship: for a pharmacy student in excellent academic standing who has outstanding leadership skills; based on financial need.

Pharmacists Mutual Scholarship: committee choice.

Quad Cities Area Pharmacists Association Scholarships: for students who demonstrate financial need; preferably one student from Iowa and one from Illinois.

Sattler Family Scholarship: for a student of the committee’s choice, alternates with the Carver College of Medicine.

Scherling Prize: for a student who demonstrates superior academic achievement in organic chemistry.

Hal Schimmelpfenning Scholarship: for a high school senior from Sigourney, Iowa.
Gordon H. Sheffield Scholarship: for a P3 or P4 student from Iowa; preference given to a student who demonstrates leadership and financial need.

Joel and Janet Shields Gift

ShopKo Scholarship: preference given to students who reside or have resided in a state where Shop-Ko is located.

Shutt Pharmacy Scholarship: preference is given to Iowa residents; based on financial need.

H. Curtis Snyder Award: for a pharmacy student in good standing.

Supervalue Scholarship: for a student in good academic standing who is employed in a community pharmacy setting.

Wilber J. Teeters Scholarship: for a pharmacy student who has completed at least one year in the college; financial need is considered.

Teeters/Wahl Scholarship: for pharmacy students based on outstanding academic ability, U.S. citizenship, and financial need.

John Stanley Thor Memorial Award: for a pharmacy student in good standing.

Colonel Thomas C. Veach Class of 1952 Scholarship Fund: preference given to a student interested in compounding or industrial pharmacy.

Wal-Mart Scholarship: for a P3 or P4 student with high scholastic standing who demonstrates strong leadership, desire to enter a community pharmacy practice, and financial need.

Louis C. Zopf Memorial Award: for a pharmacy student who is academically qualified; financial need is considered.

John D. Zuelke Scholarship: for a pharmacy student (preferably P3 or P4) from Wapello County, Iowa.

government agencies, and in health-related institutions and organizations.

Applicants must meet the admission requirements of the Graduate College; see the Manual of Rules and Regulations of the Graduate College or the Graduate (p. 1117) College section of the Catalog. Academic requirements for maintaining graduate registration are determined by the Graduate College and by the individual divisions of the College of Pharmacy.

Facilities and Resources

Pharmacy Building

The Pharmacy Building is located on the University’s Health Science Campus, in close proximity to the Carver College of Medicine, College of Dentistry, College of Nursing, and College of Public Health. Also nearby are University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics, the Bowen Science Building, and the Hardin Library for the Health Sciences.

The Pharmacy Building is a five-story structure designed to provide modern facilities for a comprehensive program of pharmacy education. In addition to classrooms and auditoriums, there are well-equipped separate laboratories for instruction at the professional and graduate levels.

The college operates small and large classrooms with state-of-the-art technology. The student practice lab is a technologically advanced licensed pharmacy that provides real and simulated practice experiences. The Banker Student Activity Center provides quiet individual and small-group study environments and houses College of Pharmacy Student Organizations offices.

The building also houses a fully supported Instructional Technology Center (Pharmacy ITC) in the Learning Resource Center. The ITC provides state-of-the-art desktop workstations and laptop computers are available for student checkout. Both desktop and laptop computers have secure connections to the University network for online drug information searching and printing.

University of Iowa Pharmaceuticals

University of Iowa Pharmaceuticals, a pharmaceutical manufacturing facility registered with the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, develops pharmaceutical dosage forms and has manufactured clinical supplies in compliance with Good Manufacturing Practices since 1974. University of Iowa Pharmaceuticals has clients worldwide, including pharmaceutical companies, biotechnology firms, medical departments, and government agencies. Its staff works closely with clients and pharmaceutics faculty members to produce virtually every type of pharmaceutical dosage form, supplying new pharmaceutical agents for use in clinical trials and other research. The facility combines the former Center for Advanced Drug Development and Division of Pharmaceutical Service. For more information, visit the University of Iowa Pharmaceuticals web site.

Division of Drug Information Service

The Division of Drug Information Service publishes the IDIS (Iowa Drug Information Service), a bibliographical database that provides full-text access to specialized information related to drugs and drug therapy. IDIS reaches subscribers throughout the world. The division also is home to the Iowa Drug Information Network, which serves a network of community pharmacies and family practice sites with drug information resources, educational programs, and direct-response consultations that support the pharmaceutical care initiatives at the network’s sites. In addition, the Division of Drug Information Service plays an important educational role for pharmacy students by providing both didactic and experiential teaching in drug information. The division is located on the University of Iowa Research Park campus.

Courses

Students must be enrolled in the College of Pharmacy to take the college’s courses. Undergraduate and graduate students in other majors must have the instructor's consent to take College of Pharmacy courses.

For Undergraduates

046:020 Introduction to Pharmaceutics Projects 3 s.h.
Introduction to pharmaceutics.

046:029 First-Year Seminar 1 s.h.

For Pharm.D. Students

Pharmacy Practice and Science

046:001 Introduction to Pharmacy Practice 1 s.h.
Exposure to the pharmacy profession through varied shadowing experiences in practice settings. Requirements: P1 standing.

046:002 Introduction to Community Pharmacy Practice 3 s.h.
Exposure to community pharmacy through activities focusing on drug distribution, legal requirements, communication, patient interaction; during breaks in P2 year. Requirements: P2 standing.

046:003 Introduction to Clinical Pharmacy Practice 1 s.h.
Clinical practice experience observing and participating in clinical activities with P4 students, faculty, and other health care providers. Requirements: P3 standing.

046:004 Student Pharmacist Professionalism 1 s.h.
Participation in activities promoting leadership and professional learning, and service learning; writing résumés, curricula vitae, cover letters; interviewing techniques; electronic portfolios; web-based career information; guest speakers from pharmacy associations, major chains; workshop approach. Requirements: P3 standing.
046:008 Introduction to Hospital Pharmacy Practice
2 s.h.
Exposure to hospital pharmacy through activities focusing on drug distribution, legal requirements, communication, patient interaction; during breaks in P2 year. Requirements: P2 standing.

046:011 Web 2.0 and Pharmacy Drug Information
2 s.h.
Introduction to challenges and opportunities of social Internet applications, electronic drug information sources, and mobile technologies available to healthcare providers and patients; creation, use, and critical evaluation of web-based products; lectures, class discussions, required readings, reflection blogs, and group projects. Corequisites: 046:116 or 046:118. Requirements: P2 or P3 standing.

046:013 Ambulatory Care Pharmacy
2 s.h.
Additional experience in the practice of clinical pharmacy; focus on key therapeutic areas where ambulatory care clinical pharmacists currently have a significant impact improving patient care, including anticoagulation management, hyperlipidemia management, and diabetes management; opportunity to develop expertise in clinical decision making, improve problem solving abilities, and continued development in writing and oral presentation skills. Prerequisites: 046:154 and 046:156. Requirements: P3 standing.

046:014 Special Topics in Acute Care
2 s.h.
Pharmacology for common but varied acute care medicine topics; review of disorder, therapeutic goals, treatment plans, patient counseling, monitoring patient outcomes; lecture or case-based classes; acute and chronic renal failure; peritoneal and hemodialysis; diabetic ketoacidosis; rabies; shock, vaspressors, fluids; ACLS; deep venous thrombosis, stress ulcer prophylaxis; burns; sedation, neuromuscular blockage; opioids; multiple sclerosis. Prerequisites: 046:149, 046:154, 046:155, 046:156, 046:158, and 046:159. Corequisites: 046:164 and 046:165. Requirements: BLS certification.

046:050 Pharmacy Practice Lab I
2 s.h.
Practical application of scientific and clinical knowledge used in the provision of pharmaceutical care; activities include communication with patients and members of the healthcare team, sterile product and prescription compounding, pharmacy calculations, and use of drug information resources. Requirements: P1 standing.

046:051 Pharmacy Practice Lab II
2 s.h.
Practical application of scientific and clinical knowledge used in the provision of pharmaceutical care; activities include prescription compounding, pharmacy calculations, communication skills, prescription counseling, and applications of drug information skills through secondary searching of the primary literature. Prerequisites: 046:050. Requirements: P1 standing.

046:101 Pharmacy Projects
1-3 s.h.
Basic and applied research problems of pharmaceutical interest.

046:102 Pharmacy Workshop
1 s.h.
Independent study.

046:103 Fundamentals of Evaluating Clinical Research
1 s.h.
Basic concepts for evaluation of clinical trials published in primary biomedical and pharmacy literature; design, methods, outcomes, statistical analysis, and generalizability of results. Requirements: P1 standing.

046:104 Pharmacy Law and Ethics
2 s.h.
Legal and moral aspects involved in the practice of pharmacy. Requirements: P3 standing.

046:105 Alternative and Complementary Medicine
arr.
Requirements: (for 046:105) P4 standing. Same as 078:210, 096:182.
046:106 Clinical Practice Skills I: Theory and Application 2 s.h.
Exploration and development of professional skills required for delivery of patient care; patient assessment, clinical decision making, communication (written and oral), teamwork. Corequisites: 046:155.

046:107 Clinical Practice Skills II: Critical Patient Analysis 2 s.h.
Continuation of 046:106; development of professional skills required for delivery of patient care; patient assessment, clinical decision making, communication (written and oral) skills. Corequisites: 046:158. Requirements: P3 standing.

046:108 Clinical Practice Skills III: Applied Patient Management 2 s.h.
Continuation of 046:107; development of professional skills required for delivery of patient care; patient assessment, clinical decision making, communication (written and oral), teamwork. Corequisites: 046:164. Requirements: P3 standing.

046:115 Drug Literature Evaluation 2 s.h.
Study design methods, drug information techniques and skills; skill development in critical analysis and evaluation of published reports of drug use and drug trials, assessment of validity of reports, trials and studies, assessment of generalizability of results to individual patients and patient groups; laboratory experience in biomedical literature analysis, evaluation.

046:116 Pharmacy Practice Lab III 2 s.h.
Practical application of scientific and clinical knowledge in the provision of patient-centered care; activities include prescription interpretation and counseling, compounding, applications of drug information, use of patient screening tools, physical assessment, and pharmacy law. Corequisites: 046:149 and 046:154, if not taken as prerequisites.

046:117 Pharmacy Practice Lab IV 2 s.h.
Practical application of scientific and clinical knowledge in the provision of patient-centered care; activities include providing medication therapy management for patients, prescription and self-care counseling, and application of drug information skills. Corequisites: 046:155 and 046:156, if not taken as prerequisites. Requirements: P2 standing.

046:118 Pharmacy Practice Lab V 2 s.h.
Practical application of scientific and clinical knowledge in the provision of patient-centered care; activities include medication therapy management for patients, prescription and self-care counseling, and application of drug information skills. Corequisites: 046:158 and 046:159, if not taken as prerequisites.

046:119 Pharmacy Practice Lab VI 2 s.h.
Practical application of scientific and clinical knowledge in the provision of patient-centered care; activities include medication therapy management for patients, prescription and self-care counseling, and application of drug information skills. Corequisites: 046:164 and 046:165, if not taken as prerequisites. Requirements: P3 standing.

046:121 Substance Abuse 2-3 s.h.
Themes and concepts in substance abuse and treatment; stimulants, depressants, alcohol, opiates, hallucinogenics, steroids; drug abuse prevention and treatment, including dual diagnosis, from cradle to the grave.

046:122 Social Aspects of Pharmacy Care 2 s.h.
Conceptual issues related to social and behavioral components of pharmacy care; social construction of health and illness, medication use process, health communications, cultural competence, health disparities and public health. Requirements: P1 standing.

046:126 International Perspectives: Xicotepec 2 s.h.
Introduction to providing service to a community in a less developed country; student projects intended to improve community life in Xicotepec. Corequisites: 165:126. Requirements: P3 standing. Same as 053:126, 152:126.
046:127 Pharmaceuticals Management for Underserved Populations
3 s.h.
Experience analyzing problems and developing strategies based on real-world drug management cycle issues; the role of WHO-TRIPS, government, and NGOs in the selection and use of pharmaceuticals.

046:129 Pharmaceutical Economics and Insurance
3 s.h.
Financing of health care in the U.S.; insurance and reimbursement in pharmacy and pharmacoeconomics. Requirements: P3 standing.

046:136 Elective: Academic Rotation
6 s.h.
Practice experience delivering pharmacy education with a College of Pharmacy faculty member. Requirements: P4 standing.

046:139 Pharmacy Management and Marketing
2 s.h.
Application of management principles to pharmacy practice; marketing techniques for pharmacy practice; operations, human resources, finance, quality improvement and service marketing management.

046:140 Elective: Ambulatory Care Rotation
6 s.h.
Clinical experience providing pharmaceutical care in specialty outpatient settings. Requirements: P4 standing.

046:141 Elective: Community Management Rotation
6 s.h.
Practice exposure to community pharmacy operations and management at the store, district, or corporate level. Requirements: P4 standing.

046:142 Elective: Compounding/Complimentary Alternative Medicine Rotation
6 s.h.
Clinical work in a community setting with focus on team approach; experience developing extemporaneous compounds to optimize patient care and/or integrating traditional and nontraditional medicine. Requirements: P4 standing.

046:143 Elective: Critical Care Medicine Rotation
6 s.h.
Practice experience providing pharmaceutical services to intensive care unit patients. Requirements: P4 standing.

046:146 End-of-Life Care for Adults and Families
2-4 s.h.

046:149 Introduction to Therapeutics/Special Populations
2 s.h.
Treatment modalities that promote health and treat common diseases; common laboratory and diagnostic procedures used to diagnose and monitor diseases; basic types of adverse drug reactions. Requirements: P2 standing.

046:151 Current Topics in Health Policy
2 s.h.
Legislative process and broad range of current issues in health policy; general- and pharmacy-specific health policy topics at state and federal levels. Requirements: P1, P2, P3, or graduate standing.

046:154 Endocrinology, Ophthalmology, Women’s and Men’s Health Therapeutics
2 s.h.
Pharmacotherapy for endocrine and ophthalmologic disorders; review of disorders, treatment goals, treatment plans, patient counseling, monitoring of patient outcomes. Requirements: P2 standing.

046:155 Respiratory and Dermatologic Therapeutics
2 s.h.
Pharmacotherapy for respiratory and dermatology disorders; review of disorders, treatment goals, treatment plans, patient counseling, monitoring of patient outcomes. Requirements: P2 standing.
046:156 Cardiovascular Therapeutics

046:158 FEN, GI, and Renal Therapeutics
Pharmacotherapy for fluid/electrolyte/nutrition disorders; gastrointestinal and renal diseases; review of disorders, treatment goals, treatment plans, patient counseling, monitoring of patient outcomes. Requirements: P3 standing.

046:159 Rheumatology, Immunology, Hematology, Oncology, and Transplantation Therapeutics
Pharmacotherapy for rheumatology, immunology, hematology, oncology, and transplantation; review of disorders, treatment goals, treatment plans, patient counseling, monitoring of patient outcomes. Requirements: P3 standing.

046:161 Elective: Drug Information Rotation
Practice experience applying drug information knowledge to service and research projects. Requirements: P4 standing.

046:164 Neurology/Psychiatry Therapeutics
Pharmacotherapy for psychiatric and neurologic disorders; review of disorders, therapeutic goals, treatment plans, patient counseling, monitoring of patient outcomes. Requirements: P3 standing.

046:165 Infectious Disease Therapeutics
Pharmacotherapy for infectious diseases; review of disease, therapeutic goals, treatment plans, patient counseling, monitoring of patient outcomes. Requirements: P3 standing.

046:171 Nonprescription Pharmacotherapy
Introduction to nonprescription medications; development of patient assessment and consultation skills; understanding of pharmacist’s role in patient self-care. Requirements: P3 standing.

046:176 Immunization Theory and Practice
Preparation for administering routine immunizations safely and responsibly under specific order of a prescriber; preparation for administering vaccinations under protocol according to rules of the Iowa Boards of Pharmacy and Medical Examiners. Prerequisites: 046:159. Requirements: P3 standing.

046:178 Hospital Pharmacy Rotation
Instruction and practical experience in various components of hospital pharmacy; emphasis on hospital organization, inpatient and outpatient services, IV admixtures, unit dose, and clinical services. Requirements: P4 standing.

046:179 Community Pharmaceutical Care Rotation
Clinical experience in the community setting; emphasis on delivery of pharmaceutical care. Requirements: P4 standing.

046:180 Acute Care Medicine Rotation
Clinical experience applying therapeutic skills for the pharmacotherapeutic management of patients on general medicine or specialty inpatient areas. Requirements: P4 standing.

046:181 Elective: Family Medicine Rotation
Clinical practice experience applying primary care therapeutics in family medicine practice settings. Requirements: P4 standing.

046:182 Elective: Pediatrics Rotation
Clinical experience in drug therapy management of general and specialty pediatric patients. Requirements: P4 standing.
046:184 Elective: Psychiatry Rotation
Clinical experience in the rational use of drugs in psychiatric disorders. Requirements: P4 standing.

046:185 Elective: Neurology Rotation
Clinical experience in the pharmacotherapeutic and pathophysiologic considerations of neurological disorders. Requirements: P4 standing.

046:186 Elective: Surgery Rotation
Clinical experience in drug therapy management on a surgery unit. Requirements: P4 standing.

046:187 Elective: Nuclear Pharmacy Rotation
Practical experience in the handling and clinical use of radiopharmaceuticals. Requirements: P4 standing.

046:188 Elective: Pharmacy Practice Underserved Population Rotation
Opportunity to learn the best practices for pharmaceutical management; approaches to enhance access to and appropriate use of medicines in underserved and resource-limited environments. Requirements: P4 standing.

046:189 Elective: Pharmacy Rotation
Selected practice experiences in various pharmacy practice settings. Requirements: P4 standing.

046:190 Overview of Pediatric Pharmacotherapy
Discussion of issues and problems in pediatric pharmacotherapy; clinical practicum. Prerequisites: 046:149 and 046:170. Requirements: P3 standing.

046:191 Health Coaching and Wellness
Develop expertise in health coaching and wellness to care for patients with chronic diseases; in-depth look at lifestyle changes recommended for patients with chronic diseases; discuss and investigate nutrition and exercise guidelines for patients with chronic diseases; motivational interviewing technique and incorporation of chronic care model for patients. Requirements: P2 or P3 standing.

046:192 Elective: Long Term Care Rotation
Practice in consulting and providing services to varied long-term patient care environments. Requirements: P4 standing.

046:193 Elective: Home Health Care Rotation
Clinical experience in the team approach to health care delivery, including total parenteral nutrition, chemotherapy, intravenous antibiotics, lab analysis, hospice care, and pain management. Requirements: P4 standing.

046:194 Elective: Managed Care Rotation
Practice experience in providing pharmaceutical care or pharmacy-related services in a managed care organization. Requirements: P4 standing.

046:195 Contemporary Issues and Leadership
Introduction to leadership applications inside and outside of pharmacy; speaker series presents live interviews of prominent leaders; course work focuses on application of leadership principles and theories to contemporary pharmacy issues. Requirements: P1, P2, or P3 standing.

046:196 Ambulatory Care Rotation
Clinical experience in providing pharmaceutical care in outpatient clinic settings. Requirements: P4 standing.
046:197 Elective: Hematology/Oncology Rotation 6 s.h.
Drug therapy management of oncology patients and patients with hematologic malignancies, aplastic anemia, sickle cell disease, hemophilia. Requirements: P4 standing.

046:198 Elective: Hospital Pharmacy Practice Management 2 s.h.
Practice management issues; organizational structure, service delivery models, drug policy, drug and pharmacy costs, use of technology and informatics, supervision, quality improvement.

046:199 Elective: Research Rotation 6 s.h.
Practice experience in basic pharmaceutical or clinical research; proposal, study design, data collection and analysis, presentation of results. Requirements: P4 standing.

046:300 Elective: Emergency Medicine Rotation 6 s.h.
Clinical experience providing pharmaceutical care for patients treated in the emergency department. Requirements: P4 standing.

046:301 Elective: Hospital Management Rotation 6 s.h.
Practice experience in hospital pharmacy operations and management. Requirements: P4 standing.

046:302 Elective: Infectious Disease Rotation 6 s.h.
Clinical experience providing pharmacotherapeutic management of patients receiving antimicrobial medications. Requirements: P4 standing.

046:303 Elective: Medication Use Evaluation Rotation 6 s.h.
Practical experience in drug use evaluation to improve patient outcomes. Requirements: P4 standing.

046:304 Elective: Pharmacy Industry Rotation 6 s.h.
Practice experience in an area of the pharmaceutical industry. Requirements: P4 standing.

046:305 Elective: Pharmacy Regulatory Rotation 6 s.h.
Practice experience with a pharmacy regulatory body. Requirements: P4 standing.

046:306 Elective: Professional Association Rotation 6 s.h.
Practice experience in professional association management environment at the state or national level. Requirements: P4 standing.

046:307 Elective: Veterinary Pharmacy Rotation 6 s.h.
Practice experience in managing drug therapy for animals. Requirements: P4 standing.

046:308 Elective: Advanced Community Pharmacy Rotation 6 s.h.
Community pharmacy experience emphasizing patient-centered care. Requirements: P4 standing.

046:357 Topics in Community Pharmacy Management 2 s.h.
Focus on building practical knowledge and understanding of business principles.

046:377 Health Disparities and Cultural Competence 2-4 s.h.
Characteristics, causes, and effects of health disparities in the U.S. health care system; foundation for development of knowledge, attitudes, and skills required of culturally competent health care providers; definitions and models of cultural competence, characteristics of culturally effective practitioners and workplaces; health disparities among specific populations, evidence for cultural competence as a remedy; taking a culturally appropriate history; working with interpreters; legal and professional imperatives for cultural competence. Same as 096:125, 172:135.
046:398 Hospital Pharmacy Practice Management Elective
Organizational structure of pharmacy departments in hospitals and health care systems; models for delivery of pharmaceutical care; pharmacy’s role in drug-policy decision making; provision of drug information; clinical and distributive pharmacy services; control of pharmacy and pharmacy costs; use of information technology and automation for service delivery; supervisory management; quality improvement. Requirements: P3 standing.

Pharmaceutical Sciences and Experimental Therapeutics

046:012 Survey of Basic Pharmaceutical Sciences
Aspects of drug discovery and development; seminar with guest speakers from industry. Requirements: admission to Pharm.D. program.

046:110 Drug Delivery I
Advanced design and development of drug delivery systems with emphasis on selection of materials and designs suitable for specific applications; comparison and evaluation of available and emerging technologies. Requirements: introductory-level courses in biochemistry and anatomy/physiology.

046:111 Drug Delivery II
Continuation of 046:110. Prerequisites: 046:110.

046:123 Pharmaceutics I: Solutions
Application of physical and chemical principles to formulation, preparation of liquid dosage forms, including solution, colloids, ointments, emulsions. Requirements: P1 standing.

046:124 Pharmaceutics II: Solids and Semi-solids
Properties of solids; formulation, preparation, evaluation of solid dosage forms. Requirements: P1 standing.

046:128 Medicinal and Natural Products Chemistry I: Biotechnology and Chemotherapy
Organic and inorganic medicinal and therapeutic agents of natural and synthetic origin; physical, chemical, biological, and biochemical properties as they relate to medicinal and therapeutic effects; comparative biological activity and toxicity; detoxication mechanisms; functional group chemistry; nomenclature; chemistry of radiodiagnostic and therapeutic agents; introduction to biopharmaceutical analysis. First in a three-course sequence. Prerequisites: 004:122, 061:112, and 099:162. Requirements: P1 standing.

046:131 Medicinal and Natural Products Chemistry II: Pharmacodynamic Agents Medicinal chemistry of pharmacodynamic agents; introduction to peptides and proteins, thyroid hormone, diabetes, vaccines, gene therapeutics, NSAIDs, cardiovascular drugs, antihistamines, anticancer drugs. Second in a three-course sequence. Prerequisites: 046:128. Requirements: P2 standing.

046:132 Medicinal and Natural Products Chemistry III: Medicinal Neurochemistry
Receptor site theory; steroids, lipids, and prostaglandins; sedatives and hypnotics; drugs of abuse; cholinergics; excitatory amino acids and anticonvulsants; major analgesics; adrenergics; psychotherapeutics. Third in a three-course sequence. Prerequisites: 046:128 and 046:131. Requirements: P2 standing.

046:138 Pharmacokinetics and Biopharmaceutics
Qualitative and quantitative description of kinetics of drug absorption, distribution, and elimination, including physiological factors that influence each process; adjustment of dosing regimens for optimizing therapeutic drug levels in the body. Prerequisites: 046:123 and 046:124.

046:169 Introduction to Pharmacogenomics
Introduction to pharmacogenetics in pharmacy; laboratory techniques, application of pharmacogenetics to clinical pharmacy.
046:170 Clinical Pharmacokinetics 3 s.h.
Application of pharmacokinetics to the clinical setting. Requirements: P2 standing.

046:173 Parenteral Products and Technology 2 s.h.
Knowledge and application of parenteral products and the technology used to compound and administer them. Requirements: 046:051 and 046:123.

For Graduate Students

Pharmacy Practice and Science

046:147 Introduction to Research Methods 3 s.h.
Scientific inquiry, experimental design, data collection, statistical methods used in the study of health services and clinical investigations; focus on understanding the research process and evaluating published studies. Recommendations: introductory statistics.

046:213 Pharmaceutical Socioeconomics Seminar 1-2 s.h.
Recent research in pharmacy administration.

046:251 Pharmaceutical Socioeconomics Research arr.

046:255 Social Aspects of Pharmacy Care 2 s.h.
Conceptual issues related to social and behavioral components of pharmacy care; social construction of health and illness, medication use process, health communications, cultural competence, public health.

046:257 Foundation Literature in Pharmaceutical Socioeconomics arr.
Issues related to pharmacy administration, social and behavioral pharmacy, pharmacy education.

046:261 Analytic Issues in Health Services Research I 3 s.h.
Analytic tools used in health services research; focus on applications in nonexperimental research settings, such as analyses using administrative claims data or preexisting public use data sets. Prerequisites: 171:162. Same as 174:261.

046:262 Analytic Issues in Health Services Research II 3 s.h.
Continuation of 174:261; advanced applications, including panel data and qualitative response models. Prerequisites: 174:261. Same as 174:262.

046:263 Models of Patient Behavior and Choice 3 s.h.
Theoretical models used to describe behavior and choice in pharmaceutical socioeconomic research; models from economics, health services research, health behavior, clinical decision making.

046:264 Models of Provider Behavior and Choice 3 s.h.
Theoretical background for study of provider decision making and behavior; models based on a classic economic approach, models used to study provider behavior.

Pharmaceutical Sciences and Experimental Therapeutics

046:135 Perspectives in MNPC Research 1 s.h.
Contemporary research in medicinal chemistry and natural products.

046:137 Enzymatic Basis of Drug Metabolism 3 s.h.
Current literature on catalytic and physical properties, distribution, and substrate specificity of enzymes involved in mammalian drug metabolism. Prerequisites: 004:122 and 099:162.
046:148 Pharmacokinetics and Pharmacodynamics
Kinetics of drug absorption, distribution, and elimination, including development of mathematical models. Requirements: two semesters of calculus and one semester of statistics.

046:150 Synthetic Strategies in Medicinal Chemistry
Modern chemical methods for construction of carbon-carbon bonds commonly used in synthesis of natural products; strategic disconnections for the syntheses of these molecules. Prerequisites: 004:122 and 046:132.

046:157 Quantitative Research Methods in Pharmacy
Collection and interpretation of analytical data; instrumental analysis as applied to pharmaceutical quality control; separation techniques.

046:200 Special Topics in Nanotechnology
Special topics in nanotechnology.

046:202 Selected Topics in Pharmaceutics and Clinical Pharmaceutical Sciences
Recent advances and contemporary research in pharmaceutics. Repeatable.

046:206 Stability of Pharmaceuticals
Mechanisms of degradation of pharmaceuticals; prediction of shelf life of pharmaceuticals, stabilization. Prerequisites: 004:132.

046:207 Polymers in Pharmaceutics
Polymer science, its implications in pharmaceutics; polymers useful as excipients in design of controlled and/or sustained release products.

046:209 Drug Discovery and Mechanisms
Process of modern drug discovery, focus on high throughput screening strategies, target validation, pharmacological characterization of new compounds; mechanism of drugs targeting G protein coupled receptors, ion channels and transporters, targets in biological systems.

046:211 Total Synthesis of Natural Products
Total synthesis of natural products; use of strategies, tactics, efficiency, selectivity, synthetic maneuvering.

046:214 Pharmaceutical and Chemical Toxicology
Principles and mechanisms of chemical toxicology related to drugs and environmental agents; modern toxicological research methods.

046:215 Current Medicinal Chemistry
Modern techniques used in drug discovery; important drug classes, their chemical mechanism of action. Prerequisites: 046:132.

046:217 Medicinal and Natural Products Chemistry Research
arr.

046:219 Analytical Biochemistry
Application of modern chromatographic and detection methods used to isolate, characterize, and quantify drugs and macromolecules.

046:223 Quantitative Research Methods II: Materials Characterization
Introduction to physical methods of pharmaceutical materials characterization; thermal, electrochemical, and spectrophotometric methods; lecture, discussion, and laboratory activities.

046:225 Product Development
Application of physico-chemical principles to formulation and design of pharmaceutical dosage forms.

The College of Public Health, established in 1999, is a partner with the Carver College of Medicine and the Colleges of Dentistry, Nursing, and Pharmacy in striving to improve human health and well-being. Consistent with the interdisciplinary traditions of public health, the college also collaborates with non-health science colleges across the University and with other Board of Regents, State of Iowa institutions, state and local agencies, and the private sector.

A population-based approach to health is a distinguishing feature of public health and of the college. For public health practitioners—a wide range of professionals including physicians, nurses, dentists, pharmacists, social workers, nutritionists, environmental scientists, health educators, and health service administrators—the primary focus is on the health of entire communities rather than individual patients. Tools that public health professionals use to improve and enhance quality of life include analytical methods to identify, describe, and monitor the health of communities and populations at risk; education and prevention programs, methods of assuring access to appropriate and cost-effective care; and formulation of sound public policies.

The public health approach has led to many important health improvements over the past century. Vaccination campaigns, improved sanitation, fluoridation of drinking water, and efforts to reduce tobacco use are among the most recognizable public health initiatives. Public health programs also have led to safer workplaces, reduction of deaths from coronary heart disease and stroke, improved motor vehicle safety, and creation of effective health systems to provide care to those who need it. Today, public health professionals play an important role worldwide in seeking better approaches to complex issues such as quality of life for the elderly, drug and alcohol abuse, teen pregnancy, new and reemerging infectious diseases, bioterrorism, health literacy, nutrition, and food safety.

The College of Public Health provides educational opportunities to students campuswide. In addition to training and educating public health students, the college welcomes students from the Tippie College of Business, the Carver College of Medicine, the Graduate College, and the Colleges of Dentistry, Education, Engineering, Law, Nursing, and Pharmacy who enroll in public health courses. Undergraduate students in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences and graduate students from programs such as anthropology, microbiology, and statistics also register for public health courses. The college’s faculty members, staff members, and graduate and postdoctoral students contribute to teaching and research activities throughout the health sciences campus and provide services to Iowa and the nation. Partnerships for teaching and research extend across the campus. This background provides a rich array of educational opportunities.

The college includes the Departments of Biostatistics (p. 1450), Community and Behavioral Health (p. 1458), Epidemiology (p. 1466), Health Management and Policy (p. 1478), and Occupational and Environmental Health (p. 1495). It offers programs leading to four graduate degrees: Master of Health Administration (M.H.A.), Master of Public Health (M.P.H.), Master of Science (M.S.), and Doctor of Philosophy (Ph.D.). It also offers the Certificate in Agricultural Safety and Health (p. 1449), the Certificate in Clinical Investigation (p. 1466), the Certificate in Public Health (p. 1457), and the Certificate in Emerging Infectious Disease Epidemiology (p. 1465).

The college is accredited by the Council on Education for Public Health (CEPH), the accrediting body for the nation’s schools and colleges of public health. Three programs in the college currently are accredited: the industrial hygiene program is accredited by the Accreditation Board for Engineering and Technology (ABET) and the American Board of Industrial Hygiene (ABIH), the Master of Health Administration is accredited by the Commission on Accreditation of Healthcare Management Education (CAHME), and the Occupational Medicine Residency is accredited... by the Accreditation Council for Graduate Medical Education (ACGME).

Admission

Each department in the College of Public Health has an admission committee. Admission criteria usually include a satisfactory cumulative grade-point average; Graduate Record Examination scores; references; résumés; and for applicants whose first language is not English, scores on the Test of English as a Foreign Language (TOEFL). Other evaluation criteria may include oral and on-campus interviews, written statements, special emphasis on science and math courses, and a match of available faculty mentors with student interests. Application deadlines vary by department.

Applicants to College of Public Health programs must meet the admission requirements of the Graduate College. For detailed information about Graduate College policies, including application requirements and procedures, see the Manual of Rules and Regulations of the Graduate College or the Graduate College section of the Catalog.

Faculty

The college’s faculty includes members with single appointments in the College of Public Health as well as those with joint appointments in other University of Iowa colleges, including the Carver College of Medicine and the Colleges of Dentistry, Engineering, Law, Liberal Arts and Sciences, Nursing, and Pharmacy. In addition, the college’s faculty includes adjunct members from Drake University, Iowa State University, the University of Northern Iowa, the Iowa State Department of Public Health, the State Hygienic Laboratory at The University of Iowa, the Iowa Heart Center (in Des Moines), University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics, and the National Institutes of Health.

Research Centers and Institutes

The College of Public Health is home to 27 centers and institutes that conduct research and provide public service. These multidisciplinary centers and institutes—most of which are supported by federal grants—focus their investigative efforts on important public health topics. They conduct an array of outreach, service, and policy activities through which the College of Public Health engages with agencies, communities, and organizations throughout Iowa, the Midwest, the nation, and the world. Students are encouraged to explore opportunities for involvement with any of the college’s centers and institutes.

For more information, see College of Public Health-Based Centers and Institutes on the college’s web site.

Facilities

Beginning spring 2012, the College of Public Health will be located in its new state-of-the-art building on the University’s health sciences campus. Until then, the college’s administrative offices are housed at University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics, on the University’s health sciences campus. Faculty offices are located on the health sciences campus in the College of Medicine Administration Building, General Hospital, John Colloton Pavilion, the Medical Education Building, Medical Laboratories, and Westlawn; on the main campus in the Jefferson Building, MacLean Hall, Schaeffer Hall, and University Capitol Centre; and at the University of Iowa Research Park in the BioVentures Center and in the Institute for Rural and Environmental Health. Specialized laboratories also are located on the UI Research Park campus.

Eight student computer laboratories are housed at the college. More than 55 software packages are available for student use, most without charge. Software includes Microsoft Office products, SAS, and S+. Some specialty labs are equipped with RedHat Linux and are loaded with R, Macanova, Xlispstat, Mathematica, and other software.

Students, faculty, and staff draw on extensive library resources available across campus. Hardin Library for the Health Sciences serves as a central resource for all of the health sciences colleges. Hardin Library’s Information Commons, a state-of-the-art health sciences educational technology facility, provides central support and delivery for courseware development, classroom instruction, health-related research, and independent learning. It offers high-end multimedia development workstations, networked electronic classrooms, a case-based learning and conference room, and information research workstations for searching health-related databases and the Internet.

Graduate nondegree program: Certificate in Agricultural Safety and Health
Web site: http://www.public-health.uiowa.edu/oeh/programs/certificate/

The College of Public Health offers the Certificate in Agricultural Safety and Health by distance education.

Graduate Program

• Certificate in Agricultural Safety and Health

The certificate program trains students to detect safety and illness hazards and to treat and prevent farm-related illnesses, injuries, and deaths. It is intended for health and safety professionals nationwide as well as for students at The University of Iowa and at other postsecondary institutions who are enrolled in health or safety programs and would like to add an agricultural health component to their training. The certificate may enhance employment opportunities in health care delivery, government, and the private sector.

The program is accredited by the Council on Education for Public Health.

Certificate

The Certificate in Agricultural Safety and Health requires 12 s.h. of graduate credit. Completion of the certificate is noted on the student’s transcript.

The certificate is offered by distance education, but students are encouraged to take 175:209 Rural Health and Agricultural Medicine on campus; the course is offered twice yearly, once during spring semester and again as an intensive five-day workshop in June. Students may be able to complete 175:203 Preceptorship in Occupational and Environmental Health in their own communities.

The Certificate in Agricultural Safety and Health requires the following course work.

Applicants to the certificate program should hold a bachelor’s degree from an accredited university with a g.p.a. of at least 2.50; or they should have equivalent experience and education. Application materials must include the program’s application form, a résumé, and a letter of interest explaining the applicant’s current position and education objectives.

Graduate degrees: M.S., Ph.D. in Biostatistics
Graduate nondegree program: Certificate in Biostatistics
Web site: http://www.public-health.uiowa.edu/biostat

The Department of Biostatistics prepares students for professional and academic careers in biostatistics. Graduates find positions in pharmaceutical, health care, and research companies and institutions; in universities and government agencies; and as consultants. The department also provides training for non-biostatistics students.

Current research interests in the Department of Biostatistics include computer intensive statistics, Bayesian methods, design and analysis of clinical trials, longitudinal data analysis, survival analysis, spatial modeling, analysis of data subject to missingness, time series, model selection, quality control, survey sampling, statistical genetics, and public health statistics. Biostatistics faculty members work closely with both clinical and basic science investigators on the University of Iowa health sciences campus in the design and analysis of research projects.

Graduate Programs

• Master of Science in biostatistics
• Doctor of Philosophy in biostatistics
• Certificate in Biostatistics

In addition to offering graduate degree programs in biostatistics, the department offers the biostatistics subtrack for the Master of Public Health; see "M.P.H. Subtrack" below.

Master of Science

The Master of Science program in biostatistics requires a minimum of 38 s.h. of graduate credit. The program provides training in the design of experiments and in analysis of data related to biomedical or public health problems. It emphasizes mathematical, statistical, and computer methods for dealing with quantitative information and provides opportunities for students to gain statistical consulting experience with a variety of problems.

Graduates find career opportunities in many areas, including pharmaceutics, health care, research companies and institutions, consulting firms, universities, and government agencies.

All M.S. students are required to complete an in-depth preceptorship under the direction of a departmental faculty member and a final comprehensive-style examination.

Graduate students in biostatistics must maintain a g.p.a. of at least 3.00. Those who receive a grade of C on 7 s.h. of course work may be dismissed from the program.

The Master of Science in biostatistics requires the following course work.

CORE COURSES

All of these:

171:178 Biostatistical Computing 3 s.h.
171:201-171:202 Biostatistical Methods I-II 8 s.h.

171:264 Longitudinal Data Analysis 3 s.h.
171:282 Problems/Special Topics in Biostatistics 1 s.h.

M.P.H. Subtrack

The Department of Biostatistics offers the biostatistics subtrack for the Master of Public Health. The subtrack focuses on applying biostatistical methods to public health and biomedical sciences and on applying methodology for design and analysis of research investigations in the health sciences. Graduates of the program are prepared for work as statistical consultants and data analysts for public health projects. See Master of Public Health Program (p. 1486) in the Catalog.

Doctor of Philosophy

The Doctor of Philosophy program in biostatistics requires a minimum of 79 s.h. of graduate credit, including credit from a master’s degree. The program prepares students for professional and academic careers in biostatistics, especially for positions that emphasize developing and applying statistical methodology to solve important biological and public health problems.

All Ph.D. students must successfully complete a qualifying examination, a comprehensive examination, and a dissertation—a substantial scholarly treatise. The research topic and content, which vary depending on the program of study, must be approved by the student’s dissertation committee. Other degree requirements include approved electives chosen from Department of Biostatistics and other University of Iowa courses.

Graduate students in biostatistics must maintain a g.p.a. of at least 3.00. Those who receive a grade of C on 7 s.h. of course work may be dismissed from the program.

The Doctor of Philosophy in biostatistics requires the following work.

MASTER OF SCIENCE BACKGROUND

Ph.D. students must take the following courses (26 s.h.) required for the Master of Science in biostatistics. Students who have completed equivalent course work at other institutions may request waivers and/or transfers of credit. Students who earned a Master of Science in biostatistics at The University of Iowa automatically receive credit for these courses.

One of these sequences:

22S:193-22S:194 Statistical Inference I-II 6 s.h.

All of these:
171:201-171:202 Biostatistical Methods I-II 8 s.h.
171:203 Biostatistical Methods in Categorical Data (171:241 may be substituted if taken fall 2006 or earlier) 3 s.h.
171:280 Preceptorship in Biostatistics 3 s.h.
173:140 Epidemiology I: Principles 3 s.h.
One approved biology/public health course

CORE COURSES

22S:255 Linear Models 4 s.h.
171:251 Theory of Biostatistics I 4 s.h.
171:252 Theory of Biostatistics II 4 s.h.
171:261 Survival Data Analysis 3 s.h.
171:262 Analysis of Categorical Data 3 s.h.
171:264 Longitudinal Data Analysis 3 s.h.

ELECTIVES

With approval of their advisors, students choose 15-22 s.h. of graduate-level courses in biostatistics, statistics, genetics, microbiology, and so forth. They may count a maximum of 5 s.h. earned in nonquantitative courses (e.g., community and behavioral health, epidemiology, microbiology) toward the requirement. They also may count courses required for the Master of Science that are not listed under "Master of Science Background," above, toward the requirement.

Ph.D. students may take the following courses.

002:170 Bioinformatics 3 s.h.
22S:138 Bayesian Statistics 3 s.h.
22S:156 Applied Time Series Analysis 3 s.h.
22S:161 Applied Multivariate Analysis 3 s.h.
22S:195 Probability and Stochastic Processes I 3 s.h.
22S:248 Computer Intensive Statistics 3 s.h.
171:243 Cohort Data Analysis 1 s.h.
171:280 Preceptorship in Biostatistics (in addition to preceptorship required for M.S.) 3 s.h.
171:290 Advanced Biostatistics Seminar 0-3 s.h.

DISSERTATION

171:300 Thesis/Dissertation (at least two semesters in residence) 10-17 s.h.

Certificate in Biostatistics

The Certificate in Biostatistics requires a minimum of 15 s.h. of graduate credit. It is designed for students who would like to add a formal biostatistics emphasis to their graduate programs. Completion of the certificate is noted on the student’s transcript.

The certificate program is open to students enrolled in a University of Iowa graduate degree program outside biostatistics. It is also open to individuals who hold graduate degrees in science disciplines or professional degrees in the health sciences and are admitted to the Graduate College as nondegree students (contact the Department of Biostatistics for more information).

Enrollment is limited; applicants who have completed at least one of the certificate’s required courses and whose research will be advanced by biostatistics training are given priority for admission. Visit the Certificate in Biostatistics web site for an application form.

The certificate requires two core courses (6 s.h.) and three electives (9 s.h.). Students should work with an advisor to plan their course work carefully, since some certificate courses have prerequisites, require permission for enrollment, or are not offered every year. Students must earn a grade of at least B-minus in each certificate course and must maintain a cumulative g.p.a. of at least 3.00 in order to earn the certificate. They must complete at least 6 s.h. of the required course work after being admitted to the certificate program, and they may count a maximum of 6 s.h. of certificate credit toward a degree or another certificate earned at the University.

The Certificate in Biostatistics requires the following course work.

Core courses—both of these:

171:161 Introduction to Biostatistics 3 s.h.
171:162 Design and Analysis of Biomedical Studies 3 s.h.

Elective courses—three of these (total of 9 s.h.):

171:164 Research Data Management 3 s.h.
171:173 Design of Sample Surveys 3 s.h.
171:174 Introductory Longitudinal Data Analysis 3 s.h.
171:185 Microarray Data Analysis 3 s.h.
171:241 Applied Categorical Data Analysis 3 s.h.
171:242 Applied Survival and Cohort Data Analysis 3 s.h.
171:266 Statistical Methods in Clinical Trials 3 s.h.
171:290 Advanced Biostatistics Seminar 0-3 s.h.
171:295 Research in Biostatistics arr.
Other courses may be approved as electives by the Department of Biostatistics director of undergraduate studies.

Admission

The biostatistics faculty considers several factors when evaluating applications for admission, including Graduate Record Examination (GRE) General Test scores, grade-point averages, letters of recommendation, intent and motivation for graduate study, and research interests. A student with deficiencies in one area may be admitted if all other components of his or her application are very strong.

All M.S. and Ph.D. program applicants must hold a baccalaureate degree, have a cumulative g.p.a. of at least 3.00, and have taken the Graduate Record Examination (GRE) General Test. Applicants whose first language is not English and who do not hold a baccalaureate degree from an accredited college or university in the United States, the United Kingdom, Canada (except Quebec), Australia, or New Zealand must score at least 600 (paper-based), 250 (computer-based), or 100 (Internet-based) on the Test of English as a Foreign Language (TOEFL). Applicants who score 550-599 (paper-based), 213-249 (computer-based), or 81-99 (Internet-based) on TOEFL are required to take English fluency courses. Applicants who score below those ranges are not considered for admission. In place of TOEFL scores, the department accepts International English Testing System (IELTS) scores of 7.0 or higher, with no subscore below 6.0.

All biostatistics applicants and students are required to have strong written and oral communication skills.

All M.S. applicants must be competent in at least one computer programming language. They also must have mathematical sciences training in methods and techniques of single variable and multivariable differential and integral calculus, and in linear algebra.

Completion of an M.S. program in statistics or biostatistics generally is required for admission to the Ph.D. program.

Applicants must meet the admission requirements of the Graduate College; see the Manual of Rules and Regulations of the Graduate College or the Graduate (p. 1117) College section of the Catalog.

APPLICATION DEADLINES

M.S. (fall entrance): January 15 (early), March 15 (late)

Ph.D. (fall entrance): January 15 (early), March 15 (late)

Financial Support

A limited number of teaching and research assistantships are available. Assistantships offer financial support and resident tuition with a tuition scholarship. They also provide valuable on-the-job training experience.

For information on financing education through jobs, grants, and loans, contact the University's Office of Student Financial Aid.

Resources

Department of Biostatistics resources and activities include three centers. The Biostatistics Consulting Center provides opportunities for students to gain valuable experience working with faculty and staff in the health sciences at The University of Iowa. The Clinical Trials Statistical and Data Management Center serves the statistical design, data management, and analysis needs of a variety of multicenter clinical trials, including studies of new treatments for acute ischemic stroke and studies of islet transportation. The Center for Public Health Statistics facilitates the collection, statistical analyses, and dissemination of health data in support of the University’s research, teaching, and service missions and in partnership with the Iowa Department of Public Health.

Courses

171:121 General Biostatistics 4 s.h.

Biostatistics and biostatistical computation; biostatistical aspects of health-related areas—clinical trials, disease modeling, disease mapping, genetics, and epidemiology; brief introduction to survival and longitudinal analyses.

171:151 Biostatistics for Biomedical Research 1 s.h.

Application of statistical techniques to biological data analysis; normal distribution, sampling distribution of the mean, variance, nonparametric methods, linear regression, power, and sample size. Same as 156:204.
171:161 Introduction to Biostatistics 3 s.h.
Application of statistical techniques to biological data, including descriptive statistics; probability; normal, binomial, and Poisson distributions; sampling distributions; tests of significance; confidence intervals; analysis of frequency data; simple linear regression. Offered fall and spring semesters. Requirements: college algebra.

171:162 Design and Analysis of Biomedical Studies 3 s.h.
Simple and multiple linear regression and correlation; one- and two-way layout considerations in planning experiments; factorial experiments; multiple comparison techniques; orthogonal contrasts. Offered spring semesters. Prerequisites: 171:161. Same as 22S:140.

171:164 Research Data Management 3 s.h.
Overview of problems encountered in gathering and processing data from biomedical investigations; introduction to data management techniques useful in biomedical studies; introduction to Microsoft Access. Offered fall semesters of odd years. Requirements: Fortran or C programming capability.

171:173 Design of Sample Surveys 3 s.h.
Challenges in designing sample surveys; emphasis on construction and number of strata, unbiased ratio estimators, multistaged sampling, estimation of variance in complex surveys, double sampling, sampling frame construction problems, panel studies, and problems due to nonresponse. Offered fall semesters. Prerequisites: 22S:154 or 22S:194 or 171:202.

171:174 Introductory Longitudinal Data Analysis 3 s.h.
Statistical models and estimation methods used to analyze correlated data (e.g., same subject measured repeatedly); emphasis on use of statistical software. Offered fall semesters of even years. Prerequisites: 22S:152, 22S:162, 171:203, or 171:241. Same as 22S:160.

171:178 Biostatistical Computing 3 s.h.
Groundwork in SAS and R programming; emphasis on data management, Monte Carlo simulations, and expectation maximization techniques. Offered fall semesters. Corequisites: 171:201. Recommendations: C and C++ skills.

171:185 Microarray Data Analysis 3 s.h.
Basic statistical principles and techniques used in bioinformatics, including analyzing microarray gene expression data. Offered spring semesters. Prerequisites: 22S:030 or 22S:101 or 171:161. Same as 002:176, 127:176.

171:201 Biostatistical Methods I 4 s.h.
Problem-oriented probability distributions, moments, estimation, parametric and nonparametric inference for one-sample and two-sample problems, analysis of frequency data, linear regression, and correlation analysis, with emphasis on use of computers. Offered fall semesters. Requirements: two semesters of calculus.

171:202 Biostatistical Methods II 4 s.h.
Continuation of 171:201, which is prerequisite; linear regression and correlation, multiple linear regression, multiple factor experiments, multiple comparisons, orthogonal contrasts, block and split-plot designs, confounding interactions, and mixed models. Offered spring semesters. Prerequisites: 171:201.

171:203 Biostatistical Methods in Categorical Data 3 s.h.
171:230 Statistical Data Mining in Public Health 3 s.h.
Introduction to a set of supervised statistical methods (e.g., regression, decision tree, neural network) and some unsupervised methods (e.g., association rules, and clustering) for data analysis in health-related applications. Offered spring semesters of even years. Prerequisites: 171:202, and 22S:153 or 22S:193.

171:241 Applied Categorical Data Analysis 3 s.h.
Overview of methods to analyze categorical data from health science investigations; estimation of rates and risks, measures of relative risk, stratified analysis, logistic regression analysis. Offered fall semesters. Prerequisites: 171:162 and 173:140.

171:242 Applied Survival and Cohort Data Analysis 3 s.h.
Nonparametric and semiparametric methods for survival data; methods of directly comparing standardized rates and standardization mortality ratios; Poisson regression for cohort data. Offered spring semesters of odd years. Prerequisites: 171:203 or 171:241.

171:243 Cohort Data Analysis 1 s.h.
Methods of comparing direct standardized rates and standardized mortality ratios; Poisson regression for cohort data. Offered spring semesters of odd years. Prerequisites: 171:241.

171:251 Theory of Biostatistics I 4 s.h.
Intermediate study of sufficiency, exponential families, methods of estimation, uniform minimum variance unbiasedness, information, likelihood theory, confidence intervals, the Neyman-Pearson lemma, asymptotic theory and its applications. Offered fall semesters of even years. Prerequisites: 22S:154 or 22S:194, and 171:202.

171:252 Theory of Biostatistics II 4 s.h.
Nonparametric hypothesis tests, semiparametric estimation, generalized linear models, generalized estimation equations, generalized linear mixed models, EM algorithm, computer-intensive methods; application of theory learned in 171:251 to classical and new methods in biostatistics. Offered spring semesters of odd years. Prerequisites: 171:251.

171:261 Survival Data Analysis 3 s.h.
Types of censoring and truncation; survival function estimation; life tables; parametric inference using exponential, Weibull, and accelerated failure time models; nonparametric tests; sample size calculation; Cox regression with stratification and time-dependent covariates; regression diagnostics; competing risks; analysis of correlated survival data. Offered fall semesters. Prerequisites: 22S:154 or 22S:194, and 171:202. Same as 22S:225.

171:262 Analysis of Categorical Data 3 s.h.
Models for discrete data, distribution theory, maximum likelihood and weighted least squares estimation for categorical data, tests of fit, models selection. Offered spring semesters. Prerequisites: 22S:154 or 22S:194, and 22S:164 or 171:202. Same as 22S:220.

171:264 Longitudinal Data Analysis 3 s.h.
Introduction to statistical methodology for analyzing data from observational and experimental studies in which the response variable from each subject is measured repeatedly; emphasis on use of statistical software packages and specialized programs. Offered spring semesters of odd years. Prerequisites: 22S:154 or 22S:194, and 171:202.

171:266 Statistical Methods in Clinical Trials 3 s.h.
Survey of statistical methods commonly used in clinical trials; methodologic perspective on the design, conduct, and analysis of trials; emphasis on Phase III randomized controlled clinical trials. Offered spring semesters. Prerequisites: 22S:154 or 22S:194, and 171:202.
171:268 Bayesian Methods and Design
Theory and application of Bayesian methods in biomedical research; foundations of Bayesian statistics, including axiomatic development of subjective probability and decision theory, study design, model development, inference, and implementation of computational algorithms. Prerequisites: 171:178, 171:202, 171:203, 22S:153, and 22S:154.

171:271 Advanced Survival Analysis
Counting process/martingale theory leading to asymptotic results of survival methods; semiparametric regression of accelerated failure time and additive hazard models; multivariate survival models for clustered, multiple event, and recurrent event data; special topics. Prerequisites: 171:261.

171:270 Preceptorship in Biostatistics
Work experience using knowledge and skill acquired in classroom; arranged in conjunction with ongoing departmental or collegiate activities or with governmental agencies or private industry; preparation of prospectus and presentation of research results in a department seminar. Repeatable.

171:281 Independent Study in Biostatistics
In-depth pursuit of an area of special interest in biostatistics requiring substantial creativity and independence. Repeatable.

171:282 Problems/Special Topics in Biostatistics
Didactic material in biostatistics; may include tutorials, seminars, faculty-directed independent work (e.g. literature search, project, short research project). Repeatable.

171:290 Advanced Biostatistics Seminar
Current topics; supervised experience in reading and interpreting biostatistical literature. Offered spring semesters.

171:295 Research in Biostatistics
Research that may lead to a dissertation. Repeatable.

171:300 Thesis/Dissertation
Repeatable.
Certificate in Public Health

Coordinator
Katie Yamaki

Undergraduate nondegree program: Certificate in Public Health
Graduate nondegree program: Certificate in Public Health

The College of Public Health offers the Certificate in Public Health by distance education.

Undergraduate and Graduate Program

• Certificate in Public Health

The certificate program is designed to improve public health practice and public health workforce capacity in Iowa and the upper Midwest. It is intended primarily for individuals in public health practice, those in the workforce, and those interested in acquiring a basic knowledge of public health practice. The program is open to undergraduate and graduate students.

Certificate

The Certificate in Public Health requires 12 s.h. of credit and is offered by distance education. Completion of the certificate is noted on the student’s transcript.

All certificate courses are offered on the Internet at least once a year. Some also are offered on the University of Iowa campus. Certificate students must have access to a computer and the Internet.

Students must complete the certificate’s required course work within five years of entering the program and must maintain a g.p.a. of at least 2.75 in work for the certificate. Students who have graduate standing when they complete the certificate course work and are admitted to the M.P.H. program after earning the certificate may apply a maximum of 9 s.h. of certificate credit toward the M.P.H. degree.

The Certificate in Public Health requires the following course work.

Both of these:

170:101 Introduction to Public Health 3 s.h.
173:099 Evidence-Based Public Health Methods 3 s.h.

Two of these:

172:101 Introduction to Health Promotion and Disease Prevention 3 s.h.
174:102 Introduction to the U.S. Health Care System 3 s.h.
175:197 Environmental Health 3 s.h.

Applicants to the certificate program must have completed at least 60 s.h. of postsecondary education course work and must have a cumulative g.p.a. of at least 2.75. They must submit official transcript(s), a statement of purpose, two reference letter(s), a résumé, and an application form.

For more information about the program and how to apply, visit the Certificate in Public Health web site.

Graduate degrees: M.S., Ph.D. in Community and Behavioral Health
Web site: http://www.public-health.uiowa.edu/cbh

The Department of Community and Behavioral Health examines the relationship between human behavior and community health and focuses on creating effective strategies for change. Its faculty members come from a variety of disciplines within the social and health sciences, drawn together by an interest in health behavior and promoting healthy communities.

Community and behavioral health students learn how to design, implement, and evaluate interventions directed toward identified public health problems in communities. They learn how public and institutional policy, the media, and community organizations can promote healthy behavior and effect positive change.

Graduate Programs

- Master of Science in community and behavioral health
- Doctor of Philosophy in community and behavioral health

Graduate students in community and behavioral health may earn degrees with or without subtracks. The Master of Science program offers an optional subtrack in health communication. The Doctor of Philosophy program offers two optional subtracks: addiction studies and health communication.

The department also offers two subtracks for the Master of Public Health: the community and behavioral health subtrack and the health communication subtrack. See "M.P.H. Subtracks" below.

Master of Science

The Master of Science program in community and behavioral health requires 35 s.h. of graduate credit, including a thesis. The program prepares students for research and professional positions in community and behavioral health or for Ph.D. study in community and behavioral health. The degree is offered with an optional subtrack in health communication; see "M.S. Subtrack in Health Communication" below.

During the first semester, M.S. students work with their academic advisor to develop a plan of study that satisfies their interests and professional goals as well as the program’s requirements. Students are required to attend departmental seminars and to complete all courses required for the degree.

The Master of Science in community and behavioral health requires the following course work.

172:150 Health Behavior and Health Education 3 s.h.
172:185 Communicating with the Community 3 s.h.
172:240 Health Communication 3 s.h.
172:242 Persuasion and Health 3 s.h.
172:246 Health Communication Campaigns 3 s.h.

RESEARCH METHODS CORE

Two of these (6 s.h.):

- 07P:243 Intermediate Statistical Methods 4 s.h.
- 07P:249 Factor Analysis and Structural Equation Models 3 s.h.
- 07P:252 Introduction to Multivariate Statistical Methods 3 s.h.
- 044:106 Foundations of GIS 3 s.h.
- 171:162 Design and Analysis of Biomedical Studies 3 s.h.
- 171:241 Applied Categorical Data Analysis 3 s.h.
- 172:181 Evaluation I: Theory and Applications 3 s.h.
- 172:183 Qualitative Research for Public Health 3 s.h.
- 172:202/113:202 Ethnographic Field Methods 3 s.h.
- 172:282 Evaluation II: Design and Methods 3 s.h.
- 172:285 Research Methods in Community and Behavioral Health 3 s.h.

CONTENT AREA ELECTIVES

Students work with their advisors to select at least 5 s.h. of course work appropriate to their educational goals and emphasis areas. They may choose from any community and behavioral health courses not already taken, other College of Public Health courses, or other University of Iowa graduate-level courses.

THESIS

The thesis requirement is 6 s.h.

M.S. Subtrack in Health Communication

The M.S. subtrack in health communication is designed for students who wish to gain knowledge and skill in designing, evaluating, and implementing effective communication strategies and messages that use mediated and interpersonal channels to address the health needs of diverse audiences. The program focuses on clinician-patient interaction, family communication, group and organizational communication, and mass media and web-based campaigns.

The health communication subtrack combines the M.S. core course work with additional concentrated learning opportunities. Students fulfill the regular M.S. requirements, using the health communication core to satisfy the content area electives requirement.

HEALTH COMMUNICATION CORE

Four of these (12 s.h.):

- 036:371 Communication Theory 3 s.h.
- 172:140/019:160 Media and Health 3 s.h.
- 172:240/036:270 Health Communication 3 s.h.
- 172:242 Persuasion and Health 3 s.h.
- 172:246/036:379 Health Communication Campaigns 3 s.h.

M.P.H. Subtracks

The Department of Community and Behavioral Health offers two subtracks for the Master of Public Health: the community and behavioral health subtrack and the health communication subtrack.

The M.P.H. subtrack in community and behavioral health prepares public health practitioners for a variety of positions in community development, health program implementation, and health education.

The M.P.H. subtrack in health communication prepares public health practitioners for a variety of employment opportunities in health communication strategies, health communication in groups and organizations, and mass media/web-based campaigns in health promotion.

For detailed information about the M.P.H. degree, see Master of Public Health Program (p. 1486) in the Catalog.

Doctor of Philosophy

The Doctor of Philosophy program in community and behavioral health requires at least 75 s.h. of graduate credit, including credit from a master’s degree. The program prepares individuals for academic, research, and policy-making work in the social and behavioral health sciences. This fast-growing academic specialty offers many career opportunities in academic and research institutions. The Ph.D. is offered with optional subtracks in addiction studies and in health communication; see "Ph.D. Subtrack in Addiction Studies" and "Ph.D. Subtrack in Health Communication" below.

Ph.D. students must successfully complete a qualifying exam, a comprehensive exam, and a dissertation—a substantial scholarly treatise. The research topic must be approved by the student’s dissertation committee.

During the first semester, students work with their academic advisors to develop a plan of study that satisfies their interests and professional goals as well as the program’s requirements. Students are required to attend departmental seminars and to complete all courses required for the degree.

The Doctor of Philosophy in community and behavioral health requires the following work.

COLLEGE OF PUBLIC HEALTH CORE

All of these (9 s.h.):

- 171:161 Introduction to Biostatistics 3 s.h.
- 172:101 Introduction to Health Promotion and Disease Prevention 3 s.h.
- 173:140 Epidemiology I: Principles 3 s.h.

BEHAVIORAL AND SOCIAL SCIENCES CORE

Seven of these (21 s.h.):

- 172:106 Designing and Implementing Interventions 3 s.h.
- 172:110 Community Development in Public Health 3 s.h.
- 172:130 Social Determinants of Health 3 s.h.
- 172:131/113:184 Anthropology and International Health 3 s.h.
- 172:135 Health Disparities and Cultural Competence 2-4 s.h.
- 172:150 Health Behavior and Health Education 3 s.h.
- 172:173/113:185 Medical Anthropology 3 s.h.
- 172:185 Communicating with the Community 3 s.h.
- 172:240 Health Communication 3 s.h.
- 172:242 Persuasion and Health 3 s.h.
- 172:246 Health Communication Campaigns 3 s.h.

RESEARCH METHODS CORE

Five of these (15 s.h.):

- 07P:243 Intermediate Statistical Methods 4 s.h.
- 07P:249 Factor Analysis and Structural Equation Models 3 s.h.
- 07P:252 Introduction to Multivariate Statistical Methods 3 s.h.
- 034:214 Introduction to Sociological Data Analysis 3 s.h.
- 034:215 Sampling, Measurement, and Observation Techniques 3 s.h.
- 034:216 Linear Models in Sociological Research 3 s.h.
- 034:218 Advanced Statistical Modeling of Data 3 s.h.
- 034:219 Structural Equation Modeling 3 s.h.
- 044:106 Foundations of GIS 3 s.h.
- 171:162 Design and Analysis of Biomedical Studies 3 s.h.
- 171:241 Applied Categorical Data Analysis 3 s.h.
- 172:181 Evaluation I: Theory and Applications 3 s.h.
- 172:183 Qualitative Research for Public Health 3 s.h.
- 172:202/113:202 Ethnographic Field Methods 3 s.h.
- 172:282 Evaluation II: Design and Methods 3 s.h.
- 172:285 Research Methods in Community and Behavioral Health 3 s.h.

CONTENT AREA ELECTIVES

Students work with their advisors to select at least 18 s.h. of course work appropriate to their educational goals and emphasis areas. They may choose from any Department of Community and Behavioral Health courses they have not already taken, other College of Public Health courses, or other University of Iowa graduate-level courses.

DISSERTATION

The dissertation requirement is 12 s.h.

Ph.D. Subtrack in Addiction Studies

The Ph.D. subtrack in addiction studies is designed for students who wish to gain skill in developing and evaluating addiction prevention and intervention programs. This area of study and practice examines addiction prevention and treatment from both a public health and a biopsychosocial perspective.

The addiction studies subtrack combines core course work from the Ph.D. curriculum with additional specialized training. Students fulfill the regular Ph.D. requirements, using the addiction studies core to satisfy the content area electives requirement.

ADDITION STUDIES CORE

Students work with their advisor to select 18 s.h. of addiction studies course work offered by the department. Courses focusing on treatment of substance abuse and comorbid psychopathology, prevention of substance abuse and comorbid... psychopathology, and assessment and diagnosis of addiction and comorbid psychopathology are under development.

Ph.D. Subtrack in Health Communication

The Ph.D. subtrack in health communication is designed for students who wish to prepare for academic, research, and policy-making careers in the area of health communication.

The health communication subtrack combines the core course work from the Ph.D. curriculum with additional specialized training. Students fulfill the regular Ph.D. requirements, using the health communication core to satisfy the content area electives requirement.

HEALTH COMMUNICATION CORE

Four of these (12 s.h.):

- 036:371 Communication Theory 3 s.h.
- 172:140/019:160 Media and Health 3 s.h.
- 172:240/036:270 Health Communication 3 s.h.
- 172:242 Persuasion and Health 3 s.h.
- 172:246/036:379 Health Communication Campaigns 3 s.h.

Admission

The community and behavioral health faculty considers several factors when evaluating applications for admission, including scores on the Graduate Record Exam, grade-point averages, letters of recommendation, intent and motivation for graduate study, and research interests. A student with deficiencies in one area may be admitted if all other components of his or her application are very strong.

All applicants must submit academic transcripts, three letters of recommendation, and a statement of purpose. Forms are available from the Department of Community and Behavioral Health or on its web site (see “Prospective Students”).

Applicants to the M.S. program must have a cumulative grade-point average of at least 3.00 and should hold a graduate degree from an accredited college or university—ideally, an M.S. in community and behavioral health, or another public health degree, or a related social science degree, or a clinical health degree. Applicants who do not hold a graduate degree should apply to the M.S. program. Preference is given to applicants with Graduate Record Exam verbal scores of at least 520, quantitative scores of at least 620, and analytical writing scores of at least 4.0 (GRE scores must be less than five years old).

Ph.D. program applicants also must submit their master’s thesis, or if no thesis is available, a sample of their scholarly writing.

Applicants whose first language is not English and who do not hold a baccalaureate degree from an accredited college or university in the United States, the United Kingdom, Canada (except Quebec), Australia, or New Zealand must score at least 600 (paper-based), 250 (computer-based), or 100 (Internet-based) on the Test of English as a Foreign Language (TOEFL). Applicants who score 550-599 (paper-based), 213-249 (computer-based), or 81-99 (Internet-based) are required to take English fluency courses. Applicants who score below those ranges are not considered for admission.

Applicants must meet the admission requirements of the Graduate College; see the Manual of Rules and Regulations of the Graduate College or the Graduate (p. 1117) College section of the Catalog.

APPLICATION DEADLINES

Students enter the program in fall. The application deadline is January 15.

Financial Support

Several forms of financial support are available, including scholarships and awards, student loans, and graduate assistantships.

Graduate assistantships provide a stipend and entitle students to resident tuition and reduced health insurance costs. Research assistantships are competitive and are awarded according to department need and student merit.

Scholarships and fellowships are available through federal agencies, such as the Centers for Disease Control and the National Institutes of Health, and from private foundations.

Resources

The department houses four centers. The Center for Health Communication and Social Marketing promotes communication research to address today’s public health challenges. The Iowa Tobacco Research Center supports research and education on tobacco use and prevention of tobacco use. It also supports culturally competent and accessible smoking cessation services. The Prairielands Addiction Technology Transfer Center provides state-of-the-art training, curricula, and resources on substance use issues for counselors, health care professionals, and members of the community. The Prevention Research Center for Rural Health focuses on improving the health of rural Iowans.

Graduate students may have opportunities to work with ongoing research projects in the centers.

Courses

172:101 Introduction to Health Promotion and Disease Prevention
3 s.h.
Basic concepts, strategies, and methods of health promotion and disease prevention; health promotion in the context of public health, theories and principles that underpin health promotion; overview of policy formation and health promotion planning, implementation, evaluation. Offered spring semesters. Requirements: graduate standing.

172:106 Designing and Implementing Interventions
3 s.h.
Background and skills necessary to plan a public health intervention program; program planning models. Offered fall semesters. Prerequisites: 172:150. Requirements: admission to College of Public Health.

172:110 Community Development in Public Health
3 s.h.
Concepts, strategies, and methods of community development as major approaches to creating healthy communities and promoting social change; role of public health practitioners as agents of change in organizations, communities. Offered fall semesters. Requirements: graduate standing.

172:115 Community Preventive Programs and Services
3 s.h.
Current public health problems and associated community preventive interventions. Offered fall semesters.

172:122 Maternal, Child, and Family Health
3 s.h.
Major issues, policies, and programs for health of women, children, and families in the United States; social, political, and economic determinants. Offered spring semesters. Prerequisites: 096:030 and 173:140.

172:130 Social Determinants of Health
3 s.h.
Relationship between social factors and health, with focus on family, neighborhood, community, and social group levels. Offered spring semesters. Requirements: graduate standing.

172:131 Anthropology and International Health
3 s.h.
Anthropological contributions to and critiques of the international health enterprise; case studies illustrating anthropology and international health's intersection, and their differences. Offered spring semesters. Same as 113:184, 152:184.

172:133 The Anthropology of Women's Health
3 s.h.
How female gender intersects with culture, environment, and political economy to shape health and illness; reproductive health, violence, drug use, cancer; readings in anthropology, public health. Prerequisites: 113:003 or 113:010 or 131:010. Same as 113:133, 131:133.

172:135 Health Disparities and Cultural Competence
2-4 s.h.
Characteristics, causes, and effects of health disparities in the U.S. health care system; foundation for development of knowledge, attitudes, and skills required of culturally competent health care providers; definitions and models of cultural competence, characteristics of culturally effective practitioners and workplaces; health disparities among specific populations, evidence for cultural competence as a remedy; taking a culturally appropriate history; working with interpreters; legal and professional imperatives for cultural competence. Same as 046:377, 096:125.
172:140 Media and Health  3 s.h.
Potential and limits of mass media’s ability to educate the public about health; research and theory on the influence of information and entertainment media; theories, models, assumptions of mass communication in relation to public health issues. Same as 019:160.

172:150 Health Behavior and Health Education  3 s.h.
Common theories of health behavior and health education and their application to varied public health problems and settings. Offered spring semesters. Requirements: graduate standing.

172:155 Public Health Issues in Overweight Management  3 s.h.
Overview of overweight and obesity from a public health perspective, including epidemiology, measurement issues, and intervention approaches at individual, community, and policy levels. Prerequisites: 170:101 or 172:101.

172:161 Substance Abuse Prevention and Intervention  3 s.h.
Prevalence and characteristics of several substance use disorders and the impact of such disorders on the individual, the community, and public health workers; how prevalence of substance use disorders varies among different ethnic and cultural groups, between men and women, across the life span, and through different socio-economic levels; how outcomes of substance abuse disorders vary at both the individual and community level as a function of these factors. Requirements: graduate standing and substance abuse course.

172:162 Prevention and Early Intervention of Mental Health Disorders  3 s.h.
Prevalence and characteristics of mental health disorders; differences between ethnicity and culture, gender, age, and socioeconomic background; primary and secondary prevention; assessment and tertiary treatment approaches to mental health disorders.

172:163 Tobacco Use: Prevention and Control  3 s.h.
Tobacco use, particularly cigarette smoking, as a major public health concern; key factors contributing to tobacco use; strategies to reduce smoking in communities.

172:170 Special Topics  arr.
Didactic material in community and behavioral health that may include tutorial, seminar, or faculty-directed independent work (e.g., literature search, project, short research project).

172:173 Medical Anthropology  3 s.h.
Major theoretical, methodological approaches; international health and development; biomedicine as a cultural system; ethnomedicine; anthropology and AIDS, human reproduction, epidemiology, ethnopsychiatry. Prerequisites: 113:003 or 113:010. Same as 113:185, 152:185.

172:181 Evaluation I: Theory and Applications  3 s.h.
Program evaluation methods in public health; overview of evaluation theory and models of program evaluation, examples of public health program evaluation, criteria for judging evaluation methods and products. Offered fall semesters. Prerequisites: 172:150 and 173:140. Requirements: public health student.

172:183 Qualitative Research for Public Health  3 s.h.
Introduction to methods and theories of qualitative research that facilitate description and explanation of social phenomena related to health behavior, illness, prevention, and treatment in the public health domain. Offered fall semesters. Requirements: graduate standing.

172:185 Communicating with the Community  3 s.h.
Communication skills for research and practice settings, taught from a cultural perspective with reference to gender, age, ethnicity; individual and constructive interviewing, public speaking, conducting focus groups. Offered fall semesters. Requirements: graduate standing.
172:202 Ethnographic Field Methods

172:240 Health Communication
Theories, concepts, research associated with health communication; interpersonal and mass communication approaches. Offered summer sessions. Same as 036:270.

172:242 Persuasion and Health
Theories of persuasion and social influence; attitude formation, relationship between attitudes and behavior, persuasion theories and their applications across health topics. Offered spring semesters.

172:246 Health Communication Campaigns
Design and analysis of health campaigns; theory, practice, methods; mass media, community, organization, and interpersonal approaches. Offered spring semesters. Same as 036:379.

172:248 Health Information and Health Literacy
How health information is accessed, sought, used, and delivered in various health information contexts; current issues about health information and literacy, including concepts, measures, factors, consequences, interventions.

172:270 Independent Study in Community and Behavioral Health
Pursuit of an interest in community and behavioral health requiring substantial creativity and independence. Repeatable.

172:282 Evaluation II: Design and Methods
Research design and methodology for evaluation of public health and related programs; causality, evaluation theory, threats to validity, selection and comparison of research designs, sample selection and size, survey and scale construction, quantitative and qualitative data collection and analysis, data management, reporting; based on case study of an infant mortality prevention program. Offered spring semesters. Prerequisites: 172:181. Requirements: biostatistics or statistics course.

172:285 Research Methods in Community and Behavioral Health
Overview of quantitative research methods for community and behavioral health; major elements of behavioral and social science research, critical evaluation of research related to community and behavioral health, application of research methods in public health practice; opportunities for students to build skills for evaluation of research and application of quantitative research methods. Prerequisites: 171:161 and 173:140.

Graduate nondegree program: Certificate in Emerging Infectious Disease Epidemiology
Web site: http://www.public-health.uiowa.edu/academics/certificate_eide.html

Emerging infectious diseases increasingly are recognized as global and regional issues. Some infectious diseases are controlled effectively with the help of modern technology. But new diseases—such as SARS, West Nile, and avian influenza virus infections—appear frequently, and older ones, including malaria, tuberculosis, and bacterial pneumonia, are now appearing in forms that are resistant to drug treatments. All of them have the potential to seriously affect human and animal health as well as economies locally and worldwide. They pose novel and unceasing challenges for professionals in health care, government, and private agencies.

The College of Public Health offers the Certificate in Emerging Infectious Disease Epidemiology. It has a required on-campus component (summer), but the remaining work may be done either on campus or by distance education.

Graduate Program

• Certificate in Infectious Disease Epidemiology

The certificate program provides basic information and training related to infectious diseases. It is designed for a broad range of individuals, including graduate students, international public health professionals, laboratory professionals, physicians, nurses, veterinarians, and medical technologists.

Certificate

The Certificate in Emerging Infectious Disease Epidemiology requires 12 s.h. of graduate credit. Completion of the certificate is noted on the student’s transcript.

Three of the certificate’s required courses must be completed on campus during the two-week College of Public Health Summer Institute: 173:157 Zoonotic Diseases, 173:158 Public Health Laboratory Techniques, and 173:159 Applied Infectious Disease Epidemiology. The remaining courses may be completed on campus or by distance education.

Students must complete the certificate’s required course work within five years of entering the program and must maintain a g.p.a. of at least 2.75 in work toward the certificate. Students who complete the certificate and are admitted subsequently to the Master of Public Health program may count a maximum of 9 s.h. of certificate work toward the M.P.H. requirements. Those working concurrently toward the certificate and the Master of Public Health may apply a maximum of 3 s.h. of certificate work toward the M.P.H. degree.

The Certificate in Emerging Infectious Disease Epidemiology requires the following course work.

All of these (6 s.h.):
173:157 Zoonotic Diseases 2-3 s.h.
173:158 Public Health Laboratory Techniques 1 s.h.
173:159 Applied Infectious Disease Epidemiology 2 s.h.

Two of these (6 s.h.):
171:161 Introduction to Biostatistics 3 s.h.
173:140 Epidemiology I: Principles 3 s.h.
173:155 Diagnostic Microbiology for Epidemiology 3 s.h.
175:197 Environmental Health 3 s.h.

Applicants to the certificate program must hold a baccalaureate degree from an accredited college or university and must have a g.p.a. of at least 2.75 (or foreign equivalent). For more information about the program and how to apply, visit the Certificate in Emerging Infectious Disease Epidemiology web site.

Graduate degrees: M.S., Ph.D. in Epidemiology; M.S. in Clinical Investigation

Graduate nondegree program: Certificate in Clinical Investigation

Web site: http://www.public-health.uiowa.edu/epi

The Department of Epidemiology focuses on surveillance for disease, risk factors for disease in the general population, behavioral factors in disease, use and outcome of health interventions and care, and the establishment and evaluation of disease control measures in the community. Students are guided by faculty members whose research interests include epidemiology of communication disorders, pharmacoepidemiology, cancer epidemiology, infectious disease epidemiology, adverse reproductive outcome epidemiology, anatomic pathology, genetics, cardiovascular disease, nutrition, smoking cessation, epidemiology of reproduction, dental epidemiology, clinical epidemiology, neuroepidemiology, meta-analysis, intervention trials, international health, and effects of aging.

Graduate Programs

- Master of Science in epidemiology (with or without thesis)
- Master of Science in clinical investigation
- Doctor of Philosophy in epidemiology
- Certificate in Clinical Investigation
In addition to its graduate degree and certificate programs, the department offers the epidemiology subtrack for the Master of Public Health; see "M.P.H. Subtrack" below.

Master of Science: Epidemiology

The Master of Science program in epidemiology requires 38 s.h. of graduate credit and is offered with or without thesis. The program prepares graduate students for professional careers in which specialized knowledge of epidemiological methods and analytic techniques are essential. Graduates find employment in local, state, and federal health agencies, academic institutions, and private enterprise.

Graduate students in epidemiology must maintain a g.p.a. of at least 3.00. Those who receive a grade of C on 7 s.h. of course work may be dismissed from the program. Students who choose to complete the degree without thesis are required to pass a comprehensive examination.

Students are required to attend 80 percent, for three semesters, of all Department of Epidemiology seminar meetings and journal club meetings. They also must present one scientific poster at an international, national, regional, state, University, or departmental level before they may graduate.

The Master of Science in epidemiology requires the following course work.

CORE COURSES

Students earn 30-31 s.h. in the required core, as follows.

All of these:

- 171:161 Introduction to Biostatistics 3 s.h.
- 171:162 Design and Analysis of Biomedical Studies 3 s.h.
- 171:241 Applied Categorical Data Analysis 3 s.h.
- 173:140 Epidemiology I: Principles (web-based course cannot be used) 3 s.h.
- 173:160 Introduction to Epidemiology Data Analysis With Computers 2 s.h.
- 173:240 Epidemiology II: Advanced Methods 4 s.h.

One of these:

- 171:164 Research Data Management 3 s.h.
- 171:174 Introductory Longitudinal Data Analysis 3 s.h.
- 171:242 Applied Survival and Cohort Data Analysis 3 s.h.

Students may need to do additional elective course work in order to complete the minimum 38 s.h. required for the degree.

Master of Science: Clinical Investigation

The Master of Science program in clinical investigation requires 30 s.h. of graduate credit. The program is designed for clinicians interested in pursuing careers in clinical research. It includes in-depth training in biostatistics, epidemiology, research ethics, and academic survival skills as well as didactic training applicable to clinical research careers.

Graduates of the program are able to critically evaluate clinical literature, write competitive grant proposals, design and conduct clinical research projects, work effectively with other researchers...
Applicants to the program must have completed at least 6 s.h. of pathology, physiology, and/or pharmacology. Students must remedy deficiencies by taking courses that fill this requirement during their enrollment in the program.

Graduate students in epidemiology must maintain a g.p.a. of at least 3.00. Those who receive a grade of C on 7 s.h. of course work may be dismissed from the program.

The Master of Science in clinical investigation requires the following course work.

M.P.H. Subtrack

The Department of Epidemiology offers the epidemiology subtrack for the Master of Public Health. The subtrack focuses on fundamental concepts and methods and provides training in the use of data and methods for disease assessment and for evaluation of programs and interventions. Graduates of the program work in public health departments and other health care settings. See Master of Public Health Program (p. 1486) in the Catalog.

Doctor of Philosophy: Epidemiology

The Doctor of Philosophy program in epidemiology requires a minimum of 75 s.h. of graduate credit. The program prepares graduate students for careers as scientists, teachers, and practitioners of epidemiologic methods. Employment opportunities exist in academic institutions; local, state, and federal health agencies; and in commercial enterprises.

Graduate students in epidemiology must maintain a g.p.a. of at least 3.00. Those who receive a grade of C on 7 s.h. of course work may be dismissed from the program.

All doctoral students must successfully complete a qualifying examination, a comprehensive examination, and a dissertation—a substantial scholarly treatise. The research topic and content, which vary depending on the program of study, must be approved by the student’s dissertation committee. Other degree requirements include approved electives chosen from Department of Epidemiology courses and other University of Iowa courses.

Students are required to attend 80 percent, for three semesters, of all Department of Epidemiology seminar meetings and journal club meetings. They also must present one scientific poster at an international, national, regional, state, University, or departmental level before they may graduate.

The Doctor of Philosophy in epidemiology requires the following course work.

CORE COURSES

Students earn 39-41 s.h. in the required core, as follows.

All of these:

171:161 Introduction to Biostatistics 3 s.h.
171:162 Design and Analysis of Biomedical Studies 3 s.h.
171:164 Research Data Management 3 s.h.
171:241 Applied Categorical Data Analysis 3 s.h.
171:242 Applied Survival and Cohort Data Analysis 3 s.h.
173:140 Epidemiology I: Principles (web-based course cannot be used) 3 s.h.
173:160 Introduction to Epidemiology Data Analysis With Computers 2 s.h.
173:205 Research in Epidemiology 3 s.h.
173:210 Writing a Research Protocol 3 s.h.
173:240 Epidemiology II: Advanced Methods 4 s.h.
173:340 Epidemiology III: Theories 3 s.h.

One of these:

069:133 Introduction to Human Pathology for Graduate Students 4 s.h.
069:270 Pathogenesis of Major Human Diseases 3 s.h.

One of these:

027:130 Human Physiology 3 s.h.
072:153 Graduate Physiology 4 s.h.

Ph.D. students also must earn 3 s.h. in epidemiology courses outside their emphasis area.
ELECTIVES

Students must complete a total of 23-25 s.h. of elective course work. They must earn 3 s.h. in a Department of Epidemiology course (prefix 173) outside their emphasis area and at least 20 s.h. in courses in their emphasis area. Course selection must be approved by the student’s advisor and Ph.D. plan of study committee.

DISSERTATION

All doctoral students must successfully complete a Ph.D. thesis.

Certificate in Clinical Investigation

The Certificate in Clinical Investigation requires a minimum of 19 s.h. of graduate credit and may be completed in one year. It is designed for clinicians who seek advanced training in clinical methodology and applied patient-oriented research skills. Completion of the certificate is noted on the student’s transcript.

The certificate program is open to individuals who hold a doctoral-level degree in a clinical discipline (e.g., M.D., D.O., D.D.S., Ph.D., Pharm.D., D.V.M.) or are enrolled in the Medical Scientist Training (p. 1323) Program (Carver College of Medicine). Admission requirements are similar to those for the Master of Science program in clinical investigation; see "Admission" below.

Certificate students complete didactic course work and clinical research preceptorships and participate in clinical research seminars according to the study plan below.

The Certificate in Clinical Investigation requires the following course work.

Summer session:

171:161 Introduction to Biostatistics 3 s.h.
173:140 Epidemiology I: Principles 3 s.h.
173:152 Clinical Research Career Development 1 s.h.

Fall semester:

173:150 Introduction to Clinical Epidemiology 2-3 s.h.
173:163 Seminar in Clinical and Translational Research 1 s.h.
173:295 Clinical Research Ethics 2-3 s.h.

Spring semester:

173:161 Patient-Oriented Research Data Analysis 3 s.h.
173:163 Seminar in Clinical and Translational Research 1 s.h.
173:195 Preceptorship in Epidemiology arr.

Admission

M.S. and Ph.D.: Epidemiology

The epidemiology faculty considers several factors when evaluating applications for admission, including GRE scores, grade-point average, letters of recommendation, intent and motivation for graduate study, and research interests. A student with deficiencies in one area may be admitted if all other components of his or her application are very strong.

All M.S. program applicants must hold a baccalaureate degree and have a cumulative g.p.a. of at least 3.00. Undergraduate preparation must include two semesters of biological sciences, and mathematics through algebra.

Ph.D. program applicants must hold a baccalaureate degree (an M.S. or M.P.H. usually is required), and must have a cumulative g.p.a. of at least 3.00. Courses in the biological, physical, and mathematical sciences provide important background; one semester of calculus and two semesters of biological sciences are highly recommended. Computing skills also are desirable.

All applicants to the M.S. or Ph.D. program must have taken the Graduate Record Examination (GRE) General Test.

Applicants whose first language is not English and who do not hold a baccalaureate degree from an accredited college or university in the United States, the United Kingdom, Canada (except Quebec), Australia, or New Zealand must score at least 600 (paper-based), 250 (computer-based), or 100 (Internet-based) on the Test of English as a Foreign Language (TOEFL). Applicants who score 550-599 (paper-based), 213-249 (computer-based), or 81-99 (Internet-based) are required to take English fluency courses. Applicants who score below those ranges are not considered for admission. In place of TOEFL scores, the department accepts International English Testing System (IELTS) scores of 7.0 or higher, with no subscore below 6.0.

All M.S. and Ph.D. applicants and students are required to have strong written and oral communication skills.

Applicants must meet the admission requirements of the Graduate College; see the Manual of Rules.
Applicants to the M.S. program in clinical investigation must hold a doctoral-level degree in a clinical discipline (e.g., M.D., D.O., D.D.S., Ph.D., Pharm.D., D.V.M.) or be enrolled in the Medical Scientist Training (p. 1323) Program (Carver College of Medicine). They must hold a baccalaureate degree with a cumulative g.p.a. of at least 3.00; foreign-trained applicants must have an outstanding doctoral training record.

All applicants must have taken the Graduate Record Examination (GRE), Medical College Admission Test (MCAT), or Dental Admission Test (DAT). Applicants whose first language is not English and who do not hold a degree from an accredited English-speaking college or university must have taken the Test of English as a Foreign Language (TOEFL).

Applicants are considered based on their credentials, prior training, and research training plans. An applicant with deficiencies in one area may be admitted if all other components of his or her application are strong.

Applicants must meet the admission requirements of the Graduate College; see the Manual of Rules and Regulations of the Graduate College or the Graduate (p. 1117) College section of the Catalog.

The M.S. in clinical investigation accepts students only for summer entrance. Application deadlines are April 15 for U.S. citizens, March 1 for international applicants.

Financial Support

A limited number of graduate research assistantships are available for advanced M.S. and Ph.D. students; for information, consult the department. For information on financing education through jobs, grants, and loans, contact the University's Office of Student Financial Aid.

Opportunities for funded predoctoral fellowships are available. Funded positions sponsored by federal agencies are available only to U.S. citizens.

Resources

The State Health Registries of Iowa, which encompasses the Iowa Cancer Registry and the Iowa Registry for Congenital and Inherited Disorders, works in cooperation with the Iowa Department of Public Health to collect medical data on Iowans. It is one of 10 registries nationwide that report data to the National Cancer Institute.

The Preventive Intervention Center conducts population-based intervention trials to prevent occurrence and recurrence of disease and to promote wellness, with a focus on the elderly. The Lipid Research Clinic specializes in research promoting prevention of cardiovascular disease and provides an interdisciplinary approach to risk factor interventions. The Healthcare Effectiveness Research Center is a collaborative research enterprise with the College of Pharmacy that studies whether particular health care treatments or services are over- or underutilized. The Center for Emerging Infectious Diseases employs epidemiological methods, laboratory technologies, and clinical evaluations to achieve a better understanding of emerging infectious diseases. The Nutrition Center provides expertise in nutrition and dietary assessment, dietary interventions, and nutrition lifestyle change strategies.

Courses

173:099 Evidence-Based Public Health Methods
3 s.h.
How to choose, conduct, and evaluate evidence-based programs and policies in public health; finding and using scientific evidence, implementing and evaluating interventions that produce new evidence. Offered summer sessions. Requirements: Certificate in Public Health enrollment.

173:111 International Health
3 s.h.
Urgent health problems in the developing world and among disadvantaged populations in developed countries; biological, social, cultural, political aspects of international health problems; applications of research methods from epidemiology, environmental health, social sciences. Same as 152:111, 175:111.
173:120 Principles of Public Health Informatics
Systematic applications of information science, computer science, and technology to public health practice, research, and learning; methods of disease surveillance, data collection, analysis, and reporting with health informatics.

173:130 Food Safety 3 s.h.
Current issues and concepts of food safety in the United States, from plant to table; foodborne illness from microbial agents, food toxins, adulterants; disease investigation, risk analysis, risk mitigation, prevention.

173:132 Exotic and Emerging Diseases of Animals 1 s.h.
Major exotic and emerging animal diseases; veterinarian’s role in recognizing and diagnosing such diseases; how outbreaks affect economies and veterinary medicine; public health concerns; responding agencies and their roles in control and eradication.

173:140 Epidemiology I: Principles 3 s.h.
Epidemiological concepts and methods; design of descriptive and analytic studies, such as aggregate, case series, cross-sectional, case-control, cohort studies, clinical trials; application of epidemiology to public health practice; communication and dissemination of epidemiological findings.

173:145 Public Health Data 2 s.h.
Concepts and methods of obtaining and using public health data in community settings; how public health data are used for epidemiologic investigations and prevention programs. Offered spring semesters. Corequisites: 171:161 and 173:140, if not taken as prerequisites.

173:147 Applied Veterinary Epidemiology/Biostatistics 3 s.h.
Epidemiology and biostatistics applied to veterinary public health; outbreak investigations, surveillance, analyzing and evaluating diagnostic tests, translation methodology, risk assessment, data analysis software programs. Prerequisites: 171:161 and 173:140.

173:150 Introduction to Clinical Epidemiology 2-3 s.h.
Epidemiologic applications and methods used in clinical settings to evaluate clinical medicine and other health profession disciplines, including health measurement, health outcome determination, diagnostic process, risk assessment and communication, prognosis, study design, patient surveys, clinical trials, decision analysis and meta-analysis, health services research. Offered fall semesters. Corequisites: 171:161 and 173:140, if not taken as prerequisites.

173:152 Clinical Research Career Development 1 s.h.
Practical skills of clinical research; grant development and management, data management, communication of research findings, and academic career development. Offered summer sessions.

173:153 Surveillance Internship: IRCID 2 s.h.

173:154 Cancer Registration Internship 2 s.h.
Sources of data necessary for operation of a population-based cancer registry; potential uses of the data; methods and personnel required for collecting, editing, storing, reporting, and assuring quality of data. Prerequisites: 173:140.

173:155 Diagnostic Microbiology for Epidemiology 3 s.h.
Introduction to microbiological culture, antigen detection, immunological and molecular amplification laboratory techniques for bacteria, viruses, parasites, fungi. Offered spring semesters. Prerequisites: 061:103 or 061:112 or 061:157 or 061:164.
173:156 Introduction to Molecular Epidemiology
3 s.h.
Introduction to basic techniques of molecular biology (DNA, RNA, protein techniques) and their use in epidemiological research (e.g., diagnosis of disease, biomarker discovery and validation). Corequisites: 173:140, if not taken as a prerequisite.

173:157 Zoonotic Diseases
2-3 s.h.
Introduction to the epidemiology and control of zoonotic diseases; zoonoses endemic to the midwestern United States. Offered summer sessions. Prerequisites: 061:103 or 061:112 or 061:157 or 061:164 or 173:155 or 173:255.

173:158 Public Health Laboratory Techniques
1 s.h.
Common laboratory techniques in emerging infectious respiratory disease research and epidemiologic surveillance laboratories; emphasis on techniques for culturing, characterization, and serological surveillance of exposure to influenza viruses. Requirements: completion of online Basic Biological Safety and Blood-borne Pathogens courses; completed certificates must be brought to class.

173:159 Applied Infectious Disease Epidemiology
2 s.h.
Introduction to infectious disease surveillance, diagnostic tools, outbreak investigations, vaccine trials, public health interventions, biodefense, emerging infectious diseases, and analytical approaches pertaining to infectious disease prevention and control; emphasis on respiratory viral diseases. Duplicates 173:255.

173:160 Introduction to Epidemiology Data Analysis With Computers
2 s.h.
Organization, collection, management, and analysis of epidemiological data using computer programs. Offered fall semesters. Corequisites: 171:161 and 173:140, if not taken as prerequisites.

173:161 Patient-Oriented Research Data Analysis
3 s.h.

173:163 Seminar in Clinical and Translational Research
1 s.h.
Presentation of ongoing clinical research projects, grant applications, and methodological articles, with emphasis on works in progress.

173:170 Injury and Violence Prevention
3 s.h.
Theory, research, and practice of injury control; unintentional and intentional injuries; local, national, international injury issues. Same as 175:170.

173:175 Research Methods in Disaster Studies
3 s.h.
Epidemiologic study of disasters and their health consequences; research to identify and reduce health effects, research in context of response and preparedness. Same as 175:175.

173:190 Problems and Special Topics in Epidemiology
arr.
Didactic material in epidemiology; may include tutorial, seminar, faculty-directed independent work (e.g. literature search, project, short research project).

173:195 Preceptorship in Epidemiology
arr.
Quantitative research-oriented project performed with a preceptor; preparation of prospectus, presentation of research results in a publication-quality report and a scientific poster session.

173:199 Practicing Evidence-Based Public Health
3 s.h.
How epidemiologic and other scientific studies underlie public health practice; relationship between evidence and action; controversies at interface of science and policy. Offered spring semesters.

173:200 Independent Study in Epidemiology
arr.
In-depth pursuit of an area of special interest in epidemiology requiring substantial creativity and independence.
173:205 Research in Epidemiology arr.
Research that may lead to a dissertation. Repeatable.

173:207 Social Epidemiology 3 s.h.
Introduction with global focus and emphasis on methodological issues, including definition/measurement of social constructs, appropriate research designs, analytic approaches. Prerequisites: 173:140 and 171:161.

173:208 Conducting Literature Syntheses 1 s.h.
Opportunity to develop skills for conducting literature searches and writing literature summaries or reviews, for grant or thesis background sections. Prerequisites: 171:161 and 173:140. Recommendations: 173:160 or Hardin Library Reference Works course.

173:209 Behavioral Epidemiology 3 s.h.
Behavioral epidemiology, including diet, exercise, smoking, social support; use of design and measurement concepts and problem-solving skills in research, including focus groups, cognitive interviewing, and pilot studies that use qualitative methods to design quantitative questions regarding behavior. Prerequisites: 171:161 and 173:140.

173:210 Writing a Research Protocol 3 s.h.
Small group projects to develop research protocols using epidemiological study designs; presentation and defense of proposals before faculty site visitors. Offered fall semesters. Prerequisites: 171:161, 173:140, and 173:240.

173:211 Grant Writing for Clinical Investigators 1 s.h.
Development of skills for writing effective, scientifically sound applications for external research grants; for students who have completed the literature review section for their topic. Prerequisites: 171:161 and 173:140.

173:214 Meta-Analysis of Epidemiologic Studies 3 s.h.
Methods for quantitative pooling of analytic study associations (cohort and case-control) between exposure and a dichotomous outcome; literature searches, data abstraction, test of homogeneity, publication bias and consideration of adjusted risk ratios (effects of confounding). Prerequisites: 171:162 and 173:140.

173:215 Writing for Medical Journals 1 s.h.
Skill development in writing medical journal articles for publication.

173:220 Environmental and Occupational Epidemiology 3 s.h.
Environmental and occupational epidemiologic study designs; basic and novel methods of exposure assessment; methodologies to improve study validity. Prerequisites: 173:140. Corequisites: 171:161 and 175:197. Same as 175:220.

173:225 Genetics and Epidemiology 4 s.h.
Basic human genetic and population genetics principles; methods of integrating genetic principles into epidemiological studies; analytical methods for case control and family data. Prerequisites: 171:161 and 173:140.

173:230 Principles of Dietary Assessment 1 s.h.
Overview of current dietary assessment methods; evaluation of dietary records, dietary recall, food frequency questionnaires, brief dietary scanners, nutrient database, nutrient intakes standards. Offered spring semesters. Requirements: 3 s.h. of college nutrition courses.

173:233 Global Nutrition Policy 3 s.h.
Concepts and methods used in setting public health nutrition policy; evidence-based aspects of nutrition policy formation in public health settings; evaluation of nutritional public health policy implementation and ways of changing policy in China, Korea, Micronesia, Hawaii, Italy, and the United States. Offered summer sessions.
173:235 Nutritional Epidemiology 2 s.h.
Application of epidemiology study designs to nutrition variables and chronic disease; analysis of nutrition epidemiology studies; research protocol design. Offered spring semesters. Recommendations: a basic nutrition course.

173:236 Nutrition Intervention in Clinical Trials Research 2 s.h.
Nutrition interventions in clinical trials; disease related to nutrition variables; research that links effects of diet on chronic diseases. Offered fall semesters. Recommendations: a basic nutrition course.

173:237 Nutrition Intervention in Research Lab 3 s.h.
Development, demonstration of group counseling skills in ongoing nutrition research projects at The University of Iowa. Offered fall semesters. Corequisites: 173:236, if not taken as a prerequisite.

173:240 Epidemiology II: Advanced Methods 4 s.h.
Epidemiologic study design and analysis; bias, confounding, effect modification; case-control studies; cohort studies; field methods; measurement principles; exposure and disease classification; acute and chronic disease examples. Offered spring semesters. Prerequisites: 171:161, 173:140, and 173:160.

173:241 Statistical Methods in Epidemiology 3 s.h.
Overview of methods to analyze data from epidemiologic investigations; estimation of relative measures of risk, attributable risk, stratified analysis, model-fitting approaches using logistic and Poisson regression analysis; confounding and effect modification; analysis of epidemiologic data sets. Prerequisites: 171:161 and 171:162.

173:245 Epidemiology of Physical Activity 3 s.h.
Physical activity/disease relationships examined through application of epidemiologic methods, including research design, interpretation of studies, selection of measures to fit research questions. Same as 027:249.

173:251 Injury Epidemiology 3 s.h.
How epidemiology can be applied to injury prevention and control: epidemiology literature, specific methodological problems involved in the epidemiology of injuries, critical evaluation of research articles. Offered spring semesters of odd years. Prerequisites: 173:140. Same as 175:251.

173:253 Epidemiology of Occupational Injuries 3 s.h.
Epidemiological literature on occupational injuries and their prevention; focus on research methods. Offered spring semesters of even years. Prerequisites: 173:140. Same as 175:253.

173:255 Epidemiology of Infectious Diseases 3 s.h.
Underlying epidemiological concepts of infection disease, including causation and surveillance; prevention and control; case studies. Offered fall semesters. Prerequisites: 173:140. Same as 152:257.

173:256 Hospital Epidemiology 2 s.h.
Health care-associated infections; surveillance, investigative methods, resistant organisms, molecular epidemiology; methods for preventing spread of pathogens, including isolation precautions; environmental issues, construction, sterilization; interactive exercises. Prerequisites: 173:140.

173:257 Infectious Causes of Chronic Disease 3 s.h.
Evidence linking various infectious agents with the development of different types of chronic disease. Offered even years. Corequisites: 173:140, if not taken as a prerequisite.

173:260 Epidemiology of Chronic Diseases 3 s.h.
Chronic disease epidemiology; survey of leading chronic diseases, including measurement of disease, lifestyle, nutrition, occupation, family history. Offered spring semesters. Prerequisites: 173:140.
173:261 Epidemiology of Aging 1-2 s.h.
Epidemiologic methods for studying health and social problems of older persons; applications including research and public health practice and policy. Offered spring semesters. Prerequisites: 173:140. Same as 153:261.

173:262 Neuroepidemiology 2 s.h.
Basic epidemiologic concepts of neurologic disease; concepts, methods, examples of neuroepidemiology; varied diseases, methods. Prerequisites: 173:140 and 173:160.

173:263 Epidemiology of Reproductive Diseases 2 s.h.
Evaluation of methodological issues and current findings for reproductive diseases and conditions; etiological mechanisms, including behavioral and genetic. Offered fall semesters of odd years. Prerequisites: 173:140.

173:264 Epidemiology of Maternal and Infant Health 2 s.h.
Overview of maternal and infant epidemiologic and methodologic issues; prevalence and trends; risk factors; data sources, including limitations and availability; relevant measurement issues; directions for future research. Prerequisites: 171:161 and 173:140.

173:265 Cardiovascular Disease Epidemiology 3 s.h.
Natural history of atherosclerotic disease in humans and risk factors affecting its development; atherosclerotic disease by age, sex, and in varied populations worldwide; recent guidelines and clinical trials to delay onset, reduce incidence, improve outcome of cardiovascular disease. Offered fall semesters of odd years. Prerequisites: 171:161 and 173:140.

173:266 Psychiatric Epidemiology 3 s.h.
Population-based studies of psychiatric disorders and associated etiologic tools; diagnostic criteria used in psychiatric research, common structured interviews and rating scales; recent research relevant to common psychiatric disorders; experience writing a research idea using NIH PHS grant form. Offered spring semesters. Prerequisites: 173:140. Recommendations: 173:240 or two years of resident training in psychiatry. Same as 073:255.

173:267 Cancer Epidemiology and Control 3 s.h.
Incidence, mortality, survival; risk factors, cancer control options for major cancer sites; principles and methods of cancer registration; research examples by type of study design. Offered spring semesters of even years. Prerequisites: 069:133, 171:161, and 173:140.

173:270 Cancer Molecular Epidemiology Seminar 2 s.h.
Basic tumor biology and lab-based methods applied to development of translational approaches to prevention, early diagnosis, and treatment of human cancers. Offered fall semesters of even years. Same as 069:272.

173:271 Health Care Utilization Outcomes 3 s.h.
Research tools to assess changes in health care use and cost as outcomes of treatment; theories of health outcomes; analysis of hospital discharge data sets. Requirements: knowledge of SAS or SPSS. Same as 174:268.

173:272 Intervention and Clinical Trials 3 s.h.
Methodologic introduction to rationale, design, conduct, analysis, and presentation of clinical trials; basics of clinical trial design, variety of designs, examples from clinical trials; biostatistical methods, including sample size determination. Offered fall semesters. Prerequisites: 171:161 and 173:140.
173:291 Pharmacoepidemiology 3 s.h.
Drug approval process, methods for identification and attribution of adverse drug events, current understanding of the epidemiology of adverse drug events; study designs, data sources for pharmacoepidemiology, pharmacoeconomics. Offered fall semesters of even years. Prerequisites: 173:140.

173:295 Clinical Research Ethics 2-3 s.h.
Ethical and regulatory aspects of clinical research; historical background, current regulations, Institutional Review Board requirements related to human subjects protection issues. Requirements: K30 training grant or enrollment in degree program with clinical research project.

Repeatable.

173:320 Teaching in Epidemiology 3 s.h.

173:340 Epidemiology III: Theories 3 s.h.
How epidemiology fits into the wider context of scientific inquiry. Offered fall semesters of odd years. Prerequisites: 171:241, 173:140, and 173:240.

Graduate degrees: M.H.A.; Ph.D. in Health Services and Policy
Web site: http://www.public-health.uiowa.edu/hmp

The Department of Health Management and Policy educates health care professionals to assume leadership roles in an increasingly complex and dynamic health care system. Graduates hold key executive, academic, research, government, and consulting positions in all areas of health management and policy, both in the United States and abroad.

Graduate Programs

- Master of Health Administration
- Doctor of Philosophy in health services and policy

The department offers joint M.H.A. degree programs with the Tippie College of Business, the College of Law, and the Graduate College's School of Urban and Regional Planning; see "Joint M.H.A. Degrees" below. It also offers the policy subtrack for the Master of Public Health; see "M.P.H. Subtrack" below.

The department's degree programs rank among the foremost in the field. The M.H.A. is accredited by the Commission on Accreditation of Healthcare Management Education.

Master of Health Administration

The Master of Health Administration requires 60 s.h. of graduate credit earned in two academic years of full-time study. The program prepares students for a wide variety of positions in health care management. It is designed to provide a comprehensive understanding of issues encountered by health care delivery organizations, and strong business skills. Graduates are well prepared to advance to senior executive roles in a variety of health care organizations.

Students work with their advisors to create a plan of study that incorporates required and elective course work that supports their career goals in areas such as operations management, managed care, or financial management. Required courses in management, economics, law, managerial finance, and financial accounting focus on health care applications. Students also may take course work in other University of Iowa departments and programs, such as business, urban and regional planning, and aging studies.
During the first year, students are introduced to the social, political, economic, and financial environments of health care organizations. The concepts, tools, and techniques necessary for effective management also are presented. During the second year, courses focus on in-depth health care applications of management concepts that integrate prior course work and develop skills in areas relating to students’ special interests and career objectives.

Transfer credit and course waivers may be accepted, but all students are expected to complete a minimum of 54 s.h. at The University of Iowa during their course of study.

The Master of Health Administration requires the following course work.

ELECTIVES

Students choose 10 s.h. of elective course work, which must include 6 s.h. earned in Department of Health Management and Policy courses.

Summer Internships, Fellowships, Residencies

The department facilitates placement of M.H.A. students in required summer internships between the first and second years of study. Internships offer opportunities for practical experience interacting with executives in a health care setting. Internships are full-time positions that usually last 10-12 weeks and may carry up to 3 s.h. of credit. Students normally receive a salary or stipend, and in some cases, assistance with living arrangements.

Most M.H.A. students complement their academic training with a postgraduate fellowship or residency. Such experiences provide opportunities to observe, develop, and demonstrate management skills and to develop connections with colleagues. The department takes an active role in helping students identify and secure fellowship and residency positions.

Joint M.H.A. Degrees

The Department of Health Management and Policy offers joint degree programs with the Tippie College of Business, the College of Law, and the Graduate College’s School of Urban and Regional Planning. Students interested in combining an M.H.A. with a master’s or professional degree in another field should discuss their plans with both academic units and indicate their interest when they apply to the M.H.A. program.

Joint M.H.A./M.B.A.

The joint Master of Health Administration/Master of Business Administration requires a minimum of 75 s.h. of graduate credit. The program combines the traditional strengths of health management and policy with additional course work in management. Students usually complete the program in two and a half to three years. Separate application to each degree program is required; applicants must be admitted to both programs before they may be admitted to the joint degree program. For information about the M.B.A., see Master of Business Administration Program (p. 852) (Tippie College of Business) in the Catalog.

Joint M.H.A./J.D.

The joint Master of Health Administration/Juris Doctor requires 126 of postbaccalaureate credit. The program is highly individualized, allowing students to gain training in both health care management and law. Students usually complete the program in four years; they enroll only in law courses during the first year. Separate application to each degree program is required; applicants must be admitted to both programs before they may be admitted to the joint degree program. For information about the J.D., see College of Law (p. 1215) in the Catalog.

Joint M.H.A./M.A. or M.S. in Urban and Regional Planning

The joint Master of Health Administration/Master of Arts or Master of Science in urban and regional planning requires 76 s.h. of graduate credit. The program gives students the opportunity to acquire expertise in community and health planning and prepares them to develop public policy alternatives that help improve the quality of life in cities and throughout regions. Students usually complete the program in three years. Separate application to each degree program is required; applicants must be admitted to both programs before they may be admitted to the joint degree program. For information about the graduate programs in planning, see Urban and Regional Planning (p. 1205) (Graduate College) in the Catalog.

M.P.H. Subtrack

The Department of Health Management and Policy offers the policy subtrack for the Master of Public Health. The subtrack prepares individuals for careers in health policy analysis, system and organizational planning, and program evaluation. Graduates find positions in federal, state, and local government as well as in professional associations and private agencies. See Master of Public Health Program (p. 1486) in the Catalog.

Doctor of Philosophy

The Doctor of Philosophy program in health services and policy requires a minimum of 77 s.h. of graduate credit, which may include up to 30 s.h. earned for a master’s degree. The program, established in 1950, was the nation’s first doctoral program in health care management. It prepares students for careers in health services research, education, and policy leadership in universities, government agencies, and health organizations.

The program is oriented toward applied, interdisciplinary research. Students develop mastery of theories and research methodologies necessary to study the complex American health system. Students work closely with faculty mentors on research projects and develop research design and methodology skills through course work and an apprenticeship model of training.

The program’s faculty members are committed to interdisciplinary scholarly inquiry and research. Individual plans of study allow students to prepare for specific careers, and small class size encourages frequent student-faculty interaction, including participation in research projects as well as scholarly publications.

The Doctor of Philosophy in health services and policy requires the following work.

CORE COURSES

Ph.D. students take course work in core content areas covering health care systems, health economics, health outcomes, and health policy. Courses in research design and statistical analysis are required. Credit may be awarded for guided and independent research project work. Students may waive specific courses, depending on their background.

173:140 Epidemiology I: Principles 3 s.h.
171:161 Introduction to Biostatistics 3 s.h.
171:162 Design and Analysis of Biomedical Studies 3 s.h.

174:270 Seminar in Health Research and Instruction 3 s.h.
650:270 Principles of Scholarly Integrity 1 s.h.

EXAMINATIONS

All Ph.D. students must pass a preliminary examination that tests the student’s mastery of core material covered during the first year in the department, including American health systems and health services research methods.

Students take the comprehensive examination at or near the end of their formal course work. The comprehensive exam focuses on the student's specific area of research and theoretical interest.

DISSERTATION

Doctoral candidates prepare dissertations based on original research that tests, extends, or applies concepts or principles to a problem in health care. Students may choose to complete a traditional dissertation or may complete a dissertation based on three publishable papers.

Admission

Applicants to the M.H.A. program must hold a bachelor's degree from an accredited college or university. No specific undergraduate major is required, but prospective applicants are strongly advised to complete introductory courses in accounting, economics, and statistics and to gain facility in using spreadsheet and presentation software. A cumulative g.p.a. of at least 3.00 is expected. M.H.A. program applicants must submit scores on the Graduate Record Exam (GRE) General Test (a combined verbal and quantitative score of 1100 or above is preferred) or the Graduate Management Admission Test (a score of 600 or above is preferred); official MCAT, VAT, LSAT, or DAT scores are accepted in place of GRE or GMAT scores. Previous work experience in health care is desirable.

Applicants to the Ph.D. program must have a bachelor's or master's degree. Experience in health care and a master's degree in health administration, public health, or health planning are excellent preparation for the program. A graduate degree in social science, management, economics, or law is acceptable, depending on the applicant's background and career goals. A cumulative g.p.a. of at least 3.25 is usually required. All Ph.D. applicants must submit GRE scores (a combined verbal and quantitative score of 1100 or above is preferred).

All applicants must submit academic transcripts, a resume, three letters of recommendation, and a statement of objectives form (contact the Department of Health Management and Policy).

Applicants whose first language is not English and who do not hold a baccalaureate or more advanced degree from an accredited college or university in the United States, the United Kingdom, Canada (except Quebec), Australia, or New Zealand must score at least 600 (paper-based), 250 (computer-based), or 100 (Internet-based) on the Test of English as a Foreign Language (TOEFL). Applicants who score 550-599 (paper-based), 213-249 (computer-based), or 81-99 (Internet-based) are required to take English fluency courses. Applicants who score below those ranges are not considered for admission.

Applicants must meet the admission requirements of the Graduate College; see the Manual of Rules and Regulations of the Graduate College or the Graduate (p. 1117) College section of the Catalog.

Students begin the program in fall semester. Campus visits are encouraged, and personal interviews are required before admission. The admissions committee conducts telephone interviews with applicants unable to interview on campus.

Financial Support

A variety of financial assistance is available, including scholarships and awards, student loans, and research assistantships. Every effort is made to provide financial support to students who demonstrate need and maintain satisfactory academic standards. Some awards are offered in recognition of outstanding academic performance and experience, regardless of need.

Research assistantships generally are awarded on the basis of student merit and the department's need. Assistantships afford valuable experience in health services research and management projects. Research assistants work 10-20 hours per week and must apply for reappointment each year. Research assistantships provide a stipend and some tuition assistance and entitle students to resident tuition.

Opportunities also exist for part-time employment both on and off campus. For information and financial aid application forms, contact the University’s Office of Student Financial Aid.

Resources

The Center for Health Policy and Research, the research arm of the Department of Health Management and Policy, is a University-wide interdisciplinary research facility. Faculty members from the Carver College of Medicine, the Tippie College of Business, and the Colleges of Dentistry, Liberal Arts and Sciences, Nursing, Pharmacy, and Public Health serve as investigators in a variety of studies at the center. Graduate students assist with ongoing research projects.

Primary project funding for the center comes from the National Institute of Health (NIH), the State of Iowa, and the Agency for Healthcare Research and Quality (AHRQ) as well as from foundations and private organizations.
The center also sponsors educational activities and promotes collaboration among health organizations through frequent exchanges with professional and provider associations, policy and planning groups, insurance organizations, health delivery institutions, and other members of the health services research community.

Alumni Relations

An active alumni association with more than 1,000 members supports the program in a number of ways, including scholarships, consultation on curriculum, continuing education, research, and fund development. Alumni serve as visiting faculty, consultants, mentors, and preceptors for summer internships, residencies, and fellowships. The alumni association also provides a network for graduates entering the profession.

Graduates maintain their Iowa connection and learn about news of their classmates, the department, and faculty members and students through the Alumni Newsletter.

The Department of Health Management and Policy and its alumni association jointly sponsor the Annual Iowa Healthcare Executive Symposium each fall. Renowned speakers from across the country present a variety of symposium topics. Health care leaders, alumni, educators, students, and friends of the department attend the symposium, which offers students a high quality educational experience in addition to the opportunity to network with faculty and alumni.

Courses

174:100 Executive Seminar Series 0 s.h.
Issues in the health care industry; presentations by executives from health care fields including academic health centers, multihospital systems, government agencies, community hospitals, and health insurance industry.

174:102 Introduction to the U.S. Health Care System 3 s.h.
The U.S. health care system; socioeconomic, political, and environmental forces that influence the organization, financing, and delivery of personal and public health services; health services, policy, concepts, terminology.

174:144 Medicare and Medicaid Policy 3 s.h.
Health policies most pertinent to Americans over age of 65. Same as 153:144.

174:200 Introduction to Health Care Organization and Policy 3 s.h.
Organization of U.S. health care system, health policies that shape its development; historical, socioeconomic, political, environmental forces that influence the organization, financing, and delivery of personal and public health services; health services, policy concepts, and terminology, including health determinants, access to care, system integration, policy development, federalism.

174:201 Health Care Management 3 s.h.
Application of basic management principles such as leadership, goal setting, decision making, human resource management, to health care organizations.

174:202 Hospital Organization and Management 2-3 s.h.
Role of hospitals, governance, organizational structure, medical staff organization, departmental operations. Prerequisites: 174:200 and 174:201.

174:203 Strategic Planning and Marketing 3 s.h.
Strategy in health care including role of mission, vision, values, environmental analysis, strategic alternatives, organizational design, and evaluation of strategic decisions. Prerequisites: 174:201.

174:204 Quantitative Management in Health Care 2-3 s.h.
Quantitative analysis techniques used by managers in health care settings to assist with planning, decision making, resource allocation.

174:205 Issues in Health Management and Policy 3 s.h.
Integration and application of theories, concepts, principles; case studies. Prerequisites: 174:201 and 174:203.

Master of Public Health Program

Director
Mary L. Aquilino

Graduate degree: M.P.H.
Web site: http://www.public-health.uiowa.edu/mph/

The Master of Public Health is recognized as the primary professional degree in public health. The objective of Iowa's M.P.H. program is to provide education and practical training in public health to students who will be leaders in their respective communities. The program is appropriate for individuals who already have professional experience and/or training in public health as well as for those whose expertise lies outside of public health.

The Master of Public Health program is offered by the College of Public Health; the degree is awarded by the Graduate College.

Graduate Program

- Master of Public Health

Students may earn the M.P.H. as a single degree, or they may pursue one of several joint degree programs. The College of Public Health offers joint M.P.H./professional degree programs with the Carver College of Medicine and the Colleges of Law and Pharmacy. It also offers two programs in collaboration with the College of Veterinary Science at Iowa State University. See "M.P.H. for Practicing Veterinarians" and descriptions of the joint degree programs later in this section.

Master of Public Health

The Master of Public Health requires 42-59 s.h. of graduate credit, depending on the student's choice of specialization. Students must choose one of seven subtracks: biostatistics, community and behavioral health, epidemiology, ergonomics, health communication, occupational and environmental health, or policy.

Degree requirements include a core course in public health practice and in each of the five core disciplines of public health (epidemiology, biostatistics, environmental health, health policy and management, and social and behavioral sciences); a practicum; a set of content-specific required courses; and a set of content-specific electives. Students in the epidemiology subtrack and the occupational and environmental health subtrack also must complete a bioscience course.

A final written report with oral presentation or a poster presentation related to the practicum constitutes the final examination.

All M.P.H. students complete the course work listed under "Common Requirements." In addition, each student completes the course work listed for his or her chosen subtrack.

Common Requirements

The following course work is required for all M.P.H. students. Students must earn a B-minus or higher in each core course. Students may repeat courses to achieve this standard.

CORE COURSES

All of these (15 s.h.):

- 170:101 Introduction to Public Health 3 s.h.
- 171:161 Introduction to Biostatistics (biostatistics subtrack students must substitute 171:201 for 4 s.h.) 3 s.h.
- 172:101 Introduction to Health Promotion and Disease Prevention 3 s.h.
- 173:140 Epidemiology I: Principles 3 s.h.
- 175:197 Environmental Health 3 s.h.

One of these (3 s.h.):

- 174:102 Introduction to the U.S. Health Care System 3 s.h.
- 174:200 Introduction to Health Care Organization and Policy 3 s.h.

PRACTICUM

The practicum is a fieldwork experience in which students show proficiency in applying academic principles in community settings. There are many practicum opportunities for M.P.H. students in Iowa and surrounding states; the college's Institute for Public Health Practice coordinates placements. The practicum is the culmination of the M.P.H. program.

Students must choose an approved topic and complete the six core courses before registering for and beginning the practicum. A final written report with an oral presentation or a poster presentation is required. The practicum constitutes the final examination for the M.P.H.

- 170:299 M.P.H. Practicum Experience 3 s.h.

Biostatistics Subtrack

The Master of Public Health with biostatistics subtrack requires 44 s.h. of graduate credit.
The subtrack is offered by the Department of Biostatistics (p. 1450) (College of Public Health).

The subtrack focuses on application of biostatistical methods to public health and biomedical sciences, and applications of methodology for design and analysis of research investigations in the health sciences. It also provides fundamental training in the public health sciences, core biostatistical theory, and core biostatistical methods vital for health science investigations. Graduates of the program are prepared for work as statistical consultants and data analysts for public health projects.

Applicants to the biostatistics subtrack should have a bachelor’s degree or equivalent in the biological, mathematical, or physical sciences. Applicants should have mathematics training in methods and techniques of single variable and multivariable differential and integral calculus, and in linear algebra. They also should be competent in at least one computer language, preferably FORTRAN, Pascal, or C.

Applicants with deficiencies in any of these areas may apply for admission and make up the deficiencies during the first year of graduate study. The following University of Iowa courses provide training at the required level.

Community and Behavioral Health Subtrack

The Master of Public Health with community and behavioral health subtrack requires 42 s.h. of graduate credit. The subtrack is offered by the Department of Community and Behavioral Health (p. 1458) (College of Public Health).

The subtrack prepares public health practitioners for a variety of positions related to community development, health program implementation, and health education. Students learn how to design, implement, and evaluate evidence-based interventions directed toward identified public health problems in populations.

A bachelor’s degree in the social and behavioral sciences is good preparation for this program, but students come from a variety of educational backgrounds. Preference is given to applicants who have professional experience.

In addition to the M.P.H. course work listed under "Common Requirements" above, the community and behavioral health subtrack requires the following courses.

Epidemiology Subtrack

The Master of Public Health with epidemiology subtrack requires 42 s.h. of graduate credit. The subtrack is offered by the Department of Epidemiology (p. 1466) (College of Public Health).

The subtrack focuses on fundamental epidemiological concepts and methods and provides training in the use of public health data and methods for disease assessment and in methods for evaluating the need and outcome of programs and interventions. Graduates of the program work in public health departments and other health care settings.

Epidemiology subtrack students are required to attend departmental seminars and journal club. They also must present one scientific poster at an international, national, regional, state, university, or departmental poster session.

In addition to the M.P.H. course work listed under "Common Requirements" above, the epidemiology subtrack requires the following courses.

Students who already have completed a course equivalent to one of these bioscience courses may substitute an additional elective.

ELECTIVES

Students earn at least 2 s.h. in elective courses (or 5 s.h. if they substitute an elective for the bioscience requirement). At least 3 s.h. of elective credit must be earned in courses offered by the Department of Epidemiology (prefix 173) or in one of the following biostatistics courses.

Ergonomics Subtrack

The Master of Public Health with ergonomics subtrack requires 42 s.h. of graduate credit. The subtrack is offered by the Department of Occupational and Environmental Health (p. 1495) (College of Public Health).

The subtrack takes advantage of interdisciplinary faculty strengths in the Colleges of Public Health and Engineering and the Carver College of Medicine. Ergonomics students gain a thorough understanding of workplace physical environments that contribute to musculoskeletal injuries and illness. They also acquire knowledge of engineering and administrative methods to control workplace risk factors. The program prepares students for work in industry and government agencies, as well as for further academic training.

In addition to the M.P.H. course work listed under "Common Requirements" above, the ergonomics subtrack requires the following courses.

SUBTRACK CORE

All of these (16 s.h.):

- 056:144 Human Factors 3 s.h.
- 056:147 Ergonomics 3 s.h.
- 175:180 Occupational and Environmental Health Seminar 1 s.h.
- 175:190 Occupational Ergonomics I 3 s.h.
- 175:230 Occupational Health 3 s.h.
- 175:295 Clinical Ergonomics 3 s.h.
- 650:270 Principles of Scholarly Integrity 0-1 s.h.

ELECTIVES

Ergonomics subtrack students earn 5 s.h. in elective courses. Electives may be chosen from the following list or may include a related course approved by the student’s advisor.

- 175:192 Occupational Safety 3 s.h.
- 175:231 Industrial Hygiene Fundamentals 3 s.h.
- 175:251 Injury Epidemiology 3 s.h.
- 175:253 Epidemiology of Occupational Injuries 3 s.h.

SUBTRACK CORE: HEALTH COMMUNICATION

Four of these (12 s.h.):

- 036:371 Communication Theory 3 s.h.
- 172:140/019:160 Media and Health 3 s.h.
- 172:185 Communicating with the Community 3 s.h.
- 172:240/036:270 Health Communication 3 s.h.
- 172:242 Persuasion and Health 3 s.h.
- 172:246/036:379 Health Communication Campaigns 3 s.h.

SUBTRACK CORE: COMMUNITY AND BEHAVIORAL HEALTH

Three of these (9 s.h.):

- 044:106 Foundations of GIS 3 s.h.
- 172:106 Designing and Implementing Interventions 3 s.h.
- 172:130 Social Determinants of Health 3 s.h.
- 172:135 Health Disparities and Cultural Competence 3 s.h.
- 172:150 Health Behavior and Health Education 3 s.h.
- 172:181 Evaluation I: Theory and Applications 3 s.h.
- 172:183 Qualitative Research for Public Health 3 s.h.
- 172:202/113:202 Ethnographic Field Methods 3 s.h.

Health Communication Subtrack

The Master of Public Health with health communication subtrack requires 42 s.h. of graduate credit. The subtrack is offered by the Department of Community and Behavioral Health (p. 1458) (College of Public Health).

The subtrack provides opportunities for students to develop knowledge and skill in designing, evaluating, and implementing effective communication strategies and messages that speak to the health needs of diverse audiences. The program addresses clinician-patient interaction, family communication, group and organizational communication, and mass media and web-based campaigns. The M.P.H. may be of interest to clinicians, such as physicians, nurses, pharmacists, and dentists, as well as other professionals who do not wish to earn a Ph.D.

In addition to the M.P.H. course work listed under "Common Requirements" above, the health communications subtrack requires the following courses.

SUBTRACK CORE

All of these (18-22 s.h.):
Occupational and Environmental Health Seminar

Occupational and environmental health courses not already listed, or other approved courses

Bioscience—one of these (3-4 s.h.):

- 069:133 Introduction to Human Pathology for Graduate Students 4 s.h.
- 069:270 Pathogenesis of Major Human Diseases 3 s.h.

Students who already have completed a course equivalent to one of these bioscience courses may substitute an additional elective.

Policy Subtrack

The Master of Public Health with policy subtrack requires 59 s.h. of graduate credit. The subtrack is offered by the Department of Health Management and Policy (p. 1478) (College of Public Health).

The subtrack offers course work and applied learning experiences that prepare students for careers in health policy analysis, system and organizational planning, and program evaluation. Graduates of the program find positions in federal, state, and local government; professional associations; and private agencies. Varied academic backgrounds are appropriate preparation for this program, including business, liberal arts and sciences, and the health professions.

In addition to the M.P.H. course work listed under "Common Requirements" above, the policy and administration subtrack requires the following courses.

SUBTRACK CORE

All of these:

- 174:144 Medicare and Medicaid Policy 3 s.h.
- 174:212 Health Economics I 3 s.h.
- 174:217 Health Insurance and Managed Care 3 s.h.
- 174:221 Evaluation and Outcomes in Health Care 2 s.h.
- 174:223 Seminar in Health Care Ethics 2 s.h.
- 174:237 Legal Aspects of Health and Medical Care 3 s.h.
- 174:242 Federalism and Health Policy 3 s.h.
- 174:243 Health Policy 3 s.h.
- 174:245 Seminar in Health Policy 3 s.h.

ELECTIVES

At least 6 s.h. chosen from these:

- 030:113 American State Politics 3 s.h.
- 030:120 Public Administration and Bureaucratic Politics 3 s.h.
- 030:125 Interest Groups 3 s.h.
- 030:126 American Public Policy 3 s.h.
- 030:150 Public Policy Around the World 3 s.h.
- 030:151 Political Leadership 3 s.h.
- 030:152 The Legislative Process 3 s.h.
- 030:153 The Judicial Process 3 s.h.
- 030:200 Introduction to Political Analysis 4 s.h.
- 030:310 Modeling American Politics 4 s.h.
- 030:315 The Presidency 4 s.h.
- 030:319 Problems in American Politics 4 s.h.
- 030:339 Problems in Political Theory 4 s.h.
- 030:352 Legislative Behavior 4 s.h.
- 091:261 Health Law 3 s.h.
- 091:650 Law and Colonialism 3 s.h.

Policy courses not already listed in the required section, or other approved courses.

M.P.H. for Practicing Veterinarians

The Master of Public Health for practicing veterinarians requires a minimum of 42 s.h. of graduate credit. The program is presented through a collaboration between the University of Iowa College of Public Health and the College of Veterinary Medicine at Iowa State University and is offered primarily by distance learning. It enables students to prepare for new career opportunities and equips them to respond to public health challenges such as zoonotic diseases, food security and foodborne illnesses, bioterrorism, and environmental health.

Students participate in two summer institutes, one on each campus during consecutive summers (two weeks in May and June); the rest of the program is Internet-based, so students may complete requirements at times that fit their schedules. Specific courses are required each semester of the program.

The M.P.H. for practicing veterinarians requires the following course work.

M.P.H. COMMON REQUIREMENTS

Students must complete courses listed under "Common Requirements" (core courses and practicum) for the Master of Public Health; see the beginning of this Catalog section.
ADDITIONAL REQUIRED COURSES

All of these (21 s.h.):

- 170:175 Public Health Emergency Preparedness for Veterinarians and Other Public Health Disciplines 2 s.h.
- 173:120 Principles of Public Health Informatics 3 s.h.
- 173:132 Exotic and Emerging Diseases of Animals 1 s.h.
- 173:147 Applied Veterinary Epidemiology/Biostatistics 3 s.h.
- 173:155 Diagnostic Microbiology for Epidemiology (offered by distance education) 3 s.h.
- 173:159 Applied Infectious Disease Epidemiology 2 s.h.
- 175:209 Rural Health and Agricultural Medicine (offered by distance education) 3 s.h.
- 175:211 Veterinary Public Health: The Profession 1 s.h.

Joint M.P.H./D.V.M.

The joint Master of Public Health/Doctor of Veterinary Medicine is offered by the University of Iowa College of Public Health and the College of Veterinary Medicine at Iowa State University (ISU). It requires a minimum of 42 s.h. in addition to the requirements of the D.V.M. degree (see Doctor of Veterinary Medicine in the Iowa State University catalog). The program prepares students for work as state veterinarians, as college and university faculty members, in local and state departments of public health, in the Public Health Commissions Corp., in state agricultural departments, and for public health positions in the military.

Separate application to each degree program is required; applicants must be admitted to both programs before they may be admitted to the joint degree program. For M.P.H. admission requirements, see "Admission" later in this section.

The joint M.P.H./D.V.M. requires the following course work.

M.P.H. COMMON REQUIREMENTS

Students must complete courses listed under "Common Requirements" (core courses and practicum) for the Master of Public Health; see the beginning of this Catalog section.

M.P.H. ELECTIVES

Students must earn at least 9 s.h. from the following courses.

173:130 Food Safety 3 s.h.
173:147 Applied Veterinary Epidemiology/Biostatistics 3 s.h.
173:155 Diagnostic Microbiology for Epidemiology (offered by distance education) 3 s.h.
173:159 Applied Infectious Disease Epidemiology 2 s.h.
173:255 Epidemiology of Infectious Diseases (offered by distance education) 3 s.h.
175:170 Injury and Violence Prevention (offered by distance education) 3 s.h.
175:209 Rural Health and Agricultural Medicine (offered by distance education) 3 s.h.
175:210 Current Topics in Agricultural Health (offered by distance education) 0-1 s.h.
175:211 Veterinary Public Health: The Profession 1 s.h.

REQUIRED D.V.M. COURSES

All of these (ISU courses):

- Principles of Public Health (VMPM 388) 3 s.h.
- Small Animal Internal Medicine (VCS 436) 2 s.h.
- Infectious Diseases and Preventive Medicine (VMPM 437) 3 s.h.
- Pharmacology and Therapeutics (BMS 443) 3 s.h.
- Laboratories in Public Health (VMPM 486) 1 s.h.

Joint M.P.H./J.D.

The joint Master of Public Health/Juris Doctor requires a minimum of 42 s.h. of graduate credit in addition to the requirements of the J.D. degree. The program helps students develop special expertise in public health legal issues. It is designed to train qualified students for leadership roles in both the public and private sectors.

Separate application to each degree program is required; applicants must be admitted to both programs before they may be admitted to the joint degree program.

The joint M.P.H./J.D. requires the following course work.

M.P.H. COMMON REQUIREMENTS

Students must complete courses listed under "Common Requirements" (core courses and practicum) for the Master of Public Health; see the beginning of this Catalog section.

M.P.H. ELECTIVES

Students earn 9 s.h. in elective courses chosen from one of the following public health areas: aging studies; biostatistics; community and behavioral health; epidemiology; global health; health policy; maternal, child, and family health; nutrition and exercise; or occupational and environmental health. Students choose electives in consultation with their advisors in the College of Law and the College of Public Health.

J.D. REQUIREMENTS

Students in the joint M.P.H./J.D. program must complete the curriculum of the J.D. program; see College of Law (p. 1215) in the Catalog. Students must be enrolled in the College of Law to take College of Law courses.

COURSES THAT COUNT TOWARD BOTH DEGREES

Students may count up to 12 s.h. earned in the following College of Law courses toward the M.P.H. degree.

- 091:204 Administrative Law 3 s.h.
- 091:250 Employment Law 2-3 s.h.
- 091:251 Topics in Employee Benefits Law arr.
- 091:255 Environmental Law 3 s.h.
- 091:261 Health Law 2-3 s.h.
- 091:262 Federal Regulations of Health Care Industry: Fraud and Abuse 2-3 s.h.
- 091:268 Family Law 3-4 s.h.
- 091:284 Insurance 1-3 s.h.
- 091:291 International Environmental Law 3 s.h.
- 091:292 Labor Law 3-4 s.h.
- 091:320 Nonprofit Organizational Effectiveness I 3 s.h.
- 091:322 Nonprofit Organizational Effectiveness II 3 s.h.
- 091:341 Managing National Security 1-3 s.h.
- 091:342 Negotiations 2-4 s.h.
- 091:354 State and Local Government 1-3 s.h.
- 091:409 Child and Family Advocacy Clinic arr.
- 091:455 Health Law and Policy Practicum 1-3 s.h.

M.P.H. COMMON REQUIREMENTS

Students must complete courses listed under "Common Requirements" (core courses and practicum) for the Master of Public Health; see the beginning of this Catalog section.

M.P.H. ELECTIVES

Students earn 9 s.h. in elective courses chosen from one of the following public health areas: biostatistics, community and behavioral health, epidemiology, health communication, health policy, occupational and environmental health. Students choose electives in consultation with their advisors in the Carver College of Medicine and the College of Public Health.

M.D. REQUIREMENTS

Students in the joint M.P.H./M.D. program must complete the curriculum of the M.D. program; see Doctor of Medicine (p. 1300) (Carver College of Medicine) in the Catalog.

COURSES THAT COUNT TOWARD BOTH DEGREES

Students may count up to 12 s.h. earned in the following M.D. courses toward the M.P.H. degree.

- 050:180 Community-Based Primary Care (up to 10 s.h.)
- 050:183 Healthcare Ethics, Law, and Policy 2 s.h.
- 078:101 Inpatient Internal Medicine arr.
- 078:102 Outpatient Internal Medicine 3-4 s.h.

Joint M.P.H./Pharm.D.

The joint Master of Public Health/Doctor of Pharmacy requires 42 s.h. of graduate credit in addition to the requirements of the Pharm.D. degree. The program helps students develop expertise in public health related to pharmacotherapy, health promotion, disease prevention, and medication safety.

Graduates of the program may work in areas of interest common to pharmacy and public health, such as spread and treatment of disease, community health, and immunology; bioterrorism, terrorism, and preparedness; genetics; insurance; managed care; family and juvenile health; and protection of special populations. Employment opportunities are available in hospitals and clinics and with health care providers; private practice; insurance and managed care organizations; local, county, state, and federal government; public health governmental agencies; and colleges and universities.
Separate application to each degree program is required; applicants must be admitted to both programs before they may be admitted to the joint degree program.

The joint M.P.H./Pharm.D. requires the following course work.

M.P.H. COMMON REQUIREMENTS

Students must complete courses listed under "Common Requirements" (core courses and practicum) for the Master of Public Health; see the beginning of this Catalog section.

M.P.H. ELECTIVES

Students select electives totaling 9 s.h. from one of the following public health areas: biostatistics, community and behavioral health, epidemiology, health communication, health policy, or occupational and environmental health. Electives are chosen in consultation with the student’s advisors in the Colleges of Pharmacy and Public Health.

PHARM.D. REQUIREMENTS

Students in the joint M.P.H./Pharm.D. program must complete the curriculum of the Pharm.D. program; see the College of Pharmacy (p. 1425) section of the Catalog. Students must be enrolled in the College of Pharmacy in order to take College of Pharmacy courses.

COURSES THAT COUNT TOWARD BOTH DEGREES

Students may count up to 12 s.h. earned in the following Pharm.D. courses toward the M.P.H. degree.

Admission

Applicants to the M.P.H. program must have successfully completed one semester each of college algebra and biology.

All M.P.H. applicants must submit a Graduate College application form, three letters of reference, a statement of purpose that describes their interest in public health and identifies a specialty area, and a résumé highlighting professional experience in public health or in nursing. They also must submit scores on the Graduate Record Exam (GRE) General Test, LSAT, DAT, VCAT, GMAT, or another professional placement exam; scores must be at or above the median scores for test takers applying to similar programs.

Applicants whose first language is not English and who do not hold a baccalaureate degree from an accredited college or university in the United States, the United Kingdom, Canada (except Quebec), Australia, or New Zealand must score at least 600 (paper-based), 250 (computer-based), or 100 (Internet-based) on the Test of English as a Foreign Language (TOEFL). Applicants who score 550-599 (paper-based), 213-249 (computer-based), or 81-99 (Internet-based) are required to take English fluency courses. Applicants who score below those ranges are not considered for admission.

Applicants must meet the admission requirements of the Graduate College; see the Manual of Rules and Regulations of the Graduate College or the Graduate (p. 1117) College section of the Catalog.

Students may enter the M.P.H. program in fall and summer. Application deadlines for fall entrance to the M.P.H. program are May 1 for U.S. citizens and permanent residents, April 1 for international applicants. Application deadlines for summer entrance are April 1 for U.S. citizens and permanent residents, March 15 for international applicants.

Application deadline for the M.P.H. for practicing veterinarians is March 1.

Students may enter the M.P.H. joint programs in fall, spring, and summer. Contact the individual joint programs for deadline information and see Admissions/Application Process on the Master of Public Health web site.

Financial Support

A limited number of modest tuition awards are available each year for M.P.H. students. For information on financing education through jobs, grants, and loans, contact the University’s Office of Student Financial Aid.
Courses

170:099 Fundamentals of Public Health 3 s.h.
Introduction to public health; emphasis on issues, challenges, achievements, careers; historical events that serve as a foundation for public health practice.

170:101 Introduction to Public Health 3 s.h.
Concepts, structures, and activities in public health practice. Offered fall semesters and summer sessions.

170:172 Independent Study in Public Health arr.
In-depth pursuit of an area of special interest in public health.

Community service learning experience directly related to goals and objectives of a specific public health course; faculty-guided planning and reflection.

170:175 Public Health Emergency Preparedness for Veterinarians and Other Public Health Disciplines 2 s.h.
Introduction to public health emergency preparedness for humans and animals; federal, state, local perspectives; preparing responders; preparedness information systems and communication techniques.

Graduate degrees: M.S., Ph.D. in Occupational and Environmental Health

Web site: http://www.public-health.uiowa.edu/oeh

The Department of Occupational and Environmental Health focuses on assessment of risk factors in the physical environment and their relationship to disease—particularly health problems of agricultural and industrial workers. Students are guided by faculty members whose research interests include rural health care delivery, agricultural health, environmental health, occupational medicine, occupational lung disease, mammalian toxicology, inhalation toxicology, ergonomics, indoor air quality, occupational injury, injury epidemiology, injury prevention programs, aerosol physics, air and water quality, environmental chemistry, analytical toxicology, and environmental health in developing countries.

Graduate Programs

- Master of Science in occupational and environmental health
- Doctor of Philosophy in occupational and environmental health

The department offers a joint master's degree program with the Graduate College's School of Urban and Regional Planning; see "Joint M.S./M.A. or M.S. in Urban and Regional Planning" below. It also offers two subtracks for the Master of Public Health: the ergonomics subtrack and the occupational and environmental health subtrack; see "M.P.H. Subtracks" below. In addition, it participates in the College of Public Health's graduate Certificate in Agricultural Safety and Health; see Agricultural Safety and Health (p. 1449) in the Catalog.

Individuals who are not enrolled in one of the department’s degree programs but wish to take courses offered by the department may apply for professional improvement status. The department also offers an occupational medicine residency training program.

Master of Science

The Master of Science program in occupational and environmental health requires a minimum of 38 s.h. of graduate credit. It is offered with two optional subtracks: agricultural safety and health and industrial hygiene. The M.S. with agricultural safety and health subtrack requires a minimum of 38 s.h. of graduate credit; the M.S. with industrial hygiene subtrack requires a minimum of 43 s.h. of graduate credit. All M.S. students are required to complete a thesis.

The M.S. in occupational and environmental health without a subtrack requires the following work.

ELECTIVES

Credit earned in elective courses and the thesis completes the 38 s.h. required for the degree. Agricultural safety and health subtrack students must complete elective course work from one of five focus areas. The amount of credit required varies by focus area, as follows.

- Industrial hygiene: 9 s.h.
- Ergonomics: 9 s.h.
- Occupational and environmental health: 9 s.h.
- Occupational epidemiology: 9 s.h.
- Occupational injury prevention: 8 s.h.

M.S. with Subtrack in Industrial Hygiene

The M.S. with subtrack in industrial hygiene requires a minimum of 43 s.h. of graduate credit. The program prepares students for careers in industrial hygiene as well as the broad field of occupational and environmental health. Career opportunities are available in health and safety departments of industries; in consulting firms; in academic institutions; and in local, state, and federal public health agencies.

The M.S. in occupational and environmental health with the industrial hygiene subtrack requires the following work.

SUBTRACK CORE
Students must complete all of the following courses.

175:231 Industrial Hygiene Fundamentals 3 s.h.
175:232 Assessing Physical Agent Hazards 3 s.h.
175:233 Control of Occupational Hazards 3 s.h.

A thesis is required. Students may earn a maximum of 6 s.h. for the thesis.

Joint M.S./M.A. or M.S. in Urban and Regional Planning

The joint Master of Science in occupational and environmental health/Master of Arts or Master of Science in urban and regional planning requires 65 s.h. of graduate credit. Separate application to each degree program is required; applicants must be admitted to both programs before they may be admitted to the joint degree program. For information about the graduate programs in planning, see Urban and Regional Planning (p. 1205) (Graduate College) in the Catalog.

M.P.H. Subtracks

The Department of Occupational and Environmental Health offers two subtracks for the Master of Public Health: the ergonomics subtrack and the occupational and environmental health subtrack.

The ergonomics subtrack focuses on understanding how workplace environments contribute to musculoskeletal injuries and illness and on control of workplace risk factors. Graduates are prepared to work in industry and government agencies or pursue further academic training.

The occupational and environmental health subtrack provides a broad perspective on public health and career preparation for a variety of professional positions in occupational and environmental health.

For detailed information about the M.P.H. degree, see Master of Public Health Program (p. 1486) in the Catalog.

Doctor of Philosophy

The Doctor of Philosophy program in occupational and environmental health requires 72 s.h. of graduate credit. The program prepares students for professional and academic careers in environmental and occupational health. It is offered with two optional subtracks: agricultural safety and health, and industrial hygiene.

All doctoral students must complete a dissertation—a substantial scholarly treatise.

The Ph.D. in occupational and environmental health without a subtrack requires the following work.

Ph.D. with Subtrack in Agricultural Safety and Health

The Ph.D. with subtrack in agricultural safety and health prepares doctoral students for academic, research, and policy-making careers in occupational and environmental health, with specialty in agricultural safety and health.

The Ph.D. in occupational and environmental health with the agricultural safety and health subtrack requires the following work.

SUBTRACK CORE

Students must complete all of the following courses.

175:196 Agricultural Safety: Theories and Practice                        | 2 s.h.  |
175:209 Rural Health and Agricultural Medicine                            | 3 s.h.  |

ELECTIVES

Agricultural safety and health subtrack students must complete elective course work from one of five focus areas. The amount of credit required varies by focus area, as follows.

Industrial hygiene: 24 s.h.
Ergonomics: 15 s.h.
Occupational and environmental health: 24 s.h.
Occupational epidemiology: 11 s.h.
Occupational injury prevention: 11 s.h.

Admission

The occupational and environmental health faculty takes several factors into consideration when evaluating applications for admission, including Graduate Record Exam (GRE) General Test scores, grade-point averages, letters of recommendation, intent and motivation for graduate study, and research interests. A student with deficiencies in one area may be admitted if all other components of his or her application are very strong.

All M.P.H., M.S., and Ph.D. program applicants must hold a baccalaureate degree and have a cumulative g.p.a. of at least 3.00 (M.P.H. and M.S. applicants) or at least 3.25 (Ph.D. applicants). All applicants must have taken the GRE General Test. A GRE score of 1050 or higher (verbal plus quantitative) is recommended for master's applicants, 1100 or higher for doctoral applicants. For applicants who have not taken the GRE, the department considers scores from other standardized tests, such as the Medical College Admission Test (MCAT).

Applicants whose first language is not English and who do not hold a baccalaureate degree from an accredited college or university in the United States, the United Kingdom, Canada (except Quebec), Australia, or New Zealand must score at least 600 (paper-based), 250 (computer-based), or 100 (Internet-based) on the Test of English as a Foreign Language (TOEFL). Applicants who score 550-599 (paper-based), 213-249 (computer-based), or 81-99 (Internet-based) are required to take English fluency courses. Applicants who score below those ranges are not considered for admission.

Undergraduate preparation for M.P.H. and M.S. applicants must include course work in mathematics, biology, chemistry, and either physical sciences or engineering, depending on the applicant’s chosen specialty area.

M.S. applicants who intend to pursue the industrial hygiene subtrack also must have taken physics and mathematics through calculus; course work in biology, microbiology, and computer programming is highly recommended.

Completion of the M.S. program before beginning Ph.D. study is recommended. Undergraduate preparation for doctoral applicants must include at least two semesters of chemistry, one semester of physics, and one semester of calculus. Course work in biological sciences, microbiology, and computer programming are highly recommended, particularly for students interested in some specialized areas.

Applicants must meet the admission requirements of the Graduate College; see the Manual of Rules. and Regulations of the Graduate College or the Graduate College section of the Catalog.

Application deadlines for fall entrance for graduate study are July 1 for U.S. citizens and permanent residents, April 1 for international applicants. Application deadlines for spring entrance are December 1 for U.S. citizens and permanent residents, October 1 for international applicants.

Financial Support

Several graduate student awards, including tuition and stipend support, are available for individuals interested in industrial hygiene, agricultural safety and health, ergonomics, occupational epidemiology, or occupational injury prevention. Both stipend and tuition support are available for all occupational medicine residents. Full-time graduate students in good academic standing (those not admitted on conditional status) are eligible for a stipend and tuition support. All other students are eligible for tuition support only; requests are considered case-by-case. All recipients must be U.S. citizens or permanent residents.

Postdoctoral Positions

The College of Public Health’s Environmental Health Sciences Training Program offers postdoctoral positions in environmental health/toxicology. Appointments are made for two years with the possibility of an additional year. Applicants must be U.S. citizens or permanent residents.

Residency Program

In cooperation with University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics, the department offers residency training in occupational medicine for physicians seeking specialty training in occupational medicine. For information contact the director of the Occupational Medicine Residency Program.

Facilities and Resources

The Department of Occupational and Environmental Health is housed in the Institute for Rural and Environmental Health on the University of Iowa Research Park campus. College of Public Health-based laboratory facilities give researchers and students access to cutting-edge technologies for the study of occupational and environmental health.

The Inhalation Toxicology Facility (ITF) provides a full array of inhalation toxicology, aerosol science, and bioaerosol assay services. A primary focus of the ITF is the study of toxicants found in the agricultural environment and related exposure situations. The facility is particularly well-equipped for studying organic dusts and bioaerosols.

The Occupational Hygiene Laboratory (OHL) provides expertise and equipment for exposure assessment in occupational settings. The OHL offers a range of sample collection capabilities and an extensive inventory of sampling equipment. The field and laboratory services available through the laboratory support exposure-response studies and control technology development studies in a variety of occupational arenas, including agriculture, construction, and indoor environments (home and office).

A computer laboratory is available for student use, and a library collection is located in the Institute for Rural and Environmental Health.

Heartland Center for Occupational Health and Safety

The Heartland Center for Occupational Health and Safety, one of 16 education and research centers funded by the National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health (NIOSH), provides training, education, and outreach. Its program areas are occupational health nursing, industrial hygiene, occupational medicine, ergonomics, agricultural safety and health, occupational injury prevention research, occupational epidemiology, and continuing education/outreach.

Courses

175:101 Health, Work, and the Environment
3 s.h.

Current topics in occupational and environmental health; how the United States protects workers, protects people from environmental agents, and reduces environmental harm. Same as 044:174.

175:111 International Health
3 s.h.

Urgent health problems in the developing world and among disadvantaged populations in developed countries; biological, social, cultural, political aspects of international health problems; applications of research methods from epidemiology, environmental health, social sciences. Same as 152:111, 173:111.

175:170 Injury and Violence Prevention
3 s.h.

Theory, research, and practice of injury control; unintentional and intentional injuries; local, national, international injury issues. Same as 173:170.
175:171 Problems in Occupational and Environmental Health
Didactic material in occupational and environmental health; may include tutorial, seminar, faculty-directed independent work (e.g., literature search, project, short research project).

175:172 Independent Study in Occupational and Environmental Health
In-depth pursuit of an area in occupational and environmental health requiring substantial creativity and independence.

175:175 Research Methods in Disaster Studies
3 s.h.
Epidemiologic study of disasters and their health consequences; research to identify and reduce health effects, research in context of response and preparedness. Same as 173:175.

175:180 Occupational and Environmental Health Seminar
0-1 s.h.
Contemporary topics in occupational health, agricultural and comparative medicine, environmental health.

175:182 Statistics for Experimenters
3 s.h.
Application of statistical techniques to evaluate data derived from experimental samples designs; use of spreadsheets, statistical software; design and analysis of experiments; regression analysis; model building; practical applications.

175:185 Occupational Health Research Seminar
2 s.h.
Tools necessary for making critical assessment of published scientific research reports from a methodological perspective; examples from recently published research studies in occupational and environmental health. Corequisites: 171:161 and 173:140.

175:190 Occupational Ergonomics I
2-3 s.h.
Principles of ergonomics, with focus on physical capabilities of workers and their interactions with their work environment; physiological basis of work, patterns of work, occupational risk factors for musculoskeletal and neurovascular disorders, workplace and equipment design, integration of ergonomics in manufacturing processes.

175:192 Occupational Safety
3 s.h.
Principles and practices of occupational safety; applications in industrial and other occupational settings; interactions with other disciplines.

175:195 Global Environmental Health
2 s.h.
Current problems, including transboundary movement of pollutants, vectors of infectious agents, global warming and climatic change. Prerequisites: 175:111 or 175:197.

175:196 Agricultural Safety: Theories and Practice
2 s.h.
General theories and practice of injury prevention from varied fields, including industrial safety, engineering, regulation, education, epidemiology, social psychology; strategic application in agriculture.

175:197 Environmental Health
3 s.h.
Survey of the field; assessment of contemporary human health issues associated with biological, chemical, physical factors of environment; critical review of environmental factors that affect health; public policies governing recognition, intervention, control.

175:198 Solid and Hazardous Wastes
3 s.h.
Sources, characteristics, collection, disposal of solid and hazardous wastes; environmental impacts of hazardous waste management; resource recovery systems. Requirements: (for 053:158) 053:050; (for 175:198) 175:197. Same as 053:158.
175:201 Research in Occupational and Environmental Health
Research that may lead to a dissertation. Repeatable.

175:203 Preceptorship in Occupational and Environmental Health
Work experience using knowledge and skills acquired in the classroom; arranged in conjunction with departmental or collegiate activities or with governmental agencies or private industry. Repeatable.

175:209 Rural Health and Agricultural Medicine
Clinical orientation of specific health problems of rural residents, agricultural workers; rural health care delivery, socioeconomic issues in agriculture and their effects on health and safety of the agricultural population; occupational health problems, environmental health hazards in rural areas. Requirements: 173:140 or medicine enrollment.

175:210 Current Topics in Agricultural Health
Issues that affect the health of agricultural populations, such as agro-terrorism, antibiotic resistance, genetically modified organisms; current scientific literature.

175:211 Veterinary Public Health: The Profession
History and overview of veterinary public health and the American College of Veterinary Preventive Medicine (ACVPM); preparation for ACVPM board of certification.

175:220 Environmental and Occupational Epidemiology

175:221 Aerosol Technology
Particle statistics and physics of aerosols, including inertia, diffusion, nucleation, evaporation, condensation, optics, electrical properties; relationship to fields such as agriculture, nanotechnology, environmental and occupational health, atmospheric chemistry, drug delivery.

175:230 Occupational Health
Principles, practice of occupational medicine, fundamentals of industrial hygiene and safety, occupational health management, ergonomics, occupational health nursing. Offered fall semesters.

175:231 Industrial Hygiene Fundamentals
Principles, with emphasis on recognition of chemical health hazards, physical health hazards at work. Corequisites: 175:230, if not taken as a prerequisite.

175:232 Assessing Physical Agent Hazards
Basic principles of recognizing and evaluating hazards presented by physical agents in occupational environments. Prerequisites: 175:230.

175:233 Control of Occupational Hazards
Physical science concepts applied to control of occupational hazards ranging from dusts to mists to vapors; strategies, management issues, personal protective equipment, implementation skills; in-depth instruction on local exhaust ventilation system design. Prerequisites: 175:230 or 175:231.

175:234 Quantitative Exposure Assessment: Study Design and Evaluation
Principles of designing occupational and environmental exposure assessment studies, analyzing exposure data, and conducting exposure-response evaluations. Prerequisites: 171:161 or 175:182.
175:251 Injury Epidemiology 3 s.h.
How epidemiology can be applied to injury prevention and control: epidemiology literature, specific methodological problems involved in the epidemiology of injuries, critical evaluation of research articles. Offered spring semesters of odd years. Prerequisites: 173:140. Same as 173:251.

175:252 Environmental Health Policy 3 s.h.
Major concerns in environment and human health, legislation enacted to deal with these concerns; emphasis on contemporary issues. Offered fall semesters of odd years. Requirements: (for 175:252) 175:197; (for 053:204) 053:050. Same as 053:204, 152:252.

175:253 Epidemiology of Occupational Injuries 3 s.h.
Epidemiological literature on occupational injuries and their prevention; focus on research methods. Offered spring semesters of even years. Prerequisites: 173:140. Same as 173:253.

175:260 Environmental Toxicology 3 s.h.
Sources, routes of absorption, effects of environmental toxicants affecting man; pathophysiology of toxicant actions, including those of air and water pollutants, metals, pesticides, solvents, food toxicants, chemicals. Requirements: college organic and inorganic chemistry, or physiology, or biochemistry.

175:265 Advanced Toxicology 4 s.h.
Hepatic metabolism and toxification mechanisms, pulmonary and immunotoxicology, nervous system poisons and their mechanisms of action, general and molecular concepts of chemical carcinogenesis. Prerequisites: 175:260.

175:285 Advanced Topics in Occupational Medicine 2 s.h.
Skills and knowledge for evaluating and treating patients with work-related illness.

175:294 Occupational Ergonomics II 3 s.h.
Application of ergonomic principles in varied work settings, through case study approach; participatory ergonomics, economics of ergonomics, workforce issues, psychosocial factors, shift work, integration of ergonomics into business models, current legislative issues, legal aspects of ergonomics, international perspectives; biomedical instrumentation used for risk factor exposure measurements.

175:295 Clinical Ergonomics 3 s.h.
Clinical orientation to specific ergonomic problems and issues; preparation for conducting independent on-site ergonomic evaluations in occupational settings; experience developing and evaluating ergonomic inventions in an occupational setting; rotation through an occupational medicine clinic. Prerequisites: 175:190.

Repeatable.

175:996 Occupational Medicine arr.
In-depth study of an area in occupational and environmental medicine, with clinical experience in an outpatient community setting. Four-week course. Requirements: M.D. enrollment.
Public Health Genetics

University College is home to a wide range of programs for University of Iowa students and precollege students. It includes major college-level programs such as the University of Iowa Honors Program, Study Abroad, Career Center Programs, and study at Iowa Lakeside Laboratory.

University College offers a program leading to the Bachelor of Applied Studies (B.A.S.), which is designed for graduates of community college technical programs who wish to complete a bachelor’s degree by distance education. The B.A.S. provides alternatives to traditional majors. Students work with their advisors to plan their own emphasis areas, which may help them advance in their chosen careers, begin new careers, or prepare for graduate or professional study.

The college also offers undergraduate certificate programs in Human Rights, Leadership Studies, Nonprofit Management, and Sustainability.

Some University College programs are designed to smooth entering students’ transition to college life, such as the College Success Initiatives program and the First-Year Programs, or to provide opportunities for populations underrepresented in the sciences and engineering, such as Iowa Biosciences Advantage.

Lifetime Leisure Skills courses in a broad range of sport and fitness activities are offered through University College, as are special courses for student orientation advisors, residence hall assistants, fraternity and sorority community leaders, and students who design web sites for University departments and offices.

The University’s Reserve Officer Training Corps programs, Aerospace Studies and Military Science, reside in University College.

In addition, University College offers courses in several precollege programs: the Belin-Blank Center for Gifted Education, the Center for Diversity & Enrichment, the Iowa Young Writers’ Studio, the Secondary Student Training Program, and University of Iowa Upward Bound.

Courses offered through University College programs are taught by University of Iowa faculty and staff members.

The Aerospace Studies Program administers the Air Force Reserve Officer Training Corps (AFROTC) at The University of Iowa. AFROTC educates highly qualified students who are working toward a degree and a commission as an officer in the United States Air Force.

AFROTC is voluntary, with courses open to all undergraduate and graduate students. The amount of AFROTC academic credit that may be applied toward a degree varies from college to college at the University. The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, for example, accepts a maximum of 20 s.h.

In order to receive a commission, AFROTC cadets must complete all University of Iowa requirements for a degree as well as courses specified by the U.S. Air Force.

Programs

AFROTC offers programs lasting two years, three years, and four years. Joining early gives students the opportunity to try AFROTC without obligation. It also can give them an advantage in the scholarship selection process.

The AFROTC program’s three main components are the general military course (GMC), the professional officer course (POC), and field training (FT).

General Military Course

The general military course (GMC) consists of one AFROTC course (1 s.h.) and a leadership laboratory taken each semester for two years. Any student who meets AFROTC qualifications and is in good academic standing is eligible to participate in the GMC. Students normally apply for the GMC up to the time they earn 60 s.h. Students who have earned more than 60 s.h. may enroll in the GMC if they are willing to extend their academic plan by a semester or more.

Professional Officer Course

The professional officer course (POC) consists of one AFROTC course (3 s.h.) and a leadership laboratory taken each semester for two years. Students accepted into the POC make a commitment to serve a minimum of four years as U.S. Air Force officers. To enter the POC, students must be selected to attend and must successfully complete field training. Students generally take the POC during their last 60 s.h.

Field Training

All POC applicants must successfully complete field training at a U.S. Air Force base. Field training is an intensive, four-week program completed the summer after the sophomore year. It provides a first-hand look at the active duty Air Force and develops military leadership and discipline. Students participate in aircraft and aircrew orientation, junior officer education, marksmanship, survival training, and physical fitness training. When they complete the program, they are ready to return to school and assume a leadership position in the AFROTC program.

Students receive authorized pay and allowances when they attend field training.

Activities

Students have the option to compete for acceptance to a variety of optional AFROTC summer training programs. They can shadow a junior officer in a career field of interest, or they can compete to attend the Air Force Academy’s free-fall parachute, glider, or combat survival schools. Students can return to field training as cadet training assistants, go to the Pentagon to see how the Air Force operates, or travel to a foreign country for a cultural immersion program. The Air Force provides transportation, meals, lodging, and a daily expense allowance for all summer programs.

Throughout the year, students may learn more about the Air Force by choosing to participate in base visits, aircraft orientation rides, a Dining Out (a formal ball in Air Force tradition), and other activities.

The AFROTC Cadet Corps also sponsors many social events, including informal parties, formal dinners, and intramural athletics.

Education Delay

Cadets may request an education delay to postpone entry to active duty until after completion of an advanced degree or professional training program.
Financial Aid

Merit scholarships are available for one, two, and three years of study. They provide tuition, fees, a $900 stipend for books, and a tax-free subsistence allowance of $300-500 per month. Applicants are selected based on objective and subjective factors. Students should apply directly to the head of aerospace studies. Students majoring in certain high-demand disciplines may be eligible for an express scholarship upon acceptance to AFROTC.

All cadets in the last two years of AFROTC are eligible for some financial assistance. They receive a tax-free subsistence allowance of $450-500 per month. Uniforms are furnished as well as all books for AFROTC classes.

Bachelor of Applied Studies

Coordinators
Nancy Romine, Jared S. Trullinger, Destiny L. Wallace

Undergraduate degree: B.A.S.
Web site: http://continuetolearn.uiowa.edu/ccp/blsbas/bas_introduction.htm

Undergraduate Program

- Bachelor of Applied Studies

The Bachelor of Applied Studies (B.A.S.) is designed for graduates of community college technical programs who wish to complete a bachelor’s degree by distance education. The B.A.S. is a general undergraduate degree without a traditional academic major. Students work with their academic advisors to structure programs that meet their individual objectives.

B.A.S. students may plan programs designed to help them advance in their chosen careers, begin new careers, or prepare for graduate or professional study. Students who have specific career goals or advanced degree programs in mind should learn what educational background they will need in order to achieve their goals, and they should include appropriate course work in their B.A.S. programs.

Students may earn credit toward the degree through several types of courses, including Saturday & Evening Classes, web-based independent study courses, semester-based web courses, extension courses at sites throughout Iowa, and regular session courses.

B.A.S. students may not earn minors.

Individuals interested in applying to the B.A.S. program should hold an A.A.S., an A.A., or an A.S. degree; see "Admission" below for more detailed admission requirements.

The B.A.S. is awarded by University College and is administered by the Division of Continuing Education.

Bachelor of Applied Studies

The Bachelor of Applied Studies requires a minimum of 120 s.h. and is intended to be completed entirely by distance education. Students must earn at least 30 s.h. of credit toward the degree in University of Iowa courses after admission to the B.A.S. program. They must earn at least 60 s.h. of the minimum 120 s.h. at four-year colleges, including 45 s.h. in course work defined as upper level.

The University is in the process of revising its course numbering system. Under the current system, University of Iowa courses are considered upper level if they are numbered 100 and above. Some courses numbered below 100 may be considered upper level for the B.A.S.; for a list of these courses, contact Distance Education. Under the new system, University of Iowa courses numbered 3000-4999 will be considered upper level for the B.A.S.

The program of study requires that students complete 12 s.h. in three of the following five distribution areas (total of 36 s.h.). In each distribution area, 6 of the required 12 s.h. must be earned in upper-level courses.

- Humanities (e.g., literature, history, philosophy, religion)
- Communication and arts (e.g., journalism, speech, drama, art, music)
- Natural sciences and mathematics (e.g., geology, biology, statistics, computer science)
- Social sciences (e.g., geography, psychology, economics, political science, anthropology)
- Professional fields (e.g., business, education, nursing, social work, library science)

Students must maintain a cumulative g.p.a. of 2.00 or higher in all course work attempted, work undertaken at The University of Iowa, and all upper-level course work.

All Division of Continuing Education policies regarding pass/nonpass and satisfactory/fail grading, academic standards, and so forth apply to B.A.S. students; see the Center for Credit Programs Student Handbook.

Optional Certificate or Focus Area

Students may incorporate one of three online certificate programs into their B.A.S. studies: the Certificate in Entrepreneurial Management, the Certificate in Nonprofit Management, or the Certificate in Public Health. Or they may use an interdisciplinary approach to plan an individualized focus area.

CERTIFICATE IN ENTREPRENEURIAL MANAGEMENT

The Certificate in Entrepreneurial Management is offered by the Tippie College of Business. It requires 18-20 s.h. Courses are offered via the World Wide Web. See Entrepreneurship (p. 815) (Tippie College of Business) in the Catalog or contact the Tippie College of Business for details.
CERTIFICATE IN NONPROFIT MANAGEMENT

The Certificate in Nonprofit Management is offered by University College in collaboration with Distance Education and the Larned A. Waterman Iowa Nonprofit Resource Center. The certificate requires 18 s.h. Courses are offered primarily on the World Wide Web. See Nonprofit Management (p. 1548) (University College) in the Catalog or contact Distance Education for details.

CERTIFICATE IN PUBLIC HEALTH

The Certificate in Public Health (p. 1457) is offered by the College of Public Health and is designed primarily for individuals working in public health practice and for those considering public health careers. The certificate requires 12 s.h. Courses are offered via the World Wide Web. Applicants must have substantial relevant work experience. Contact the College of Public Health for details.

INTERDISCIPLINARY FOCUS AREA

In collaboration with their B.A.S. advisor, students may design a focus that includes interdisciplinary areas, or they may complete one of five preapproved focus areas: entrepreneurial management, general studies, human relations, nonprofit management, or political science.

Admission

Individuals who wish to earn a B.A.S. must apply formally for admission to the program. Prospective students should contact the Distance Education office before applying.

The B.A.S. is designed for students who need to earn a bachelor’s degree by distance education. Individuals who have access to the full range of the University's on-campus daytime classes should seek admission to the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences in order to earn a degree with a major. The interdepartmental studies major allows students to tailor a degree program to their individual interests (see Interdepartmental Studies (p. 482) in the Catalog).

Applicants to the B.A.S. program must have earned an Associate of Applied Science (A.A.S.) degree, an Associate of Arts (A.A.), or an Associate of Science (A.S.) from a community college that participates in the Iowa Community College/Regents Articulation Agreement or from a regionally accredited community college. They must have a minimum of 60 s.h. of approved transfer credit. Applicants who graduated from an Iowa community college must have a cumulative g.p.a. of at least 2.00; those who graduated from a community college outside Iowa must have a cumulative g.p.a. of at least 2.50.

The program recommends that B.A.S. applicants complete the following B.A.S. minimum core requirements before entering the program.

- Rhetoric (course work equivalent to composition I, composition II, and speech)
- Quantitative or formal reasoning (3 s.h.)
- Social sciences (3 s.h.)
- Values, society, and diversity (3 s.h.)
- Business/management (6 s.h.)

See a B.A.S. advisor for a list of other acceptable courses.

Contact Distance Education for more information about the B.A.S. program.
Belin-Blank Center for Gifted Education

Nicholas Colangelo

Associate director
Susan Assouline

Research director
David Lohman

Web site: http://www.education.uiowa.edu/belinblank

The Connie Belin & Jacqueline N. Blank International Center for Gifted Education and Talent Development is dedicated to serving the needs of the gifted community at local, national, and international levels. It offers courses and programs for preservice and in-service educators, including the State of Iowa Talented and Gifted Endorsement and a global certificate in talent development. It also offers services for parents and programs for students grades K-16.

The Belin-Blank Center offers commuter programs for students, including Challenges for Elementary School Students (CHESS), Challenge Saturdays, and Weekend Institutes for Gifted Students (WINGS). Its residential summer programs for students, described below, are held on the University of Iowa campus. Students in each program participate in cultural and recreational activities and have access to the University's libraries, computer facilities, and study areas. Housing and meals are provided at the University's residence halls.

The center is home to the Assessment and Counseling Clinic, the Institute for Research and Policy on Acceleration (IRPA), and the National Institute for Twice-Exceptionality (NITE).

For more information about the center and its programs, contact the Belin-Blank Center for Gifted Education and Talent Development or visit the center's web site.

Blank Summer Institute

The Blank Summer Institute for the Arts & Sciences (BSI) is a one-week program that provides an intensive, advanced educational experience designed to enhance exceptionally talented students' intellectual and social growth. The BSI study plan, which complements the regular school curriculum, consists of eight courses that explore advanced science, math problem solving, social sciences, creative writing, invention and innovation, visual arts, performing arts, and global and cultural studies.

To be eligible for the institute, students must be Iowa residents, must be completing grade 7 or 8, and must be nominated by their schools. Students selected for the institute receive a Myron and Jacqueline Blank Summer Scholarship to cover part of the institute's cost.

Iowa Governor’s Institute

The Iowa Governor’s Institute for the Gifted and Talented (IGI) is a one-week program that provides an intensive, advanced educational experience designed to enhance exceptionally talented students’ intellectual and social growth as leaders.

To be eligible for the institute, students must be Iowa residents, must be completing grade 7 or 8, and must submit a nomination packet. Students selected for the institute receive a Governor’s Scholarship to cover part of the institute’s cost.

Junior Scholars Academy

The Junior Scholars Academy (JSA) is a one-week program in which students take a single advanced course for the entire week. Students choose from a wide variety of courses, from writing to engineering to the arts. Financial support is available.

National Scholars Institute

The National Scholars Institute (NSI) is a one-week program that provides an advanced educational experience designed to enhance the development of talent in one advanced-level course. Students select one of the following seven courses: Visual Arts Studio, Creative Writing, Asian and Pacific Studies, Advanced Leadership, Physics, Chemistry, or Engineering.

To be eligible for the institute, students must be completing grade 9, 10, or 11 and must submit a nomination packet. Students selected for the institute receive a scholarship to cover part of the institute’s cost.

Iowa Talent Project

The Belin-Blank Center collaborates with the Des Moines and Cedar Rapids school districts through the Iowa Talent Project (ITP) to identify talented and gifted students from underrepresented populations who are taking Advanced Placement (AP) courses as they progress through secondary school. Project participants attend a residential summer program at The University of Iowa that focuses on college preparation. They also complete AP courses and take at least three AP exams. Upon finishing high school, successful ITP students are admitted to The University of Iowa. Many earn an ITP scholarship.
Career Center Programs

Director
David Baumgartner

Web site: http://www.careers.uiowa.edu

The University of Iowa Marvin A. and Rose Lee Pomerantz Career Center administers the University’s Career Center Programs. The center helps students explore and plan careers, search for employment and internship opportunities, and prepare for interviews. Students may use the Pomerantz Career Center's services at any time during their academic careers, but the center encourages entering first-year and transfer students to visit after they arrive on campus and to make use of all of the center’s services throughout their study at Iowa.

The center offers online workshops throughout the year on a variety of topics, including résumé writing, job and internship search techniques, employer research, interviewing skills, and more. It hosts several career fairs each fall and spring, offering students the opportunity to talk with and learn about prospective employers.

The Pearson Library contains career-related books, periodicals, and online resources—some broad in scope, others targeted to specific careers or jobs. Employer recruiting brochures join information on salaries, geographical cost of living, resources for jobs and internships, graduate schools, and other topics.

The Pomerantz Career Center facilitates job and internship interviewing with a wide range of employers—regional, national, and international; for profit and nonprofit; state and federal government. Employers conduct on-campus interviews at specific times during the year, and many post immediate openings year-round for internships and for full-time positions. On-campus recruiting and job postings are available on the center’s web site. The center also offers career-related courses.

The center helps students find internships in Iowa, the Midwest, nationwide, and sometimes in other countries. For a list of discipline-related internships (all require course registration), see "Career Center Programs Courses"/"Internships" below.

For more information about the center’s services and facilities, contact the Pomerantz Career Center.

Center for Diversity & Enrichment

Director
Nancy J. Humbles

Web site: http://cde.uiowa.edu/

The Center for Diversity & Enrichment offers the Life Science Summer Program and the Iowa First Nations summer program for students in grades 7–12.

Students in the Life Science Summer Program explore science majors and develop an appreciation for the varied science opportunities offered on the University of Iowa campus and by higher education in general. Students in grades 7–10 spend 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on campus every day for one week (Monday through Friday). Students in grades 11–12 live on campus for one week (Monday through Friday), spending four nights in one of the University’s residence halls. Each Life Science Summer Program features structured field trips to campus departments and health science settings as well as hands-on classroom and laboratory experiences.

In the Iowa First Nations summer program, Native American students explore the varied educational opportunities offered on the University of Iowa campus and by higher education in general. Students in grades 7–10 spend 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on campus every day for one week (Monday through Friday). Students in grades 11–12 live on campus for one week (Monday through Friday), spending four nights in one of the University’s residence halls. Each Iowa First Nations program features structured field trips to varied campus departments, hands-on classroom and laboratory experiences, and involvement in activities on campus and in the community.

Undergraduate nondegree program:
Certificate in Human Rights
Web site: http://international.uiowa.edu/centers/human-rights/education/humanrightscertificate.asp

Human rights concern the inherent dignity of all human beings and the promotion and protection of that dignity irrespective of race, color, gender, sexual orientation, religion, culture, nationality, birth, or other status. The Certificate in Human Rights program seeks to broaden students’ understanding of human rights issues and to help them learn how to use an interdisciplinary approach to identify solutions.

Course work for the certificate is drawn from units across the University. It prepares students to examine societal problems critically and to design specific solutions to human rights dilemmas in a wide range of areas, such as civil governance, the situations of women and racial and sexual minorities, child welfare, socioeconomic development and well-being, hunger and poverty, education, health, immigration, ecological sustainability, and mass violence.

Undergraduate Program

• Certificate in Human Rights

Certificate

The Certificate in Human Rights requires 18 s.h. of credit with an overall g.p.a. of at least 2.00. Students take two core courses and complete the certificate requirements with approved electives (see "Elective Courses" below).

Certificate courses may be used to fulfill requirements of the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences General Education Program (p. 381) or requirements of a major or minor. Students may count a maximum of 6 s.h. of credit from any one department or program toward the certificate’s elective requirements. A maximum of 6 s.h. of transfer credit may be counted toward the certificate with approval from the certificate program’s faculty advisory group. A maximum of 3 s.h. of credit graded satisfactory/unsatisfactory may be counted toward the certificate.

Current University of Iowa undergraduate students may complete the certificate as they work toward their bachelor’s degree; the certificate is awarded upon completion of the degree. Holders of University of Iowa bachelor’s degrees may return to the University to complete the certificate. Individuals who hold bachelor’s degrees from other institutions and are not enrolled in a graduate or professional program at The University of Iowa may earn the certificate; they must apply for admission to the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

The Certificate in Human Rights requires the following course work.

CORE COURSES

Philosophical foundations and contemporary issues in human rights—one of these (students who wish to take more than one course may use the others as certificate electives):

ELECTIVE COURSES

Certificate students must earn 12 s.h. of credit in elective course work chosen from the following lists. The courses below are grouped by theme to help students choose electives that meet their interests and objectives, but some courses could fit into more than one of these groupings. Each course’s content is described on ISIS.

Students who would like to take a course not included in the following lists may submit a petition to the certificate’s faculty advisory group. The petition should state the course’s number and name and tell why the student wishes to include the course in his or her certificate electives. The petition should be submitted before the preregistration period for the session in which the course will be offered. Students must receive approval from the advisory group in order to count the course toward the certificate. Many courses have prerequisites, and some require enrollment in certain programs or colleges; students should consult the certificate program advisor to be sure they meet the registration requirements for the course they are petitioning to count toward the certificate.

Theoretical foundations and critical issues for international human rights advocacy and international humanitarian movements; honors proseminar. Requirements: junior or higher standing. Same as 187:180.
Intercollegiate Athletic Participation

Students who are members of University of Iowa intercollegiate athletics teams and are certified to participate in their sport may register for 408:021 Intercollegiate Athletic Participation. Each section of the course represents a specific sports team; students register for the appropriate section. Registration requires approval from the director of athletic student services. Qualified students may repeat the course. Members of University of Iowa sport clubs are not eligible to enroll in 408:021 Intercollegiate Athletic Participation.

Iowa Biosciences Advantage

Director
Vincent G.J. Rodgers (Physics and Astronomy)

Lecturer
Alex Warner

Web site: http://ogei.grad.uiowa.edu/iba/

Iowa Biosciences Advantage (IBA) is a highly competitive undergraduate research and academic enrichment program funded by the National Institutes of Health. The program identifies academically talented undergraduate, underrepresented minority students who aspire to research careers and gives them first-rate training that facilitates entry into doctoral programs in biomedical, behavioral, and biophysical sciences.

Iowa Biosciences Advantage students have opportunities to work in research laboratories with faculty mentors during the course of their undergraduate careers. The program’s faculty represents a broad range of disciplines in the basic and biomedical sciences. IBA students also benefit from specialized course work, career workshops, and academic advising for biomedical and bioscience careers.

Students selected for IBA must maintain good standing in academics and research. Good academic standing requires a g.p.a. of at least 3.00 and is evaluated at the end of each semester. Good research standing is determined by each student’s research mentor. Students work with their mentors throughout the academic year and summer.

STUDENTS ACCEPTED FROM HIGH SCHOOL

Students admitted to IBA from high school spend their first year at The University of Iowa establishing good academic standing and conducting laboratory rotations.

During fall semester, IBA students enroll in 407:001 The College Transition (2 s.h., graded satisfactory/unsatisfactory), which covers topics such as defining college culture, discovering University resources, refining study skills, taking tests, and setting goals.

During spring semester, IBA students enroll in two courses. They take 168:041 IBA Student Development Seminar (1 s.h.), an extension of subject matter introduced in The College Transition. They also take a special section of 168:047 IBA Research in Biomedical Science (0 s.h.) and complete two research rotations. The rotations, which are set up by IBA staff, introduce students to laboratory research at the University.

At the end of the first year, each student is evaluated for admission to the IBA Scholar Program. Students selected as IBA scholars remain on campus for the eight-week summer session and continue in the program throughout the year. They earn wages for laboratory work with their research mentors, live in the IBA Summer Learning Community, and participate in IBA events.

STUDENTS ACCEPTED FROM COLLEGE

Applications also are accepted from current University of Iowa undergraduates majoring in the sciences as well as students transferring to Iowa. Students accepted to IBA during their first, second, or third year of college join the appropriate cohort of IBA scholars. During their first semester of participation, new undergraduates complete lab rotations and establish good academic standing. They also enroll in 168:041 IBA Student Development Seminar. Once students are matched with a research mentor, they earn wages for their laboratory work during summer and the academic year.

Admission

Students apply to Iowa Biosciences Advantage during their senior year of high school or once they are undergraduate students.

Applicants must:
• have a strong interest in pursuing a research career;
• have a qualifying academic major;
• be in good academic standing;
• submit an IBA application, including short essays and a release for IBA to obtain the applicant’s transcripts; and
• submit one letter of recommendation from a science or math instructor.

Admission requires an interview. Admission decisions are made throughout the year.

Faculty

Faculty members from the University’s broad range of basic and biomedical science disciplines serve as teachers and mentors to IBA students. They represent many departments, including anatomy and cell biology, biochemistry, biology, biomedical engineering, chemistry, integrative physiology, microbiology, molecular physiology and biophysics, neuroscience, and psychology.
Courses

168:039 Introduction to Laboratory Techniques
2 s.h.
Exercises that teach basic laboratory techniques through experimentation with biological materials; preparation for conducting research in the mentor’s laboratory.

168:041 IBA Student Development Seminar
0-1 s.h.
Academic and professional development; presentations by faculty researchers, admissions representatives, or students in graduate bioscience programs; discussions about succeeding at the University; talks by professional educators on topics such as effective study skills.

Iowa Lakeside Laboratory is a field station run cooperatively by The University of Iowa, Iowa State University, and the University of Northern Iowa. Iowa Lakeside Laboratory courses can be taken for credit through all consortium member schools. Students should check with their advisors to determine whether Iowa Lakeside Laboratory courses can be used to satisfy requirements of their academic majors or minors, or college or university general education requirements.

The laboratory was established in 1909 for the conservation and study of the rich flora and fauna of northwest Iowa, especially the numerous lakes, wetlands, and prairies of the Iowa Great Lakes region. The campus is located on approximately 140 acres of restored prairie, wetland, and gallery forest along the west shore of West Okoboji Lake. Lakeside’s mission is to provide undergraduate and graduate students an opportunity for hands-on experience in a variety of natural and human environments through its field-oriented summer courses, and to provide research facilities and support for graduate students and faculty members working on research projects in northwestern Iowa.

Each summer Iowa Lakeside Laboratory offers students a unique educational experience—small, full-immersion, field-oriented courses in the natural sciences (archaeology, botany, ecology, hydrology, soils, zoology). Courses are taught at the sophomore/junior level and the senior/graduate level. Most courses meet all day Monday through Friday, last four weeks, and are limited to eight to ten students. Students usually earn 1 s.h. for each week (40 hours) in class. One- and two-week courses also are available, including courses designed especially for teachers.

Weather permitting, students normally spend at least part of each day doing fieldwork, either as part of their class work or for individual or group projects.

Not all courses are offered every year; visit List of Courses on the Iowa Lakeside Laboratory web site or consult the University of Iowa summer course offerings on ISIS (Iowa Student Information Services) to learn which courses will be offered during a particular summer session.

Research projects by undergraduates, graduate students, and faculty members can be completed either on the Iowa Lakeside Laboratory campus or at many nearby natural areas. Undergraduate and graduate students are strongly encouraged to do independent projects at the laboratory, and graduate students are welcome to use Lakeside as a base for their thesis and dissertation research. Laboratory space and other facilities are available for long-term or short-term research projects.

Teaching and research facilities include eight laboratory buildings, a library, and a lecture hall. Living accommodations include cottages, motel-style units, and a large mess hall. All students are encouraged to stay at Lakeside while they are taking courses to derive full advantage of its educational, professional, and social life.

Registration

Students can enroll in Iowa Lakeside Laboratory courses only by submitting an Iowa Lakeside Laboratory Registration and Housing Form to the Iowa Lakeside Laboratory Administrative Office. Information about current courses and housing is available on the Iowa Lakeside Laboratory web site.

Early registration is advisable. Because enrollment in Lakeside courses is limited, students should register before May 1 for the following summer session. When students register for courses, they must either apply for housing or state that they plan to live off campus.

Financial Support

Iowa Lakeside Laboratory scholarships are available to undergraduates and graduate students. Scholarships cover basic room and board; in some cases, they help reduce the cost of tuition. For information about how to apply for Iowa Lakeside Laboratory scholarships, see the Iowa Lakeside Laboratory web site. For information about other scholarships, work-study, and loan programs, consult the Office of Student Financial Aid.
The University of Iowa provides Thomas H. Macbride Scholarships in Natural Science for qualified students attending Lakeside. Application deadline is April 1.

00L:109 Freshwater Algae 4 s.h.
Structure and taxonomy of freshwater algae based on field material collected; emphasis on genus-level identifications; habitat visits to lakes, fens, streams, rivers; algal ecology.

00L:111 Summer Writing Festival at Iowa Lakeside Laboratory 1 s.h.
Application of imagination to life experiences to become more effective writers; writing exercises invite imaginative leaps, thoughtful reflections, humor, and seriousness; participants work in various forms of expression, including personal essay, poetry, and short fiction; designed for young adult to adult writers of all levels. One week.

00L:113 Undergraduate Independent Study 1-4 s.h.
Requirements: junior or senior standing.

00L:115 Field Mycology 4 s.h.
Identification and classification of the common fungi; techniques for identification, preservation, and culture practiced with members of the various fungi groups.

00L:117 Ecology and Systematics of Diatoms 4 s.h.
Field and laboratory study of freshwater diatoms; techniques in collection, preparation, and identification of diatom samples; study of environmental factors affecting growth, distribution, taxonomic characters; project design and execution, including construction of reference and voucher collections; data organization and analysis.

00L:119 Evolution 4 s.h.
Mechanisms and patterns in microevolution, macroevolution; field exercises emphasizing studies of natural selection, adaptation, genetic variation, and population genetics of local plant, animal populations.

00L:120 Freshwater Invertebrates 4 s.h.
Field-oriented introduction to identification, life history, and ecology of common, free-living freshwater invertebrates of north-temperate lakes, rivers, wetlands; emphasis on invertebrates’ role in aquatic food chains and litter processing. Requirements: an ecology course.

00L:121 Plant Ecology 4 s.h.
Principles of plant population, community, and ecosystem ecology illustrated through studies of native vegetation in local prairies, wetlands, forests; group or individual projects.

00L:122 Prairie Ecology 4 s.h.
Basic patterns, underlying physical and biotic causes of regional and local distributions of North American prairie plants and animals; field and laboratory analysis and projects. Prerequisite: familiarity with basic principles of biology and ecology.

00L:124 Wetland Ecology 4 s.h.
Ecology, classification, creation, restoration, and management of wetlands; field studies on composition, structure, and function of local natural wetlands, restored prairie pothole wetlands; individual or group projects. Prerequisites: 00L:031.

00L:126 Ornithology 4 s.h.
Biology, ornithology, and behavior of birds; emphasis on field studies of local avifauna; group projects with focus on techniques of population analysis and methodology for population studies.

00L:127 Introduction to Insect Ecology 4 s.h.
Insects; their diversity and life history; emphasis on ecology and behavior; field, laboratory study.

00L:128 Fish Ecology 4 s.h.
Basic principles of fish interaction with biotic and abiotic environments; field methods, taxonomy, and biology of fish with emphasis on the fish fauna of northwestern Iowa.
00L:129 Vertebrate Ecology and Evolution
Field and laboratory study of representative vertebrates of northwestern Iowa; observations and experimentation emphasize ecological histories by integrating concepts of functional morphology, behavioral ecology, evolutionary biology.

00L:131 Ecology
Introduction to the principles of ecology at the population, community, ecosystem levels; field studies of local lakes, wetlands, and prairies used to examine factors that control distributions, interactions, and roles of plants and animals in native ecosystems. Requirements: two semesters of introductory biology.

00L:133 Animals and Their Ecosystems
Vertebrate and invertebrate animals of the Midwest; observation of animals in nature, either through passive observational techniques or active trapping exercises; once identified, placement of animals in proper taxonomic position (i.e., “Tree of Life”); ecological perspective, including habitat preferences (i.e., wetland, lake, prairie, forest, river, edge), trophic position, and activity patterns; discussion and emphasis on conservation status. Requirements: introductory biology course.

00L:135 Aquatic Toxicology and Wetland Dynamics in Freshwater Systems
Fundamental knowledge and understanding of scientific concepts related to the physio-chemical and biological environment; problems and issues (global, national, regional, and local) of freshwater systems; how wetland restoration is used to ameliorate problems; basic tools used to assess aquatic toxicological problems. Requirements: one year of biology and one year of chemistry.

00L:140 Water Policy and Politics
1 s.h.
Historical, legal, economic, cultural, and political dimensions of water resources; public perception and enjoyment of this abundant and important natural resource; how public policy developed; private rights; differences between the previous appropriation system in the western U.S. and eastern riparian rights law; public rights regarding water for navigation, recreation, and environmental protection; water-related institutions such as suppliers of municipal water and irrigation water; interbasin transport of water.

00L:142 Watershed Hydrology and Surficial Processes
4 s.h.
Effects of geomorphology, soils, and land use on transport of water and materials (nutrients, contaminants) in watersheds; fieldwork emphasizing investigations of the Iowa Great Lakes watershed. Requirements: four courses in physical or biological sciences or engineering.

00L:144 Ecosystems of North America
2-4 s.h.
Extended field trip for study of an ecosystem type (e.g., prairie, coastal wetland, forest, alpine, coral reef) or the ecosystems of a specific region (e.g., Rocky Mountains, Gulf Coast, Appalachian Mountains, deserts of the Southwest, Central America); pre-trip orientation, post-trip review and synthesis. Field trip fee. Requirements: an ecology course.

00L:151 Analysis of Environmental Data
2 s.h.
Theory and application of statistical techniques for analysis of ecological and paleoecological data.

00L:156 Advanced Field Ornithology
2 s.h.
Field study of birds of the upper Midwest; extended field trip to Minnesota, Wisconsin; individual or group project. Field trip fee. Corequisites: 00L:126.

Iowa Young Writers' Studio

Director
Stephen Lovely

Web site: http://www.uiowa.edu/youngwriters

The Iowa Young Writers’ Studio is a University of Iowa summer creative writing program for high school students. Students in the program build a community of peers while working with experienced writing teachers, primarily students and graduates of the University’s M.F.A. program in creative writing.

The program is residential; students live on campus in one of the University’s residence halls.

The studio offers three courses of study: poetry, fiction, and creative writing (a mix of poetry, fiction, and creative nonfiction). Each course consists of a seminar and a workshop. In seminars, students read literature by established writers. In workshops they share their own writing, get feedback from their classmates and teacher, and discuss issues of narrative and form.

The studio offers two two-week sessions: one in June and one in July.

Young writers who have completed grade 10, 11, or 12 are eligible to attend the studio. Application materials include an application form, a creative writing sample, a statement of purpose, a high school transcript, and a letter of recommendation from an English teacher or another instructor familiar with the applicant’s writing. For complete application information, contact the Iowa Young Writers’ Studio or visit its web site.

Application deadline is early February for the following summer.

Leadership Studies

Director
David Baumgartner

Undergraduate nondegree program:
Certificate in Leadership Studies
Web site: http://www.careers.uiowa.edu/leadershipstudies

Leadership studies is a multidisciplinary academic field that draws upon theories and applications from a wide variety of related disciplines, such as the social sciences (e.g., psychology, sociology, political science, and anthropology) and the humanities (e.g., philosophy and history), as well as professional fields, including management and education. The University of Iowa’s Leadership Studies Program examines ethical issues, principles, theories, and styles of leadership; the dynamics of interactions between leaders, followers, and group members; leaders’ impact on organizations and communities; and leadership skills such as goal setting, communicating effectively, creating a vision, and empowering others.

Undergraduate Programs

• Certificate in Leadership Studies

The Certificate in Leadership Studies is an interdisciplinary program coordinated by the Pomerantz Career Center and supported by the Tippie College of Business, the College of Education, the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, and the Office of Student Life. The Leadership Studies Program also offers Career Leadership Academy, a four-course sequence designed to help undergraduate students develop leadership and employment skills, and the online course Global Leadership Initiative. See "Other Programs" later in this section.

Certificate

The Certificate in Leadership Studies requires 21 s.h., including an interdisciplinary core course (3 s.h.), area electives (15 s.h.), an experiential learning course (3 s.h.), and a final personal and program evaluation. Students must maintain a g.p.a. of at least 2.00 in work for the certificate.

The certificate program provides a structure for involvement and commitment to leadership. It introduces students to leadership concepts and offers them hands-on leadership experiences they will need in order to begin the life-long development of these skills.

The certificate requires the following course work.

INTERDISCIPLINARY CORE COURSE

All certificate students are required to complete the interdisciplinary core course (3 s.h.). In order to enroll in the course, they must have earned a minimum of 30 s.h. of credit and must be in good academic standing as defined by the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences (cumulative g.p.a. of at least 2.00).

421:072 Perspectives on Leadership: Principles and Practices 3 s.h.

The core course provides students with a broad foundation of leadership knowledge. It introduces diverse approaches to studying and practicing leadership and gives students a structure for organizing knowledge and skills from other leadership courses and experiences. The course features presentations by guest instructors from across the University, offering students an interdisciplinary perspective on leadership.

Certificate students must complete 421:072 before they may enroll in the required experiential learning or service learning course.

AREA ELECTIVES

Area electives are drawn from five developmental areas central to effective leadership: self-leadership, group leadership, communication, cultural competence, and ethics and integrity. Students must complete 3 s.h. from each of these areas (total of 15 s.h.).

Self-Leadership

At least 3 s.h. from these:

- 101:120 Professional Issues and Ethics  1 s.h.
- 174:223 Seminar in Health Care Ethics  2-3 s.h.

EXPERIENTIAL LEARNING
Certificate students must earn 3 s.h. in a course focused on experiential, or hands-on, learning. They may select a service learning course or an experiential learning course to satisfy this requirement; an experiential learning course may take different forms, commonly an internship or an on-campus leadership practicum.

Before they may enroll in the hands-on course, students must have completed at least 9 s.h. of work toward the certificate, including the core course 421:072 Perspectives on Leadership: Principles and Practices, so that they have a solid foundation of knowledge to apply to the experience.

Service Learning Courses
Service learning courses incorporate community engagement with academic course work. They allow students to gain hands-on experience along with a deeper understanding of course content while responding to real community needs. Students may satisfy the certificate’s 3 s.h. experiential learning requirement by completing one or more service learning courses approved by their leadership certificate advisor.

Internship
Internships consist of preapproved, supervised on-the-job learning; they may be paid or unpaid.
Students register for 421:073 Leadership Certificate Internship in order to receive certificate credit for the internship; they must complete all course assignments and must earn 3 s.h. in order to fulfill the experiential learning requirement.

To meet the certificate's experiential learning requirement, an internship must consist of professional experience that relates to the student's major field of study or career interest area and allows the student to build on the academic course work he or she has completed in the certificate program. At least 80 percent of the student's internship duties must be professional-level work, and the student must receive continuous supervision by a professional (not a student) in the internship field. The internship must last an entire fall or spring semester (minimum of 10 weeks) or summer session (minimum of eight weeks) and must require at least 10 hours of work per week.

Internships that fulfill the certificate's experiential learning requirement must be approved in advance by one of the certificate program's internship advisors, and the internship site supervisor must agree to the terms of the internship and must complete the required form before the internship may be approved. Students may work with staff at the Pomerantz Career Center to find an approved internship opportunity, or they may develop their own internship. For more information about internships, see Internships/Students on the Pomerantz Career Center web site.

On-Campus Leadership Practicum

Students who wish to fulfill the experiential learning requirement with an on-campus leadership practicum must engage in a formal, approved experience that is meaningful, educational, and cocurricular. It must require the student to take initiative and pursue active leadership roles and responsibilities. Examples include positions as student organization leaders, student government leaders, University Housing resident assistants, student orientation advisors, peer educators, and fraternity and sorority leaders. Practicums may be paid or unpaid.

Students register for 413:125 Leadership Certificate Practicum Class in order to receive certificate credit for the practicum; they must earn 3 s.h. in order to fulfill the experiential learning requirement. Students meet weekly in the practicum course to discuss topics related to the academic course work as applied in practice, and they must successfully complete a goal-setting assignment and a reflection assignment.

To meet the certificate’s experiential learning requirement, a practicum must last at least 10 weeks during the semester in which 413:125 is offered and must require 10 hours of work per week (413:125 is not offered every semester).

Practicums that fulfill the certificate’s experiential learning requirement must be approved in advance by the leadership practicum instructor in the University’s Office of Student Life. Students must submit a list of goals and assignments and/or duties they will complete during the practicum, to demonstrate that the practicum will provide substantive work assignments and opportunities to build on the academic course work they have completed in the certificate program.

Each student also must identify a practicum supervisor and demonstrate that the supervisor will be willing to guide and evaluate the student’s work and development of leadership skills, and will participate in reviewing the student’s goal-setting assignment and in the final review of the student’s reflection assignment.

PERSONAL AND PROGRAM EVALUATION

In order to be awarded the Certificate in Leadership Studies, students must complete a final report detailing how they completed the certificate requirements. The report should include:

- a list of all courses taken for the certificate, indicating the requirement each course met, when each course was taken, and what grade the student earned for each course;
- a copy of the goal-setting and reflection exercises the student completed for the course focused on experiential learning;
- a document reflecting on additional progress toward these goals over the student’s entire time at The University of Iowa; and
- a document reflecting on the most and least useful elements of the Certificate in Leadership Studies experience.

ADMISSION TO THE CERTIFICATE PROGRAM

For additional information about the Leadership Studies Program and admission requirements, see Certificate in Leadership Studies on the Pomerantz Career Center web site.

Other Programs

CAREER LEADERSHIP ACADEMY

The Career Leadership Academy is a four-semester sequence of courses designed to help undergraduate students develop vital skills for leadership and employment: communication, interpersonal, and presentation skills and the ability to work well with others. The program consists of weekly seminars, activities, and events. Participants also have access to exclusive programs such as career exploration opportunities, networking events, and leadership development experiences. Students earn 6 s.h. for the four-course sequence.

421:106 Career Leadership Academy--Phase 1 2 s.h.
421:107 Career Leadership Academy--Phase 2 1 s.h.
421:108 Career Leadership Academy--Phase 3 2 s.h.
421:109 Career Leadership Academy--Phase 4 1 s.h.

For more information, see Career Leadership Academy on the Pomerantz Career Center website.

GLOBAL LEADERSHIP INITIATIVE

The Leadership Studies Program offers 421:071 Global Leadership Initiative (1 s.h.), an online course designed to help those engaged in international experiences develop their leadership knowledge, awareness, and skills. Individuals involved in study abroad, international internships, international exchange programs, or employment opportunities that involve international cooperation may enroll in the course concurrently with their international experiences. The course includes online discussion with other students, guided reflection, access to guest speakers who are successful in their leadership roles, pre- and postexperience assessment, and direction for continued development of global leadership competence after the course concludes.

Courses

421:071 Global Leadership Initiative 1 s.h.
Development of knowledge, attitudes, and skills to be effective global leaders regardless of the industry or field; working effectively in a global environment with empathy; ability to deal with ambiguity and unfamiliarity; critical thinking and comparative skills, including the ability to think creatively and integrate knowledge; pre- and post-travel assessment, guided reflection, guest speakers, online discussion; intercultural communication; online course for students engaged in a study abroad experience or international internship. Requirements: concurrent enrollment in a study abroad or international internship experience, or completing an international component of current employment.

421:072 Perspectives on Leadership: Principles and Practices 3 s.h.
Broad foundation of leadership knowledge representing diverse approaches to studying and practicing leadership; core course for students pursuing the leadership certificate. Requirements: sophomore standing.

421:073 Leadership Certificate Internship 0,3 s.h.
Registration of practical work experience (internship) with leadership components, for students pursuing the leadership certificate. Prerequisites: 421:072. Requirements: an additional 6 s.h. of approved leadership course work.

421:075 Leadership Community Seminar 0-1 s.h.
Opportunity to expand on content and deepen discussion from Career Leadership Academy; leadership skill development through workshops and programs; meaningful involvement and engagement on campus and in community through service learning opportunities; team building through a variety of initiatives and student-led programming; mentors participate while sharing their knowledge, skills, and experiences. Requirements: Leadership Learning Community member or Career Leadership Academy peer mentor.

421:076 Career Leadership Academy Intensive Phase I/II 3 s.h.
Combines 421:106 and 421:107 into one course; intensive instruction and preparation to enter 421:108.

421:106 Career Leadership Academy--Phase 1 2 s.h.
Leadership history and concepts, goal setting, the Relational Leadership Model, personal values and ethics, meaningful involvement and engagement, time and stress management, career development information, and varied self-awareness assessments and interest inventories. First in a four-semester sequence.
421:107 Career Leadership Academy--Phase 2
1 s.h.
Group dynamics and teambuilding, understanding others, effective communication and listening, delivering presentations, problem solving, and dealing with difficult people; participation in a low ropes teambuilding workshop. Second in a four-semester sequence. Prerequisites: 421:106.

421:108 Career Leadership Academy--Phase 3
2 s.h.
Collaboration, conflict resolution, delegation and empowerment, interviewing, networking, understanding power, service project management, and motivation. Third in a four-semester sequence. Prerequisites: 421:106 and 421:107.

421:109 Career Leadership Academy--Phase 4
1 s.h.
Professionalism and office communication, marketing one’s skills, transitioning from college to the workforce, negotiating salaries, understanding benefits, realistic expectations of an entry-level position, and building a career. Last in a four-semester sequence. Prerequisites: 421:106, 421:107, and 421:108.

The Military Science Program administers Iowa Army ROTC. It gives students who wish to serve on active or reserve status in the U.S. Army the opportunity to earn commissions as army officers. It also administers merit scholarships from the United States government to qualified students.

Although the Military Science Program does not offer degrees, its courses provide education in the military's role and instruction in leadership and management. The program's courses are an essential part of the Iowa ROTC program, which competes annually in national leadership assessments.

Military Science courses are open to all students. Course credit that counts toward graduation varies by college. Students in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences may count up to 20 s.h. toward graduation.

Programs

Basic Course

The ROTC basic course is designed primarily for first- and second-year students. It provides the fundamentals of leadership and management and introduces the roles of the military as influenced by national and foreign policy. Students incur no obligation to the military for participation in the basic course.

The following courses satisfy the basic course requirement. Some of these courses are prerequisites to others, so students must be careful to take courses in the correct order. Courses 023:101 Leadership and Personal Development MSL101 and 023:102 Introduction to Tactical Leadership MSL102 are prerequisite to 023:103 Innovative Team Leadership MSL201; courses 023:101 Leadership and Personal Development MSL101, 023:102 Introduction to Tactical Leadership MSL102, and 023:103 Innovative Team Leadership MSL201 are prerequisite to 023:104 Foundations of Tactical Leadership MSL202.

The basic course requirements may be taken over a one- or two-year period or during a four-week paid summer camp, the Leader's Training Course (LTC), at Fort Knox, Kentucky. Students with prior military training normally are exempt from the basic course requirements.

Advanced Course

The ROTC advanced course is open to any student who meets the prerequisites, but is designed primarily for cadets who wish to pursue a commission as a lieutenant in the U.S. Army upon graduation. It is open to both undergraduate and graduate students. Most cadets in the advanced course incur an obligation to the military that can be satisfied in the Active Army, Army Reserve, or Army National Guard.

To enter the advanced course, students must satisfy the basic course requirements, earn at least 54 s.h., and have a cumulative g.p.a. of at least 2.00. In order to become U.S. Army officers, cadets must complete the Leadership Development and Assessment course (LDAC), a five-week session held at Fort Lewis, Washington. Cadets normally attend LDAC during the summer between their third and fourth years. With the military science professor's permission, cadets may delay LDAC until the summer after their final ROTC class.

A tax-free monthly stipend is provided to cadets who enter a contractual agreement with ROTC to serve in the armed forces. Additional financial assistance may be provided through scholarships.

The following courses are the academic requirements for completion of the advanced course. Some of these courses have prerequisites and corequisites, so students must be careful to take courses in the correct order. Prerequisites and corequisites for each course are listed with course descriptions; see "Courses" at the end of this section.

Additional Course Work

Cadets whose aim is a commission must satisfy a Professional Military Education (PME) requirement. They must complete at least one course in military history from the following list. This course may be the same as one used to complete the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences General Education Program (p. 381). Cadets may use other courses to meet the requirement, with the military science professor’s approval.

- 016:011 Issues in Human History: The Vietnam War in Historical Perspective 3 s.h.
- 016:014 Issues in Human History: Europe’s Expansion Overseas 3 s.h.

- 16A:166 The Progressive Era in America 3 s.h.
- 16A:168 The Contemporary U.S. 1940-Present 3 s.h.

Financial Aid

Military Science offers two-, three-, and four-year ROTC scholarships for students who enter the ROTC program. These scholarships pay tuition at The University of Iowa, an allotment for books and supplies each semester, most mandatory educational fees, and a tax-free monthly stipend during the academic year. Scholarships also are available for nursing students who wish to become Army nurses.

Undergraduate nondegree program:
Certificate in Nonprofit Management
Web site: http://www.continuetolearn.uiowa.edu/ccp/de/NonprofitCertificate.htm

Nonprofit organizations play vital roles in our communities and contribute to our quality of life. Nonprofit organizations have unique management, funding, and finance issues that require specialized training. The Certificate in Nonprofit Management is designed to help staff members, board members, and volunteers develop the business and leadership skills necessary for building a successful nonprofit organization. The program provides a balance of academic principles and real-world experience as well as a fundamental understanding of how nonprofit organizations participate in building communities.

Certificate courses cover a wide range of topics and issues, such as community and government partnerships, organizational leadership, planning, human resources, financial accountability, grant writing, and web site creation and maintenance.

Courses are offered primarily on the World Wide Web.

The certificate is available to undergraduate students and to individuals who have completed a bachelor’s degree. Bachelor of Applied Studies (p. 1510) and Bachelor of Liberal Studies (p. 146) students may incorporate certificate courses into their degree programs.

The program is presented by the Division of Continuing Education and the Larned A. Waterman Iowa Nonprofit Resource Center, in collaboration with University College.

Secondary Student Training Program

Director
Janice M. Warren

Students who are currently in grades 9-11 may nominate themselves for the Secondary Student Training Program (SSTP), a six-week residential summer research program at The University of Iowa. SSTP students conduct scientific research in University laboratories under the guidance of a faculty mentor. They also produce a research project paper as a part of the program.

Students who participate in the program pay an SSTP fee that covers room, board, all materials, and admission to all regularly scheduled activities. They also pay University of Iowa tuition for 3 s.h. of credit. Students and their families are responsible for their transportation to and from SSTP and for incidental expenses, such as souvenirs and snacks. Students are considered for financial aid after they are selected for the program.

Courses

418:001 Secondary Student Training Program 0.3 s.h.

Several three-week courses, all satisfying various General Education Program requirements, offered in succession each summer; taught by UI professors; course offerings and locations vary; students may take one, two, or three courses. Requirements: good academic standing.
Summer Undergraduate MSTP Research Program

Web site: http://www.medicine.uiowa.edu/mstp/

The Summer Undergraduate MSTP Research Program is an intensive eight-to-ten-week experience for undergraduates interested in future careers as physician scientists. Participants gain experience in research laboratories and exposure to clinical medicine and medically relevant research in preparation for careers as physician scientists.

Students conduct research in the laboratories of biomedical sciences faculty members, shadow physician scientists in clinical settings, participate in career development seminars, and attend a weekly seminar series focusing on the intersection of science and medicine.

Participants receive a stipend for the program and live on campus in University housing.

Applicants must be U.S. citizens or permanent residents who have completed their junior year in a bachelor’s degree program in the biological or physical sciences. Applicants should submit an application form (available on the program’s web site); an official college transcript; and two letters of recommendation. Application deadline is early February for the following summer.

Contact the Medical Scientist Training Program, Carver College of Medicine, for more information.

Undergraduate nondegree program:
Certificate in Sustainability
Web site: http://sustainability.uiowa.edu/certificate

For decades, world leaders have defined sustainability as the implementation of policies, processes, and practices that meet the needs of the present without compromising the ability of future generations to meet their own needs. Achievement of sustainability requires an understanding of human and environmental systems and the complex interactions between them.

The Certificate in Sustainability provides students with the knowledge and skills they will need in order to contribute to sustainable systems and their interactions, especially those related to energy, society, culture, economics, the built environment, health, and public policy. The program helps students become effective leaders and agents of change for sustainability in a wide range of vocations, such as academic researcher, teacher, corporate officer, technology specialist, farmer, grassroots advocate, or government official.

Undergraduate Program

• Certificate in Sustainability

The certificate program is open to undergraduate students across the University. It is offered by University College.

Certificate

The Certificate in Sustainability requires 24 s.h. of course work. Because sustainability embraces many disciplines, methodologies, and institutional practices, certificate students must have knowledge of the multidisciplinary breadth of the field, which is represented by the program’s four areas of breadth electives: changing environments and human health; energy, climate, and built environments; ethics, economics, and public policy; and the power of culture and society. They also must have experience with analyzing real-life problems in and outside of the classroom and with working collaboratively to solve such problems.

Students complete three introductory course courses; four breadth electives—one from each of the program’s four elective areas; and one project course. They may be able to count some courses taken for the certificate toward requirements for their major or for a minor. No more than three certificate courses may be taken from a single department or program. Students must maintain a g.p.a. of at least 2.00 in all certificate course work. A maximum of 6 s.h. of approved transfer credit may be counted toward the certificate.

The certificate requires the following course work.

INTRODUCTORY CORE

Students complete the following three introductory core courses.

- 012:008/159:008 Introduction to Environmental Science 3-4 s.h.
- 044:019 Contemporary Environmental Issues 3 s.h.
- 057:013 Introduction to Sustainability 3 s.h.

BREADTH ELECTIVES

Students complete one course (at least 3 s.h.) from each of the following four breadth areas.

Changing Environments and Human Health

One of these:

- 002:103/044:103 Biogeography 3 s.h.
- 002:108 Vertebrate Zoology 4 s.h.
- 002:134/159:134 Ecology 3-4 s.h.
- 004:173 Atmospheric and Environmental Chemistry 3 s.h.
- 012:004 Evolution and the History of Life 3-4 s.h.
- 012:107 Marine Ecosystems and Conservation 3 s.h.
- 012:108-159:100 Introduction to Oceanography - Environmental Sciences Seminar 3 s.h.
- 012:139 Integrated Watershed Analysis 3 s.h.
- 012:140 Natural Disasters 3 s.h.
- 012:166 Hydrogeology 3 s.h.
- 012:170 Evolution of Ecosystems 3 s.h.
- 16W:137 History of Public Health 3 s.h.
- 16W:138 History of Global Health 3 s.h.
- 16W:140 Disease, Politics, and Health in South Asia 3 s.h.
- 044:003 The Global Environment 4 s.h.
- 044:123 Landscape Ecology 3 s.h.
- 044:126/012:126 Wetlands: Function, Geography, and Management 3 s.h.
- 044:137 Health and Environment: GIS Applications 3 s.h.
- 053:050 Natural Environmental Systems 3-4 s.h.

Library Research in Context is an activity-based course that helps students integrate information skills and concepts into their academic tool kit, enabling them to develop habits of critical inquiry and to accomplish course goals. Designed primarily for sophomores and juniors, the course introduces students to the basic research process and helps them formulate research questions and evaluate information. It also touches on the social and ethical contexts of information. Subject-specialist librarians present the course, using in-class activities and assignments and class discussion. The course is offered online as well as on campus.

For information about Focused Academic Research for International Studies Majors, contact University Libraries or the International Studies Program.

University of Iowa Honors Program

Director

Web site: http://honors.uiowa.edu

The University of Iowa Honors Program provides talented-and-gifted education for college students. Honors enriches the intellectual and personal lives of outstanding undergraduates across the University. It provides academic opportunities, extracurricular programs, special recognitions, and social events, many held in the award-winning Blank Honors Center. It also sponsors three residential communities for honors students, all located close to the Blank Honors Center.

The Honors Program welcomes students into a community of opportunity that features learning by doing. Its many course sections and seminars connect small classes with some of the top teachers on campus. Honors designations let students turn almost any other course into an honors course through extra projects. The staff helps students create their own honors majors and arrange internships, service learning, study abroad, teaching, and other experiences in order to explore their interests within and beyond the classroom.

Within the Honors Program, the Iowa Center for Research by Undergraduates matches students with mentors and money for research. Honors Writing Fellows and Honors Editing Fellows refine writing skills. Participants in the Iowa Policy Research Organization analyze policies for Iowa’s legislature. Members of the Aces Program for Analysis, Advocacy, and Action prepare for public argument and scholarship competitions. Guests at Honors Dinners practice intellectual conversation. A host of honors activities engage students in the arts, sciences, politics, international relations, mock trials, diverse cultures, varied cuisines, movie making and watching, and field trips.

Honors also offers inventive programs for campus and community volunteering.

Honors admits students who show great academic promise for college learning and further achievement. Its members include National Merit Scholars, Presidential Scholars, Old Gold Scholars, National Hispanic Scholars, Tippie Scholars, China Scholars, National Achievement Scholars, and students in the National Academy of Arts, Sciences, and Engineering.

Based on grades and test scores, the Honors Program admits many students directly and automatically from high school. Entering students also may become members by submitting a high school transcript, a letter of recommendation from a teacher, and a personal letter saying how the student expects to gain from participation in the University of Iowa Honors Program.

Honors offers membership to students who earn high grades at the University. New transfer students who have a cumulative g.p.a. of at least 3.50 and have earned at least 24 s.h. of college credit may be admitted to honors. (Transfer students with fewer than 24 s.h. of college credit enter honors on the same basis as do students who enter the University directly from high school.)

To remain in the Honors Program, and to graduate as a member of the program, students must maintain a University of Iowa cumulative g.p.a. of 3.33 or higher. For more information, see About/Admissions on the Honors Program web site.

Academic Opportunities

The University of Iowa Honors Program helps tailor opportunities to different educational needs and goals. Its curricula are broad, flexible, and challenging. Students can take honors courses in any and every semester at Iowa. Most connect small, highly interactive classes of honors students with especially distinguished professors. Many offer new topics each term.

Honors encourages early connections among honors students. In 143:020 Honors Primetime Workshop, entering students can earn an initial semester hour of honors credit for a short course a few days before fall classes begin; each section of 143:030 Honors First-Year Seminar awards 1 s.h. for fall semester work with a top professor on current inquiries; and all honors sections of 08G:001 The Interpretation of Literature and 010:003 Rhetoric (usually taken during the first and second semesters at the University) meet requirements of the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences General Education Program (p. 381). Early help for planning projects in art, research, or service is provided in 143:043 Honors Developing an Idea; and 143:044 Honors Writing Workshop helps students refine their talent for writing, focusing on a distinct kind of creative composition each time the course is offered. In addition, there are honors sections of courses approved for other areas of the General Education Program and for the Courses in Common program.

Honors designations can complement further honors opportunities: honors advanced seminars, honors major seminars, honors studies, even honors practicums (for research, teaching, or service). Many students crown their educations with an honors thesis or project in their major.

Students learn about such opportunities in weekly e-mails from the Honors Program. Honors peer advisors and the honors professional staff offer guidance in personal meetings and group presentations, and the honors staff can help students design individualized curricula for their special interests. Each of the University’s undergraduate majors has a faculty honors advisor who can explain options and standards for graduating with honors in that major. Research ambassadors from the Iowa Center for Research by Undergraduates tell students how to get engaged in research. For more information, see Academics on the Honors Program web site.

Honors Commendations

The Honors Program and the University president join in awarding Honors Commendations to students who complete at least 12 s.h. of honors course work with a grade of B-minus or higher in each honors course or a comparable level of accomplishment in honors experiences beyond the classroom. There are many ways to earn Honors Commendations; many students earn several. The Honors Program celebrates students graduating with Honors Commendations or with honors in their majors at Honors Commendation ceremonies. See Academics/Honors Commendations on the Honors Program web site.

Honors in the Major

Most majors offer upper-level honors courses, honors seminars, independent research, or opportunities to pursue an original honors thesis or senior project under the guidance of a faculty member. Each college and department determines its own requirements for graduation with honors from that unit, and faculty members in each department serve as honors advisors.

After students declare a major in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences or enter the Tippie College of Business or the Colleges of Education, Engineering, or Nursing, they should speak with their collegiate or departmental honors advisors about their academic programs. Students who graduate with honors in their majors receive special recognition during commencement, and their permanent academic records note their achievements. To graduate with honors in any major, students also must graduate as members of the University of Iowa Honors Program.

Academic Programs

The Honors Program provides a network of academic opportunities connected with classroom education yet also reaching far beyond. Some are volunteer programs, some are for pay, others are for honors credit, and all can count toward Honors Commendations. These opportunities provide peak educational experiences: especially extensive and intensive interactions with faculty mentors and other talented students.

The Aces Program for Analysis, Advocacy, and Action provides honors credit in preparing top students to excel in public action and major scholarship competitions.

The Honors Advisory Committee enables volunteers to work with the Honors Director on awards, initiatives, and priorities for honors education at The University of Iowa.

Honors Editing Fellows are paid to assist faculty members in writing and editing learned journals, scholarly collections, and academic blogs.

The Honors House Mentors are upper-class volunteers selected to live in the Honors House to help with the Honors Program’s educational and social programs and to guide its many first-year students.

Honors Interns receive academic credit for service learning mentored by faculty members and provided in professional or other practical settings.

Honors Newsletters are produced by Honors Editing Fellows to inform readers on and beyond the campus about the Honors Program and the Iowa Center for Research by Undergraduates.

Honors Peer Advisors earn academic credit for sharing knowledge of honors opportunities by organizing events around the campus and meeting with prospective students and their parents.

The Honors student staff is paid for making the Blank Honors Center useful to students and producing most of the extracurricular programs for honors students at Iowa.

Honors Summer Guides are paid to orient entering students to the Honors Program by helping them choose initial courses and activities for their honors educations at Iowa.

Honors Writing Fellows are trained and paid to assist in teaching upper-level undergraduate courses by mentoring a dozen students each semester on two major writing assignments.

ICRU Fellows receive scholarships from the Iowa Center for Research by Undergraduates to do paid research with faculty mentors on significant issues in professional fields of study.

The ICRU Research Ambassadors earn academic credit for showing how and why research with faculty mentors is an important aspect of education at The University of Iowa.

The Iowa Ethics Bowl Team competes in campus, regional, and national tournaments that discuss practical and philosophical problems of personal, professional, and social conduct.

The Iowa Policy Research Organization selects a dozen honors students a year for academic credit in learning to do policy analysis and then writing policy papers for the Iowa Legislature.

Learning in Service to Iowa helps students design and implement public service projects with support from ICRU grants, faculty mentors, and community partners.

Study Away, in foreign countries or culturally contrasting parts of the United States, enables students to earn academic credit and Honors Commendations for course work, research, or service.

The University of Iowa Mock Trial Association hosts an annual championship and competes in many other tournaments; students earn academic credit by performing as attorneys and witnesses in practice trials related to public issues.

The Iowa City Foreign Relations Council hosts luncheon dialogues on relevant international issues. Past speakers include award-winning journalists, Nobel Peace Prize laureates, seasoned diplomats, prominent politicians, and policy analysts. Honors students gain more textured understandings of world affairs by listening to and talking with these expert speakers.

Honors Volunteers provides students with service opportunities at varied organizations in eastern Iowa. Honors students learn more about their communities and related needs, often continuing to volunteer on their own.

Honors Gallery takes advantage of the Blank Honors Center’s design to display art. It exhibits student works throughout the year, and it complements these with receptions and other events.

Honors Media can record honors events of all kinds and help present them. Honors Media also holds movie nights, to screen and discuss feature-length films.

Honors Arts sends groups of honors students to attend music, dance, and theater events at the University and in the community. Students have opportunities to interact with artists, faculty members, and other honors students through related discussions, lectures, and visits.

Honors Discourses stages small-group discussions with professors and other experts on hot topics of the day. Students tap the latest scholarship in developing their personal positions.

Honors Diversity offers a wide range of events to expand cultural horizons and enlarge personal perspectives. These include feasts, films, dances, documentaries, and more.

For more information, see Activities on the Honors Program web site.

Financial Support

The Honors Program helps students apply for many scholarships, awards, and prizes. The program offers its own scholarships to continuing honors students selected from academic programs throughout the University.

Iowa students win major national and international scholarships each year. Honors provides advising and nominations for Rhodes, Marshall, Gates Cambridge, Churchill, Truman, Udall, Goldwater, Fulbright, Humanity in Action, National Science Foundation, and other prominent scholarships. Its Aces Program for Analysis, Advocacy, and Action readies top students for national and international scholarship competitions by educating them for public participation. The Iowa Center for Research by Undergraduates provides research scholarships for students and travel grants for those who pursue research at distant sites or present work at conferences. Announcements about scholarships and other awards appear on the Honors Program web site and electronic mailing list. Honors Program scholarships are not available to incoming first-year or transfer students.

See Scholarships on the Honors Program web site for more information.

Facilities

Blank Honors Center

The Honors Program makes its home in the Blank Honors Center, a modern facility that fosters community among honors students. The Blank Honors Center offers extended hours, social areas, a kitchenette, quiet study areas, wireless Internet access, a computer lab with 24 workstations, classrooms, office space for honor societies, honors advising for students, and offices for Honors Program staff. The center also has rooms for meetings, events, presentations, and conversation. Honors staff members are always on hand to help students.

Honors Residential Communities

The Honors Program sponsors three residential communities. Its two living-learning communities, principally for first-year honors students, are located in Burge and Daum residence halls. Its community for advanced honors students is in Centerstone. All three buildings are within a block of the Blank Honors Center.

The Honors House Living-Learning Community fills Daum Hall and is connected to the Blank Honors Center by a skywalk. Honors House provides a convenient place for residents to socialize and study with each other. It also sponsors cultural, academic, and social events for honors students living in Daum Hall. It organizes group outings to arts events, workshops on scholarship and research opportunities, volunteer activities, and dinners with faculty members.

A second living-learning community, located in Burge Hall, helps members who want to launch individual and team projects in art, research, service, and leadership, providing strong starts for their university educations. It holds its own social events, and its members participate in the full range of honors courses and activities.

Honors Centerstone is a residential community for honors students past their first year of study.

Centerstone offers networking and other support for students highly engaged in learning and service activities on or beyond the campus. It offers some of its social events in the Blank Honors Center, and its location makes other honors endeavors especially accessible to Centerstone residents.

Students must apply to live in the honors residential communities. See Living-Learning Communities on the University Housing & Dining web site for application and other information about the two living-learning communities. Students who wish to live in Honors Centerstone must apply first to the Honors Program and then to University Housing & Dining; see Places/Honors Residential Communities/Honors Centerstone on the Honors Program web site.

Courses

Honors courses are specifically for honors students.

143:020 Honors Primetime Workshop 1 s.h.

Workshop to connect honors students, honors teachers, and staff members; preparation for honors opportunities, especially activities and courses; team work on projects that develop skills of invention and communication; presentation of products and performances.

143:030 Honors First-Year Seminar 1-2 s.h.

Small discussion classes taught by faculty members on special topics; may include outside activities (e.g., films, lectures, performances, readings, visits to research facilities, field trips). Requirements: first- or second-semester standing.

143:031 Honors Readings for Writers 1 s.h.

Introduction to the Iowa City writing community; attendance at readings by professional, faculty, and student writers; journals.

143:040 Honors Studies arr.

Independent studies arranged with faculty members who certify satisfactory completion of study plans and performance for topics not covered by other UI courses.
143:041 Honors Internship 0-3 s.h.
Independent service internship arranged with faculty members, who certify satisfactory performance and completion of project.

143:042 Honors Service Learning arr.
Service learning projects arranged with faculty members who certify satisfactory completion of study plans and service.

143:043 Honors Developing an Idea 1-3 s.h.
Explore interests and imaginations to generate ideas, turn ideas into projects for action; collaborate with teachers, mentors, and students in small groups to develop brief personal or team proposals for action; ideas could target the campus, local community, country, or world; focus on planning efforts rather than completion; exercises on how to spot possibilities for productive leadership, service, art, research, publication, or performance; learn to present ideas to diverse audiences.

143:044 Honors Writing Workshop 1-3 s.h.
Learn writing through the Iowa workshop tradition of sharing new work with colleagues who provide detailed, constructive suggestions in response; emphasis on invention, structure, style; each edition targets a distinct kind of writing; an experienced writer leads the workshop with meeting formats; credit suited to exercises for the type of featured writing. Requirements: completion of Rhetoric requirement.

143:051 Honors Seminar in Historical Perspectives 3 s.h.
Small-class learning with a faculty member to explore and explain historical developments. GE: Historical Perspectives.

143:052 Honors Seminar in International and Global Issues 3 s.h.
Small-class learning with a faculty member to introduce perspectives of other nations and cultures through international or global issues. GE: International and Global Issues.

143:053 Honors Seminar in Literary, Visual, and Performing Arts 3 s.h.
Small-class learning with a faculty member to appreciate, analyze, create, or perform art. GE: Literary, Visual, and Performing Arts.

143:054 Honors Seminar in Values, Society, and Diversity 3 s.h.
Small-class learning with a faculty member to explore fundamental questions on human experience from cultural, social, performative, philosophical, or spiritual perspectives. GE: Values, Society, and Diversity.

143:060 Honors Seminar in Social Sciences 3 s.h.
Small-class learning with a faculty member on social science topics. GE: Social Sciences.

143:070 Honors Seminar in Natural Sciences 3 s.h.
Small-class learning with a faculty member on natural science topics. GE: Natural Sciences without Lab.

143:080 Honors Seminar in Quantitative and Formal Reasoning 3 s.h.
Patterns of reasoning useful for understanding and evaluating scientific evidence, theory, controversy: historical and contemporary examples from the physical, biological, behavioral, biomedical sciences. GE: Quantitative or Formal Reasoning.

143:083 War 3 s.h.
Emotions soldiers have as they fight, what makes them continue voluntarily to face death, and how modern society memorializes these experiences; how literature and art transform the experience of war; human responses to war in Homer’s Iliad and select Greek tragedies. Same as 20E:083.

143:090 Honors Research Colloquium 1-3 s.h.
Small-class research with faculty members; advanced readings.
143:100 Honors Research Practicum 1-3 s.h.
Individual research performed in conjunction with a faculty member’s research.

143:101 Honors Teaching Practicum 1-3 s.h.
Teaching internship in first- and second-year courses; may include providing tutorial assistance, conducting review sessions, aiding course organization.

143:102 Honors Writing Fellows: Writing Theory and Practice 3 s.h.
Preparation of honors students selected as writing fellows to serve as peer tutors in writing-intensive courses; theories of writing, evaluation of drafts, peer tutoring with students. Requirements: sophomore or junior honors standing, admission to Writing Fellows Program, and availability to work as a writing fellow in subsequent semesters.

143:130 Mock Trial 2 s.h.
Legal analysis and argumentation, public performance, participation in the University of Iowa Mock Trial Club; mock trial role preparation, tournament competition, stage annual club tournament.

143:140 Honors Policy Research Practicum 1 s.h.
Theory and practice of public policy research; development of policy-research skills; production of policy-research papers. Requirements: sophomore or junior standing.

143:150 Honors Special Topics 1-3 s.h.
Small-class learning with faculty members on advanced topics. Requirements: junior or senior honors standing.

143:160 Honors Seminar in Public Scholarship 1-3 s.h.
Preparation for public affairs activities drawing on scholarly resources; introduction to writing personal essays and proposals for scholarship, grant, and research competitions that may require explanation of the proposal’s public benefit; techniques and practice for oral presentations, including public interviews, conversations, debates, discussions.

143:185 ICRU Research Ambassadors
ICRU Research Ambassadors share knowledge and experiences in research; attend weekly meeting and interact with students through presentations, online chat, or in other venues to answer questions, provide information, and inform students about undergraduate research opportunities; student perspective on how to navigate research opportunities at The University of Iowa.

143:190 Honors Peer Advising
Experience sharing knowledge and experiences of the Honors Program with other students in meetings during office hours, online chats, other venues; peer advisors answer questions, provide information, help students find honors opportunities in and out of class.

143:199 Honors Thesis or Project
Culminating project of research or artistic creation; preparation and completion of the final product associated with graduation with honors in the student’s major. Requirements: member of the University of Iowa Honors Program and junior or senior standing.
University of Iowa Upward Bound

Director
Dana Thomann

Web site: http://upwardbound.uiowa.edu

University of Iowa Upward Bound is an academic program for eligible high school students from four southeastern Iowa communities. Students participate during the academic year at their local high school and attend a six-week residential program on the University of Iowa campus from mid-June through July. Participants take mathematics, science, language arts, computer technology, and foreign language courses to prepare them for classes they will take at their local high school in the fall. They also participate in extracurricular activities, field trips, and college visits.

Bridge students (those who will enter college in the fall) enroll in a University course during the eight-week summer session. Bridge students participate in an on-campus job shadow and take a college transition seminar.

Participants receive all services at no cost.

To be admitted to University of Iowa Upward Bound, students must:

- reside in the target area and attend a target school;
- be in grade 9 or 10;
- have a family income that meets U.S. Department of Education low-income guidelines;
- be a potential first-generation college student; and
- show need for Upward Bound services.

Upward Bound provides services to students until they graduate from high school and enroll in postsecondary education.

University of Iowa Upward Bound serves students who attend the following Iowa high schools: Columbus Community High School, Davenport Community high schools, Muscatine High School, and West Liberty High School. Other postsecondary institutions in Iowa and across the nation sponsor Upward Bound programs. High school students who do not attend schools served by the University of Iowa program should ask their counselors whether an Upward Bound program serves their area.

For more information, contact University of Iowa Upward Bound.

VIGRE Heartland REU

Director
Jonathan Simon (Mathematics)

Web site: http://www.uiowa.edu/~vigre

The University of Iowa Department of Mathematics offers a summer program of research experience for undergraduates. VIGRE Heartland REU is designed for well-prepared students who have completed two years of college, but younger or more advanced students also may be admitted. Preference is given to students from Heartland Mathematics Partnership schools.

The eight-week program begins with three introductory workshops followed by work in a small research group with a faculty member. Students choose one of nine research projects that are connected to background developed in the introductory workshops.

Students participate in hands-on introduction to mathematical writing in LaTeX; experience using computer systems such as Maple, Mathematica, or MatLab; and talks and panels about subsequent research opportunities, graduate school, the Graduate Record Examination, and career opportunities. The program also offers cultural and social activities.

Instruction is provided by Department of Mathematics faculty members, Heartland Mathematics Partnership instructors, VIGRE trainees, and staff members of the National Alliance for Doctoral Studies in the Mathematical Sciences, which is supported by the National Science Foundation (NSF).

VIGRE Heartland REU is supported by Vertical Integration of Research and Education in the Mathematical Sciences, an NSF program. For more information visit the VIGRE Heartland REU web site.

Courses

419:098 NSF Alliance REU

0 s.h.

Seminars about research and graduate school; prepares students to pursue graduate education in a math science; cultural activities and a research symposium; preference to students from alliance partnership schools. Requirements: completion of sophomore year in college, g.p.a. of at least 3.00, and in a math science degree program.

419:099 Research Experiences for Undergraduates Summer Course

0 s.h.

Introduction to mathematical research in preparation for graduate education.
Division of Continuing Education

Dean
Chet S. Rzonca

Web site: http://www.continuetolearn.uiowa.edu

The Division of Continuing Education increases access to the services and resources of The University of Iowa. In partnership with the University’s colleges and departments, the division provides high-quality credit and noncredit courses, workshops, and programs to traditional and nontraditional learners. Using a variety of locations, schedules, and technologies, the division helps provide a University of Iowa learning environment beyond the physical borders of campus.

The division administers the following programs.

On-Campus Courses

Director: Marlys Boote
Web site: http://www.continuetolearn.uiowa.edu/ccp/sande

Saturday & Evening Classes sponsors University courses on campus at times convenient for part-time and nontraditional students. Undergraduate and graduate course work is available in a wide range of academic disciplines.

Summer and Winter Sessions

Associate dean: Doug Lee
Web site, summer session: http://www.continuetolearn.uiowa.edu/ccp/summer
Web site, winter session: http://www.continuetolearn.uiowa.edu/ccp/winter

The University of Iowa conducts a summer session with terms of three, six, and eight weeks. Classes also are offered outside these normal summer session terms. In addition, a three-week winter session is offered during the break between the fall and spring semesters.

During the summer and winter sessions, students may take undergraduate and graduate course work. Classes during these sessions are taught mainly by University of Iowa faculty members, so students receive the same first-rate instruction provided during the spring and fall semesters. Courses are offered in a variety of formats both on and off campus. They are open to University of Iowa students and to persons not formally admitted to a degree program.

Distance Courses and Programs

Associate dean: Anne Zalenski
Web site: http://www.continuetolearn.uiowa.edu/ccp/de

The University of Iowa offers several degree programs and courses in a wide range of disciplines through varied distance education delivery modes, such as the Internet, video conferencing, and the Iowa Communications Network. It also offers programs at off-campus locations that best serve students, at the request of public school officials, and/or where professional, business, industrial, or other qualified groups express a need for instruction. For information about programs, procedures, and enrollment as well as a catalog of Guided Independent Study courses, contact Distance Education or visit its web site.

Bachelor of Applied Studies

Web site: http://www.continuetolearn.uiowa.edu/ccp/blsbas/bas_introduction.htm

The Bachelor of Applied Studies (B.A.S.) is a bachelor’s degree that may be completed entirely by distance education. The degree requires a minimum of 120 s.h. and is offered without an academic major. Students may earn credit toward the degree by taking courses offered in varied distance education formats; they also may use courses offered in on-campus formats. Applicants must hold an Associate of Applied Science (A.A.S.), an Associate of Arts (A.A.), or an Associate of Science (A.S.) degree. The B.A.S. is awarded by University College and is administered by the Division of Continuing Education. For a detailed program description, see Bachelor of Applied Studies (p. 1510) (University College) in the Catalog or visit the Distance Education web site.

Bachelor of Liberal Studies

Web site: http://www.continuetolearn.uiowa.edu/ccp/blsbas/bls_introduction.htm

The Bachelor of Liberal Studies (B.L.S.) is a bachelor’s degree that may be completed entirely by distance education. The degree requires a minimum of 120 s.h. and is offered without an academic major. Students may earn credit toward the degree by taking courses offered in varied distance education formats; they also may use courses offered in on-campus formats. Applicants must have either an Associate of Arts (A.A.) degree or have earned at least 60 s.h. of credit. The B.L.S. is awarded by the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences and is administered by the Division of Continuing Education. For a detailed program description, see Bachelor of Liberal Studies (p. 146) (College of Liberal Arts and Sciences) in the Catalog or visit the Distance Education web site.

A. Craig Baird Debate Forum

Coordinator of forensics: Paul Bellus
Web site: http://www.continuetolearn.uiowa.edu/debate/

The A. Craig Baird Debate Forum provides a forum for advancement in argumentation theory and practice. It provides nationally renowned advocacy training programs on issues of public concern and supports an atmosphere of civil discourse. The forum’s local, regional, national, and international outreach programs enhance students’ learning environment and reach beyond the physical borders of the University of Iowa campus.

The A. Craig Baird Debate Forum administers the following programs.

Intercollegiate debate: provides coaching and research to advance students’ competitive success; includes attendance at 10-15 collegiate debate tournaments yearly; the program has won two national championships.

International parliamentary debate: participation in the world tournament.

National Summer Institute in Forensics: a summer program in which students live on the Iowa campus; features Lincoln-Douglas debate and a policy debate institute; the 77-year-old program draws top scholars to campus and has counted students and teachers from every state of the nation and from Japan, Korea, and Guam as participants.

Iowa High School Forensics League: a partnership between Iowa high schools and The University of Iowa that promotes scholarship, communication and expression, and leadership in forensics; founded in 1906, the league holds three tournaments and an academic conference each year that bring more than 1,000 participants to the Iowa campus.

University public debate series: founded in 1960, the series presents 12 radio broadcast debates each year, investigating local, regional, national, and international controversies; debate attendance is required for some University of Iowa courses.

Community public debate series: a forum in which local political, social, economic, and intellectual controversies are debated.

International public debate series: engages in cross-cultural exchanges and provides a forum for high school debaters to participate with The University of Iowa in international debates.

The National Lincoln-Douglas Debate Round-Robin: brings the nation’s top 28 high school Lincoln-Douglas debaters to campus for the national competition.

The University of Iowa National Invitational: hosts an annual intercollegiate debate tournament the first weekend in December each year.

Urban debate initiative: provides coaching, judging, and instructional support to underrepresented populations in the Chicago, Kansas City, and St. Louis areas.

Online at the National Forensics League: provides online instructional videos and commentary in support of high school debate.

Center for Conferences

Director: Jo Dickens
Web site: http://www.continuetolearn.uiowa.edu/conferences

The University of Iowa Center for Conferences (UICC) is the University’s principal agency for initiating, coordinating, conducting, and supporting noncredit continuing education programs. It also serves as the University of Iowa’s Continuing Education Unit (CEU) database.

UICC coordinates national and international conferences for University faculty, departments, colleges, administrative units, student groups and related academic societies, professional associations, and other groups sponsored by the University. Its services include initial planning, site location, budget development, income and expense management, payment processing, and online conference registration.

The Center for Conferences uses facilities on the University of Iowa campus as well as those located in Iowa City and Coralville, throughout Iowa, and nationwide. For more information, visit the Center for Conferences web site.

Iowa Lakeside Laboratory

Executive director: Peter J. van der Linden
Web site: http://www.continuetolearn.uiowa.edu/lakesidelab/

Iowa Lakeside Laboratory is a field station run cooperatively by The University of Iowa, Iowa State University, and the University of Northern Iowa and administered by The University of Iowa. The laboratory offers summer courses and research opportunities for undergraduate and graduate students. Courses focus on the ecology, taxonomy, and conservation of northern plains animals, plants, microorganisms, and ecosystems. Students take one course at a time, 40 hours per week, for one to four weeks. Class sizes are small, and most students spend at least part of every day outdoors.

The Board of Regents, State of Iowa, has designated Lakeside Laboratory a Regents Resource Center, dedicated to providing lifelong learning opportunities for Iowans.

For information about academic programs and courses at the laboratory, see Iowa Lakeside Laboratory (p. 1529) (University College) in the Catalog or visit the Iowa Lakeside Laboratory web site.

Iowa Summer Writing Festival

Director: Amy Margolis
Web site: http://www.continuetolearn.uiowa.edu/iswfest/

The Iowa Summer Writing Festival is a short-term, noncredit creative writing program for adults. It brings some 1,400 writers to the University of Iowa campus each summer to participate in weeklong and weekend workshops. The program is open to individuals age 21 and older; the sole requirement is the desire to write.

Participants choose from more than 130 workshops across the genres, including the novel, short fiction, poetry, memoir, essay, screenwriting, playwriting, travel writing, humor, writing for children, mystery, science fiction, and more. There are sessions for all skill levels and objectives. In the workshop format, participants read and discuss each other’s own creative work.

Weeklong sessions meet for three hours each day, Monday through Friday, with individual student/instructor conferences as well. Weekend sessions meet for eight hours over two days.

Visit the Iowa Summer Writing Festival web site for information about workshops, schedule, and registration. Information about the coming summer festival workshops and dates usually is posted in February or March.

Iowa Young Writers’ Studio

Director: Stephen Lovely
Web site: http://www.uiowa.edu/youngwriters

The Iowa Young Writers’ Studio is a two-week summer residential program for high school students who love to write. Students build a community of peers while working with experienced writing teachers, primarily students and graduates of the University’s M.F.A. program in creative writing.

The studio offers three courses of study: poetry, fiction, and creative writing (a mix of poetry, fiction, and creative nonfiction). Each course consists of a seminar and a workshop. In seminars, students read literature by established writers. In workshops they share their own writing, get feedback from their classmates and teacher, and discuss issues of narrative and form.

The studio offers two two-week sessions: one in June and one in July. Young writers who have completed grade 10, 11, or 12 are eligible to attend the studio. Application materials include an application form, a creative writing sample, a statement of purpose, a high school transcript, and a letter of recommendation from an English teacher or another instructor familiar with the applicant’s writing. For complete application information, contact the Iowa Young Writers’ Studio or visit its web site.

John and Mary Pappajohn Education Center

Director: Chet Rzonca
Manager: Richard Gardner
Web site: http://www.continuetolearn.uiowa.edu/jmpec

The John and Mary Pappajohn Education Center (JMPEC) serves a wide range of adult learning needs. It also provides central Iowa students with access to a variety of University of Iowa undergraduate and graduate degree programs and courses. The center is located in downtown Des Moines, Iowa, close to many corporate businesses and government offices. With classrooms that can accommodate groups of up to 80 people, JMPEC is ideal for small conferences, educational workshops, and meetings. It is equipped to handle on-site instructional technology and to deliver distance education to students anywhere. JMPEC also makes noncredit learning opportunities for professional and workforce development available to corporations and individuals. Learn more at the John and Mary Pappajohn Education Center web site.

Labor Center

Director: Jennifer Sherer
Web site: http://www.continuetolearn.uiowa.edu/laborctr

The University of Iowa Labor Center provides educational programs and research support to Iowa’s working people and their organizations. The center offers a wide range of noncredit courses. designed for labor union members and leaders; they cover steward education and contract administration, collective bargaining, labor and employment law, public policy issues, leadership development, organizing and mobilizing, economics, labor history, workplace health and safety, and other topics relevant to union members. Courses are offered both on and off campus at times and locations convenient to working adults. The Labor Center also provides research assistance and technical information.

Iowa Administrative Code

The following is extracted from the Board of Regents section of the Iowa Administrative Code as of April 2011.

Admission Rules Common to the Three State Universities

681--1.1(262) Admission of undergraduate students directly from high school

Students desiring admission to the University of Iowa, Iowa State University, or the University of Northern Iowa must meet the requirements in this rule and also any special requirements for the curriculum, school, or college of their choice.

1.1(1) Application

Applicants must submit a formal application for admission, together with the appropriate application fee as approved by the state board of regents pursuant to Iowa Code subsection 262.9(18) and detailed in rule 681.1.7(262), and have their secondary school provide a transcript of their academic record, including credits and grades, rank in class, and certification of graduation. Applicants must also submit SAT Reasoning Test or ACT scores. Applicants whose primary language is not English must also meet the English language proficiency requirement specified by each university. Applicants may be required to submit additional information or data to support their applications.

1.1(2) Admission criteria

a. Effective for students who seek admission prior to fall 2009. Graduates of approved Iowa high schools who have the subject matter background required by each university and who rank in the upper one-half of their graduating class will be admitted to any regent university. Applicants who are not in the upper one-half of their graduating class may, after an individual review of their academic and test records, and at the discretion of the admissions officers:
   (1) Be admitted unconditionally,
   (2) Be admitted conditionally,
   (3) Be required to enroll for a tryout period during a preceding summer session, or
   (4) Be denied admission.

b. Effective for students who seek admission in fall 2009 and thereafter.
   (1) Decisions on admission to a regent university are based on the following four factors: performance on standardized tests (SAT Reasoning Test or ACT); high school grade point average (GPA); high school percentile rank in class; and number of high school courses completed in the core subject areas. These factors are used in the following equation to calculate a regent admission index (RAI):

   RAI = (2 \times \text{ACT composite score}) + (1 \times \text{high school rank expressed as a percentile}) + (20 \times \text{high school grade point average}) + (5 \times \text{number of high school courses completed in the core subject areas})

   Note: For purposes of calculating the regent admission index, the ACT composite score has a top value of 36 (SAT scores will be converted to ACT composite equivalents); high school rank is expressed as a percentile with 99 percent as the top value; high school GPA is expressed in a four-point scale; and number of high school courses completed in the core subject areas is expressed in terms of years or fractions of years of study.

(2) Graduates of approved Iowa high schools who have the subject matter background required by each university and who meet the regent admission index of 245 required for automatic admission will be admitted to any regent university. Applicants who do not meet the regent admission index of 245 for automatic admission or for whom a regent admission index cannot be calculated may, after an individual review of their academic and test records, and at the discretion of the admissions officers:
   1. Be admitted unconditionally,
   2. Be admitted conditionally,
   3. Be required to enroll for a tryout period during a preceding summer session, or
   4. Be denied admission.

1.1(3) Graduates of approved high schools in other states may be held to higher academic standards, but must meet at least the same requirements as graduates of Iowa high schools. The options for conditional admission or summer tryout enrollment may not necessarily be offered to these students.

1.1(4) Applicants who are graduates of nonapproved high schools will be considered for admission in a manner similar to applicants from approved high schools, but additional emphasis will be given to scores obtained on standardized examinations.

1.1(5) Applicants who are not high school graduates, but whose classes have graduated, may be considered for admission. These applicants will be required to submit all academic data to the extent that it exists and achieve scores on standardized examinations which will demonstrate that they are adequately prepared for academic study.

1.1(6) Early admission

a. Students with superior academic records may be admitted, on an individual basis, for part-time university study while enrolled in high school or during the summers prior to high school graduation.

b. In rare situations, exceptional students may be admitted as full-time students to a regent university before completing high school. Early admission to a regent university is provided to serve persons whose academic achievement and personal and intellectual maturity clearly suggest readiness for collegiate level study. Each university will specify requirements and conditions for early admission.

This rule is intended to implement Iowa Code section 262.9(3).

681--1.2(262) Admission of undergraduate students by transfer from other colleges

Students desiring admission to the University of Iowa, Iowa State University, or the University of Northern Iowa must meet the requirements in this rule and also any special requirements for the curriculum, school, or college of their choice.

Applicants must submit a formal application for admission, together with the appropriate application fee as approved by the state board of regents pursuant to Iowa Code subsection 262.9(18) and detailed in rule 681-1.7(262), and request that each college they have attended send an official transcript of record to the admissions office. High school academic records and standardized test results may also be required. The Test of English as a Foreign Language (TOEFL) is required of foreign students whose first language is not English.

1.2(1) Transfer applicants with a minimum of 24 semester hours of graded credit from regionally accredited colleges or universities, who have achieved for all college work previously attempted the grade point required by each university for specific programs, will be admitted. Higher academic standards may be required of students who are not residents of Iowa.

Applicants who have not maintained the grade point required by each university for specific programs or who are under academic suspension from the last college attended may, after a review of their academic and test records, and at the discretion of the admissions officers:

a. Be admitted unconditionally,
b. Be admitted conditionally,
c. Be required to enroll for a tryout period during a preceding summer session, or
d. Be denied admission.

1.2(2) Admission of students with fewer than 24 semester hours of college credit will be based on high school academic and standardized test records in addition to review of the college record.

1.2(3) Transfer applicants under disciplinary suspension will not be considered for admission until information concerning the reason for the suspension has been received from the college assigning the suspension. Applicants granted admission under these circumstances will be admitted on probation.

1.2(4) Transfer applicants from colleges and universities not regionally accredited will be considered for admission on an individual basis taking into account all available academic information.

This rule is intended to implement Iowa Code section 262.9(3).

681--1.3(262) Transfer credit practices

The regent universities endorse the Joint Statement on Transfer and Award of Academic Credit approved in 1978 by the American Council on Education (ACE), the American Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admissions Officers (AACRAO), and the Council on Postsecondary Accreditation (COPA). The current issue of Transfer Credit Practices of Selected Educational Institutions, published by the American Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admissions Officers (AACRAO), and publications of the Council on Postsecondary Accreditation (COPA) are examples of references used by the universities in determining transfer credit. The acceptance and use of transfer credit is subject to limitations in accordance with the educational policies operative at each university.

1.3(1) Students from regionally accredited colleges and universities

Credit earned at regionally accredited colleges and universities is acceptable for transfer except that credit in courses determined by the receiving university to be of a remedial, vocational, or technical nature, or credit in courses or programs in which the institution granting the credit is not directly involved, may not be accepted, or may be accepted to a limited extent.

Of the course work earned at a two-year college, students may apply up to one-half but no more than 65 hours of the credits required for a bachelor’s degree toward that degree at a regent university. This policy becomes effective September 29, 1993.

1.3(2) Students from colleges and universities which have candidate status

Credit earned at colleges and universities which have become candidates for accreditation by a regional association is acceptable for transfer in a manner similar to that from regionally accredited colleges and universities if the credit is applicable to the bachelor’s degree at the receiving university.

Credit earned at the junior and senior classification from an accredited two-year college which has received approval by a regional accrediting association for change to a four-year college may be accepted by a regent university.

1.3(3) Students from colleges and universities not regionally accredited

When students are admitted from colleges and universities not regionally accredited, they may validate portions or all of their transfer credit by satisfactory academic study in residence, or by examination. Each university will specify the amount of the transfer credit and the terms of the validation process at the time of admission.

In determining the acceptability of transfer credit from private colleges in Iowa which do not have regional accreditation, the regent committee on educational relations, upon request from the institutions, evaluates the nature and standards of the academic program, faculty, student records, library, and laboratories.

In determining the acceptability of transfer credit from colleges in states other than Iowa which are not regionally accredited, acceptance practices indicated in the current issue of Transfer Credit Practices of Selected Educational Institutions will be used as a guide. For institutions not listed in the publication, guidance is requested from the designated reporting institution of the appropriate state.

1.3(4) Students from foreign colleges and universities

Transfer credit from foreign educational institutions may be granted after a determination of the type of institution involved and after an evaluation of the content, level, and comparability of the study to courses and programs at the receiving university. Credit may be granted in specific courses, but is frequently assigned to general areas of study. Extensive use is made of professional journals and references which describe the education systems and programs of individual countries.

This rule is intended to implement Iowa Code section 262.9(3).

Residence

681--1.4(262) Classification of residents and nonresidents for admission, tuition, and fee purposes

1.4(1) General

a. A person enrolling at one of the three state universities shall be classified as a resident or nonresident for admission, tuition, and fee purposes by the registrar or someone designated by the registrar. The decision shall be based upon information furnished by the student and other relevant information.

b. In determining resident or nonresident classification, the issue is essentially one of why the person is in the state of Iowa. If the person is in the state primarily for educational purposes, that person will be considered a nonresident. For example, it may be possible that an individual could qualify as a resident of Iowa for such purposes as voting, or holding an Iowa driver’s license, and not meet the residency requirements as established by the Board of Regents for admission, tuition, and fee purposes.

c. The registrar, or designated person, is authorized to require written documents, affidavits, verifications, or other evidence deemed necessary to determine why a student is in Iowa. The burden of establishing that a student is in Iowa for other than educational purposes is upon the student.

A student may be required to file any or all of the following:

(1) A statement from the student describing employment and expected sources of support;
(2) A statement from the student’s employer;
(3) A statement from the student’s parents verifying nonsupport and the fact that the student was not listed as a dependent on tax returns for the past year and will not be so listed in future years;
(4) A statement from the student’s spouse related to sources of family support, length of residence in Iowa, and reasons for being in the state of Iowa;
(5) Supporting statements from persons who might be familiar with the family situation;
A person or the dependent of a person whose domicile is permanently established in Iowa, who has been classified as a resident for admission, tuition, and fee purposes, may continue to be classified as a resident so long as domicile is maintained, even though circumstances may require extended absence of the person from the state. It is required that a person who claims Iowa domicile while living in another state or country will provide proof of the continual Iowa domicile as evidence that the person:

1. Has not acquired a domicile in another state, and
2. Has maintained a continuous voting record in Iowa, and
3. Has filed regular Iowa resident income tax returns during absence from the state.

(4) A student who moves to Iowa may be eligible for resident classification at the next registration following 12 consecutive months in the state provided the student is not enrolled as more than a half-time student (6 credits for an undergraduate or professional student, 5 credits for a graduate student) in any academic year term, is not enrolled for more than 4 credits in a summer term for any classification, and provides sufficient evidence of the establishment of an Iowa domicile.

(5) A student who has been a continuous student and whose parents move to Iowa may become a resident at the beginning of the next term provided the student is dependent upon the parents for a majority of financial assistance.

(6) A person who has been certified as a refugee or granted asylum by the appropriate agency of the United States who enrolls as a student at a university governed by the Iowa state board of regents may be accorded immediate resident status for admission, tuition, and fee purposes when the person:

1. Comes directly to the state of Iowa from a refugee facility or port of debarkation, or
2. Comes to the state of Iowa within a reasonable time and has not established domicile in another state.

Any refugee or individual granted asylum not meeting these standards will be presumed to be a nonresident for admission, tuition, and fee purposes and thus subject to the usual method of proof of establishment of Iowa residency.

(7) An alien who has immigrant status establishes Iowa residency in the same manner as a United States citizen.

(8) At the regent institutions, American Indians who have origins in any of the original people of North America and who maintain a cultural identification through tribal affiliation or community recognition with one or more of the

(6) Iowa state income tax return.

d. Applications for resident classification for a given semester or session are due no later than the fifteenth class day of that semester or session. Applications received after the fifteenth class day of that semester or session will be considered for the next semester or session. Appeals of any nonresident classification decision resulting from applications for resident classifications are due no later than midterm of that semester or session. Change of classification from nonresident to resident will not be made retroactive beyond the term in which application for resident classification is made.

e. A student who gives incorrect or misleading information to evade payment of nonresident fees shall be subject to serious disciplinary action and must also pay the nonresident fees for each term previously attended.

f. Review Committee. These regulations shall be administered by the registrar or someone designated by the registrar. The decision of the registrar or designated person may be appealed to a university review committee. The finding of the review committee may be appealed to the state board of regents.

1.4(2) Guidelines

a. The following general guidelines are used in determining the resident classification of a student for admission, tuition, and fee purposes:

(1) A financially dependent student whose parents move from Iowa after the student is enrolled remains a resident provided the student maintains continuous enrollment. A financially dependent student whose parents move from Iowa during the senior year of high school will be considered a resident provided the student has not established domicile in another state.

(2) In deciding why a person is in the state of Iowa, the person’s domicile will be considered. A person who comes to Iowa from another state and enrolls in any institution of postsecondary education for a full program or substantially a full program shall be presumed to have come to Iowa primarily for educational reasons rather than to establish a domicile in Iowa.

(3) A student who was a former resident of Iowa may continue to be considered a resident provided absence from the state was for a period of less than 12 months and provided domicile is reestablished. If the absence from the state is for a period exceeding 12 months, a student may be considered a resident if evidence can be presented showing that the student has long-term ties to Iowa and reestablishes an Iowa domicile.
tribes or nations connected historically with the present state of Iowa, including the Iowa, Kickapoo, Menominee, Miami, Missouri, Ojibwa (Chippewa), Omaha, Otoe, Ottawa (Odawa), Potawatomi, Sac and Fox (Sauk, Meskwaki), Sioux, and Winnebago (Ho Chunk), will be assessed Iowa resident tuition and fees.

b. Additional guidelines are used in determining the resident classification of a veteran, qualified military person, and dependent children and spouses of a veteran or qualified military person for purposes of admission and undergraduate tuition and mandatory fees:

(1) A person who is stationed on active duty at the Rock Island arsenal as a result of military orders, or the dependent child or spouse of such person, is entitled to resident status for purposes of undergraduate tuition and mandatory fees. However, if the arrival of the person under orders is subsequent to the beginning of the term in which the dependent child or spouse is first enrolled, nonresident fees will be charged in all cases for the dependent child or spouse until the beginning of the next term in which the dependent child or spouse is enrolled. If the qualified military person is transferred, deployed, or restationed while the person’s spouse or dependent child is enrolled in an institution of higher education under the control of the board of regents, the spouse or dependent child shall continue to be classified as a resident under this subparagraph until the close of the fiscal year in which the spouse or dependent child is enrolled.

(2) A veteran who is domiciled or moves to the state of Iowa and who is eligible for benefits, or has exhausted benefits under the federal Post-9/11 Veterans Educational Assistance Act of 2008, is entitled to resident status for purposes of undergraduate tuition and mandatory fees. The dependent child or spouse of a veteran who meets these requirements is entitled to resident status for undergraduate tuition. However, if the arrival of the veteran in Iowa is subsequent to the beginning of the term in which the dependent child or spouse is enrolled, nonresident fees will be charged in all cases for the dependent child or spouse until the beginning of the next term in which the dependent child or spouse is enrolled.

(3) A person who is moved into the state as the result of military or civil orders from the government for other than educational purposes, or the dependent child or spouse of such a person, is entitled to resident status. However, if the arrival of the person under orders is subsequent to the beginning of the term in which the dependent child or spouse is first enrolled, nonresident fees will be charged in all cases until the beginning of the next term in which the dependent child or spouse is enrolled. Legislation, effective July 1, 1977, requires that military personnel who claim residency in Iowa (home of record) will be required to file Iowa resident income tax returns.

1.4(3) Facts

a. The following circumstances, although not necessarily conclusive, have probative value in support of a claim for resident classification:

(1) Reside in Iowa for 12 consecutive months, and be primarily engaged in activities other than those of a full-time student, immediately prior to the beginning of the term for which resident classification is sought.
(2) Reliance upon Iowa resources for financial support.
(3) Domicile in Iowa of persons legally responsible for the student.
(4) Former domicile in the state and maintenance of significant connections therein while absent.
(5) Acceptance of an offer of permanent employment in Iowa.
(6) Military orders, if for other than educational purposes.
(7) Other facts indicating the student’s domicile will be considered by the universities in classifying the student.

b. The following circumstances, standing alone, do not constitute sufficient evidence of domicile to effect classification of a student as a resident under these regulations:

(1) Voting or registration for voting.
(2) Employment in any position normally filled by a student.
(3) The lease of living quarters.
(4) Admission to a licensed practicing profession in Iowa.
(5) Automobile registration.
(6) Public records, for example, birth and marriage records, Iowa driver’s license.
(7) Continuous presence in Iowa during periods when not enrolled in school.
(8) Ownership of property in Iowa, or the payment of Iowa taxes.

This rule is intended to implement Iowa Code section 262.9(3).

681--1.5(262) Registration and transcripts--general

A person may not be permitted to register for a course or courses at a state board of regents institution until any delinquent accounts owed by the person to an institution or any affiliated organization for which an institution acts as fiscal agent have been paid.

A state board of regents institution may withhold official transcripts of the academic record of a person until any delinquent accounts owed by the person to an institution or any affiliated organization for which an institution acts as fiscal agent have been paid.

This rule is intended to implement Iowa Code section 262.9.

Supplemental Specific Rules to The University of Iowa

681--1.6(262) College-bound program

1.6(1) Definitions.

"Accredited private institution" means an institution of higher education as defined in Iowa Code section 261.9, subsection 5.

"Commission" means the college aid commission.

"Financial need" means the difference between the student's financial resources, including resources available from the student's parents and the student, as determined by a completed parents' financial statement and including any non-campus-administered federal or state grants and scholarships, and the student's estimated expenses while attending the institution. A student shall accept all available federal and state grants and scholarships before being considered eligible for grants under the Iowa minority academic grants for economic success program. Financial need shall be reconsidered on at least an annual basis.

"Full-time student" means an individual who is enrolled at an accredited private institution or board of regents university for at least 12 semester hours or the trimester or quarter equivalent.

"Minority person" means an individual who is black, Hispanic, Asian, or a Pacific Islander, American Indian, or an Alaskan Native American.

"Part-time student" means an individual who is enrolled at an accredited private institution or board of regents university in a course of study including at least three semester hours or the trimester or quarter equivalent of three semester hours.

"Program" means the Iowa minority academic grants for economic success program established in this division.

1.6(2) Policy on college-bound program.

a. The regent institutions will cooperate with other state and local agencies, including the department of education, the college aid commission, and educational institutions in implementing the college-bound program.

b. The universities will develop programs for elementary, middle and secondary school students and their families in the following areas:

(1) Encouragement to consider attending a postsecondary institution;
(2) Enrichment and academic preparation;
(3) Information about how to apply for admission.

c. College-bound program vouchers will be awarded to students on the basis of the participation of the student and the student's family in the college-bound program. One voucher will be awarded for participation in each college-bound program sponsored by a university.

(1) Each university will maintain records concerning those students who participate in the college-bound program, according to its established policies and procedures. The records will include information on those students who have received college-bound program vouchers which are described in Iowa Code section 262.92(2). The University of Iowa will maintain a central record on all students who have received college-bound program vouchers on behalf of all regent institutions and will make appropriate information available to the college aid commission.

(2) College-bound program vouchers may be used by students enrolled at a regent institution or at a private college or university in Iowa.

(3) A student holding vouchers and enrolling at a regent institution will receive priority in the award of funds under the Iowa minority academic grants for economic success (IMAGES) program. Awards under the IMAGES program are made on the basis of financial need. A student may be eligible for an additional award from the institution in which the student is enrolled.

(4) A student holding vouchers and enrolling at a private college or university in Iowa will receive priority in the award of funds under the Iowa minority academic grants for economic success program as provided by the rules of the college aid commission.

(5) The presidents, or their designees, will administer and coordinate the college-bound program at the universities. As part of the coordination, they will establish liaison with the appropriate state and local agencies, serve as the university contact and promote collaborative efforts among the regent universities and other appropriate agencies and institutions. Annual reports to the board of regents shall be prepared by each regent university. The reports shall contain relevant information as to the accomplishments of the program in the past year and a plan of action with goals and objectives for the forthcoming year. Reports shall be submitted to the board of regents on October 1 of each year.

This rule is intended to implement Iowa Code section 262.92.

681--1.7(262) Application fees

Application fees required for admission to the University of Iowa, Iowa State University and the University of Northern Iowa are as follows:

University of Iowa

- Undergraduate domestic student: $40
- Undergraduate international student: $85
- Graduate/professional domestic student: $60
- Graduate/professional international student: $100
- Pharm.D. student: $100
- Re-entry fee: $20
- Nondegree student: $40

This rule is intended to implement Iowa Code section 262.9(3).

681--2.1(262) Formal application for admission

All applicants for admission to any college of the University of Iowa must submit a formal application for admission with the required official transcripts and other supporting material as required to the director of admissions. Students may not be registered until they have been issued an admission statement by the director of admissions.

681--2.3(262) College of Business Administration

2.3(1) Application for admission

Applications for admission to the college of business administration should be submitted to the director of admissions.

Applicants are urged to apply as early as possible, since this will give the admissions committee more time to devote to each application. Closing dates for receiving applications will be announced well in advance of the opening date of any session.

2.3(2) Requirements for admission

For admission to the college of business administration an applicant must have--

a. Completed specific course work as prescribed by the faculty of the college.

b. Attained satisfactory scores on the university’s required admission examinations.

c. Maintained a satisfactory grade-point average on all courses undertaken, and on all courses undertaken at the University of Iowa, and on all courses undertaken in business and economics.

Applications from students who have minor deficiencies in meeting grade-point requirements specified above will be reviewed by the admissions committee of the college, and upon favorable recommendation of the committee, such students may be granted conditional or probationary admissions.

Fulfillment of the minimal requirements listed above, however, does not assure admission to the college of business administration. From those applicants who meet the minimum requirements, the admissions committee will select the applicants who, in their judgment, appear to be best qualified.

681--2.4(262) College of Dentistry

2.4(1) Application for admission

Address all inquiries regarding admission to the Director of Admissions, University of Iowa.

Applicants are urged to apply as early as possible, since this will give the admissions committee more time to devote to each application. Closing dates for receiving applications will be announced well in advance of the opening date of any session.

Applicants for admission to dentistry are encouraged to complete a program leading to a baccalaureate degree before entering dentistry. Applicants should consider a combined program of liberal arts and dentistry which would qualify them for a baccalaureate degree upon the completion of the freshman year in dentistry. Preference will be given to students who have the baccalaureate degree or who have completed the requirements for the degree in a combined program.

Fulfillment of the specific requirements for admission listed does not ensure admission to the college of dentistry. From the applicants meeting the minimum requirements, the admissions committee will select the applicants who in their judgment appear to be best qualified for the study and practice of dentistry.

Each applicant must place on file in the office of the director of admissions the completed application form and an official transcript from each college attended.

The college work outlined below will suffice to meet the minimal academic requirements for admission to the college of dentistry.
The college curriculum must include at least three academic years of accredited work comprising not less than 96 semester hours and including specific required science courses as prescribed by the faculty of the college. Electives should be chosen so as to give the applicant a well-rounded educational background.

In order to meet minimum scholarship requirements, the applicant should attain a cumulative grade-point average of 2.5. Since the quality of course work in predental science is basic to success in dentistry, special consideration to such college work is given by the admissions committee. The grade-point average is based upon the University of Iowa’s marking system in which a grade of “A” is equivalent to four points. Other marking systems will be evaluated by the office of admissions and the committee on admissions of the college of dentistry.

Applicants who have completed the requirements for admission to dentistry five or more years prior to seeking admission to this college of dentistry will be considered by the admissions committee only under exceptional conditions.

Preference will be given to applicants who are residents of Iowa, but consideration will also be given to outstanding nonresidents.

Personal interviews will be required of applicants for admission to the college of dentistry. Applicants will be notified when they should appear for the required interviews with members of the admissions committee.

All applicants must complete the dental aptitude tests sponsored by the council on dental education of the American Dental Association. Tests are given three times annually. The University of Iowa is a testing center.

To facilitate early selection, applicants for admission to the college of dentistry are urged to complete the aptitude test no later than October to enable the admissions committee to begin its selection in December.

Accepted applicants are required to make the required deposit within two weeks after notification of favorable action on their applications. This deposit is not refundable but is credited toward the first fee payment. The applicant who fails to make the deposit within the time specified forfeits a place in the entering class.

Applicants accepted for admission are required to submit a satisfactory physical examination report to the university student health service within two weeks following notification of acceptance.

All applicants must also complete, through student health service, an X-ray film of the chest and a successful vaccination against smallpox prior to registration.

2.4(2) Advanced standing

Applications for admission with advanced standing are handled as individual cases.

681--2.5(262) College of Engineering

Address all inquiries regarding admission to the Director of Admissions, University of Iowa, Iowa City, Iowa.

Closing dates for receiving applications will be announced well in advance of the opening date of any session.

2.5(1) Admission of freshman students

The applicant must submit a formal application for admission and must have the secondary school provide a certificate of high school credits, including a complete statement of the applicant’s high school record, rank in class, scores on standardized tests, and certification of high school graduation. The applicant must also submit any other evidence such as a certificate of health that may be required by this university.

Each applicant must have attained satisfactory scores on the university’s required admission examinations, maintained a satisfactory cumulative grade-point average, achieved satisfactory rank in graduating class, and successfully completed all prerequisite courses. The university with the approval of the state board of regents shall establish and periodically review specific minimum requirements for admission to the college of engineering. Among the items to be so determined are test score, grade-point average, class rank and prerequisite courses. These specific determinations will be published in the university catalog.

From applicants who do not meet minimum admission requirements, the director of admissions may after a review of the applicant’s record: (a) Admit unconditionally, (b) admit on probation, (c) require enrollment for a tryout period during a preceding summer session, or (d) deny admission.
2.5(2) Admission of undergraduate students by transfer

The applicant must submit a formal application and official transcript of college work. Each applicant should have:

a. Maintained satisfactory progress in mathematics.

b. Attained satisfactory scores on the university's required admission examinations.

c. Maintained a satisfactory cumulative grade-point average on all college work undertaken.

From applicants who do not meet recommended requirements, the director of admissions will review individual records and may offer probationary admission.

681--2.6(262) Graduate College

Graduates of any college or university accredited by regional accrediting associations may if the academic record is satisfactory be admitted to the graduate college. Admission to the graduate college is not the equivalent of acceptance as a candidate for an advanced degree. Such acceptance is given usually after the completion in residence of work at the university and upon recommendation of the major department and approval by the dean of the graduate college. The acceptance of a student as a degree candidate is determined upon the merits of each individual case.

A student who is within four semester hours of having satisfied all the requirements for the bachelor's degree at the University of Iowa may be given a tentative admission to the graduate college.

681--2.7(262) College of Law

2.7(1) Application for admission

Applicants for admission must present a baccalaureate degree from an approved college or university prior to commencing work in the college of law.

Each applicant for admission must take the Law School Admission Test administered by the Educational Testing Service, Princeton, New Jersey, and have the score forwarded to the college of law. The test is given several times per year and may be taken at numerous locations in the United States and throughout the world. Applicants are urged to take the test in the fall or winter preceding the fall semester for which they are making application. Except upon a showing acceptable to it, the admissions committee will not consider applications from students who fail to take the test prior to the June 1 preceding the fall semester in which they wish to enter.

Fulfillment of the specific requirements for admission listed above does not ensure admission to the college of law. From the applicants meeting the minimum requirements, the admissions committee of the college of law will select those applicants who, in their judgment, appear to be best qualified for the study and practice of law. The law admissions committee may require personal interviews of applicants.

2.7(2) Admission with advanced standing

A transfer student may be eligible for admission if the student (a) has attended a school approved by the Association of American Law Schools; (b) is in good standing at the time of withdrawal (evidenced by a letter from the dean of the school from which transferring); (c) meets the admission requirements for beginning students; and (d) has done substantially above average work in the law school the student attended. Where an applicant has completed more than one year of law study, advanced standing will be permitted only in exceptional cases. Applicants for admission with advanced standing should comply with the procedures required for admission to the first-year class.

681--2.8(262) College of Medicine

2.8(1) Application for admission

Fulfillment of the specific requirements for admission listed below does not ensure admission to the college of medicine. From the applicants meeting the specific requirements, the admissions committee of the college of medicine will select those applicants who in their judgment appear to be best qualified for the study and practice of medicine.

Prior to entrance an applicant must:

a. Have received the baccalaureate degree; or

b. Have completed three years of a combined baccalaureate-medicine curriculum which qualifies the applicant to receive the baccalaureate degree on completion of the first year in medicine; or

c. Have completed three years of a baccalaureate program which includes the general graduation requirements of the college of liberal arts of the University of Iowa for the combined baccalaureate degree.

Each applicant must place on file in the office of the director of admissions the completed application form and an official transcript from each college attended.

The college work as outlined below will suffice to meet the minimal academic requirements for admission to the college of medicine.

Applicants who have completed the baccalaureate degree and required courses five or more years prior to seeking admission to this college of medicine will be considered by the admissions committee only under exceptional conditions.

The college curriculum must include at least three years (equivalent to 96 semester hours) including specific required science courses as prescribed by the faculty of the college.

Students planning to study medicine should bear in mind that other college work is required in addition to prerequisite sciences because it offers an opportunity to secure a well-rounded education, which is of special importance to those entering the medical profession. In the selection of applicants, preference will be given to those who give evidence of having obtained such a broad education.

To be considered for admission, an applicant must have attained a grade-point average of at least 2.5 for all college work undertaken. As the quality of work in premedical science is very basic to success in medicine, special attention will be given by the admissions committee to grades in science. The grade-point average is based upon the University of Iowa's marking system in which a grade of "A" is equivalent to four points. Other marking systems will be evaluated by the office of admissions and the committee on admissions of the college of medicine.

Preference will be given to applicants with high scholastic standing who are residents of Iowa, and consideration will also be given to outstanding nonresidents. Applicants for admission are required to take the medical college admissions test which is administered for the Association of American Medical Colleges. Applicants are requested to complete this test in May or October of the year preceding that for which they are applying for admission. Students may make arrangements to apply for this examination through the university examination service, the University of Iowa.

Personal interviews will be required. Applicants will be contacted for the appointment for required interviews.

Applicants accepted for admission are required to submit a satisfactory physical examination report to the university student health service within two weeks following notification of acceptance.

All applicants must also complete, through student health service, an X-ray film of the chest and successful vaccination against smallpox prior to registration.

2.8(2) Admission to advanced standing

If their work preparatory to entering a college of medicine would have met entrance requirements of this college, students from other approved medical colleges may be admitted to advanced standing according to the following conditions:

Only applicants of high scholastic standing will be considered.

They must present certificates showing that they have satisfactorily completed courses equivalent to those already pursued by the class they wish to enter.

The committee on admission to advanced standing will decide in each case whether examinations in the various subjects will be required.

Applications will be considered only upon receipt of a statement from the dean or registrar of the college from which the applicant comes, showing the actual amount of time the student has spent in the study of medicine, the courses taken, and the grades received, together with a statement of the work preparatory to entering upon the course in medicine.

No advanced standing will be granted to students from other than approved medical schools. Students may be granted subject credit upon recommendation of the head of the department concerned, for work taken in other than medical schools.
2.8(3) Unclassified students

Applicants for admission to the college of medicine who are not candidates for a degree but who desire to register for special subjects, will be admitted to any lecture or laboratory course only upon complying with all the regular requirements for admission to such course or by action of the faculty upon recommendation of the professor in charge of the course.

681--2.9(262) College of Nursing

Applications for admission to the college of nursing should be submitted to the Director of Admissions, The University of Iowa, Iowa City, Iowa. Applicants for admission to the undergraduate program in nursing must present a minimum of 30 semester hours completed in an accredited college. For admission to the college of nursing an applicant must have:

1. Completed specific course work as prescribed by the faculty of the college. The director of admissions will provide a list of the course work required.

2. Completed the American College Tests.

3. Performed satisfactorily on all courses undertaken.

Applications from students who have minor deficiencies in meeting grade-point requirements specified above will be reviewed by the admissions committee of the college, and, upon favorable recommendation of the committee, such students may be granted conditional or probationary admissions.

Fulfillment of the minimum requirements listed above, however, does not assure admission to the college of nursing. From those applicants who meet the minimum requirements, the admissions committee will select the applicants who, in their judgment, appear to be best qualified.

681--2.10(262) College of Pharmacy

2.10(1) General basis for admission

Fulfillment of the specific requirements for admission does not ensure admission to the college of pharmacy. From the applicants meeting the specific requirements, the admissions committee will select those applicants who, in their judgment appear to be best qualified.

Applicants for admission to pharmacy should have graduated from an approved high school or have an equivalent amount of training.

2.10(2) College work

The college work as outlined below will meet the minimum academic requirements for admission to the college of pharmacy. The minimum should include 32 semester hours of college level work exclusive of credit in military and air science and physical education. The 32 semester hours must include:

Communication skills. Applicants must have demonstrated satisfactory achievement in communication skills according to the requirements of the college of liberal arts at the state University of Iowa. Applicants from other institutions may meet this requirement by presenting six semester hours of credit in English composition and rhetoric and two semester hours of credit in speech or an eight-semester-hour year course in communication skills.

Inorganic chemistry and qualitative analysis, eight semester hours.

College mathematics, eight semester hours.

Physics or zoology, eight semester hours.

Students from other institutions may substitute a comparable eight-semester-hour course in biology in lieu of zoology.

Military or air science (if available), zero to two semester hours.

Students who present minor deficiencies in meeting the above requirements may be admitted to the college of pharmacy upon the recommendation of the dean of admissions and the college of pharmacy.

2.10(3) Scholarship and application deadline

To be considered for admission to the college of pharmacy, students must have earned a 2.0 or "C" average on all collegiate work undertaken. The minimum grade-point average of 2.0 is based on the state University of Iowa’s marking system in which the grade of "A" is equivalent to four points. Applications for admission and the required official transcripts should be filed before March 1 for the class to enter pharmacy in September.

2.10(4) Required tests

Applicants for admission are required to take the American College Testing Program test.

2.10(5) Current requirements

Applicants who have completed work in a college of pharmacy accredited by the American Council on Pharmaceutical Education may if their college academic average is acceptable be admitted and granted advanced standing toward the degree of bachelor of science in pharmacy.

681--2.11(262) College of Liberal Arts and Sciences

Applicants for admission to liberal arts and sciences must meet the rules that are common to the three state institutions in Iowa as listed in 681--1.1(262), 1.2(262) and 1.3(262).

681--2.12(262) College of Education

Students at the university desiring professional work in education are registered in the college of liberal arts and sciences or the graduate college. Requirements for permission to take teacher-training courses are listed in the university catalog.
