Why Libraries Should Host Journals
“…performing the curatorial work needed to ensure the permanence of current and future published information is a central and unifying challenge for us…”

“The effort is premised on the belief that libraries are a valuable and indeed essential part of the global information space, and that we will only continue to be so if we take active responsibility for moving our content, services and values into this information ecosystem.”

Small liberal arts colleges are supporting journal publishing.
Libraries should be involved in publishing journals, particularly those of local interest and of small societies.
“Over 97 percent of society publishers publish three or fewer journals, with almost 90 percent publishing just one title.”

Look for partners on campus. For example, you may be able to work with your alumni magazine.
Libraries could work in partnership with other libraries, such as those in the region or in a consortia.
Journals help raise the institutions profile which can help with recruitment of faculty, students and donors.
Student journals can be included, giving exposure to your top student work.

B SIDES

JOURNAL OF THE UNIVERSITY OF IOWA SCHOOL OF LIBRARY AND INFORMATION SCIENCE

B Sides is an open access, peer-reviewed journal that showcases student and alumni work from The University of Iowa School of Library and Information Science, including writing, images, posters, presentation slides, audio recordings, and videos. It provides a space for current students and alumni to converse about their work and contribute to the scholarly literature of Library and Information Science.
Publishing OA titles provides a great opportunity for teaching editors (faculty or students) about copyright and open access.
Staffing and Software
[Library publishing services] are typically embedded in an emerging program of related services …[which] enable both crucial synergies and important efficiencies in the launch and evolution of publishing services.”

Karla Hahn, Research Library Publishing Services: New Options for University Publishing, p.21
Involve staff with appropriate subject expertise for titles and also your serials and electronic resources staff.
We have not yet determined how much time journal hosting takes.
Open source or hosted software can be used to manage journals and support basic display and technological issues as well as editorial workflow.
Our journal hosting would be impossible without library administration support, and we must demonstrate that it is a valuable & sustainable service.
General Policies and Planning
Determine how you will select possible titles and prioritize projects.
Look at other sites as you develop your program.
Clearly state what you will do and what you will support.
Journal-hosting service

Interested in starting a new e-journal?
Need help hosting and publishing an existing e-journal?
Interested in moving a print journal online?

Our new journal-hosting service is part of a larger initiative at the Libraries to help advance new forms of scholarly publishing. The journals are accessible through Iowa Research Online (http://ir.uiowa.edu), a dynamic archive of the research produced by faculty, researchers, and students, from published articles in peer-reviewed journals to presentations, theses, dissertations, and unpublished papers.

Publishing options:

- electronic-only—publish articles as indexed and searchable PDFs through a custom-designed website
- print and electronic—submit ready-to-publish articles to a traditional printer to offer readers the option of print or electronic access

Our services include:

- software demonstrations
- training your editorial team to use the EdiKit software
- creating a customized web site for your journal, hosted by Iowa Research Online
- migrating back issues into your journal site (including scanning and metadata creation)
- helping you draft author copyright guidelines
- offering long-term digital preservation
- managing software upgrades and customer support

Types of journals:

- scholarly journals published by University of Iowa
- literary journals published by University of Iowa
- society publications with University of Iowa editors
  (all editors do not need to be at Iowa)

This publishing platform is well suited for open access titles or titles that become open access after an embargo of no more than 24 months.

Sampling of journals we host:

Medieval Feminist Forum (MFF) is the journal of the Society for Medieval Feminist Studies (SMFS).

About this Journal

Medieval Feminist Forum (MFF) (ISSN 1536-8742 (print), ISSN 2151-6073 (online)) is the journal of the Society for Medieval Feminist Scholarship (SMFS). SMFS promotes interdisciplinary scholarship on women and gender from Late Antiquity (ca. 500 C.E.) to ca. 1500 C.E. MFF appears twice yearly publishing articles, book reviews, and bibliographies. Some issues are thematic. Submissions to MFF are peer reviewed by the editors.

MFF was originally published under the title Medieval Feminist Newsletter (ISSN 1054-1004 (print), ISSN 2154-4042 (online)). In 1999 (no. 28) the journal title changed to Medieval Feminist Forum.

Issues are available freely online beginning two years after publication. Access to full text of recently published issues is by subscription only. For more information on subscribing to MFF, please visit http://hosted.lib.uiowa.edu/smfs/mff/join.shtml.

MFF is indexed by MLA Bibliography (2005+), Feminist Periodicals (1996+), and Feminae.

MFF is hosted by the [University of Iowa Libraries' Institutional Repository](http://iowa-research Online).
Review your copyright and permissions language carefully, having a few options for editors to select.
Rights for Authors and Medieval Feminist Forum

Authors retain copyright but grant exclusive first publication rights and a non-exclusive license to have the work reproduced in other ways, including in electronic databases and on-line. Once an author's work has been published in Medieval Feminist Forum, the author is free to use it in any way she/he wishes, so long as that use is consistent with the license given Medieval Feminist Forum to continue to use the work for the duration of its copyright in all languages, throughout the world, in all media. The journal asks only that authors acknowledge in subsequent works the publication of earlier versions in Medieval Feminist Forum.

The author may include the officially published version of the article (version of record) in an institutional or disciplinary repository, provided the posting includes details, and a link to the online edition of the journal.

Attribution and Usage Policies

Requests for permission to reuse the articles should be directed to Medieval Feminist Forum.

Rights for Authors and Proceedings in Obstetrics and Gynecology

Proceedings in Obstetrics and Gynecology applies the Creative Commons licenses to all works we publish. Under the license, authors retain ownership of the copyright for their article, but authors allow anyone to download, distribute, and/or copy articles in the journal, so long as the original authors and source are cited.

The author may include the officially published version of the article (version of record) in an institutional or disciplinary repository, provided the posting includes a prominent statement of the full bibliographical details, and a link to the online edition of the journal.

Attribution and Usage Policies

No permission is required from the authors or the publishers for usage compliant with the terms of the Creative Commons license. For any reuse or redistribution of a work, you must also make clear the license terms under which the work was published, in addition to citation of the original authors and source.

Do your homework before meeting with the editors, looking at their websites and at journals in their field, and start gathering basic information for the site.
Work with your subject librarians; they will be familiar with publications in the field and bring additional expertise.
Information Needed for Journal Hosting

Be sure you have a public page describing your policies and what you do to support e-journal publishing (e.g., http://www.lib.uiowa.edu/dls/ejournal.html).

This form should be filled out by library staff to the extent possible. The form then serves as the basis for a meeting about the journal, providing library staff an opportunity to gather the remaining questions.

Talk to the editors about general goals for journal.
Talk to the editors to make sure they have a realistic idea regarding the effort required to produce a quality journal.
Make sure editor’s responsibilities are clear
(e.g. ask for submissions, review content, check for plagiarism, copy edit and format, group content into issues, post and publicize the journal).
Having a basic MOU establishes common expectations and target dates.

I. INTRODUCTION

The purpose of this MOU is to define the parameters of an ongoing partnership between the FullJournalTitle (herein JournalAcronym) and the University of Iowa Libraries (herein, UI Libraries) to create and maintain an online instance of the journal.

JournalAcronym is a [frequency and basic type—literary, peer-reviewed etc., e.g. literary quarterly] sponsored by XXX and published by The University of Iowa. [Give added information regarding who publishes, society connection, history etc. This type of information will go on the journal about page. If it is a new journal, also include why this journal is needed/what niche it will fill.]

The project involves creating an online journal (http://ir.uiowa.edu/xxx), including open access archives with subscription-access only for xxx. JournalAcronym editors may also opt to use the associated journal management software, EdiKit, to handle ongoing submissions, editorial functions, peer review, and access controls to current issues. Content from the current site (URL of current site) will be migrated into the journal management system service offered by the UI Libraries. Back issues will also be scanned as part of the project, and UI Libraries will keep those materials until the project is completed.

The journal will become part of Iowa Research Online, a dynamic archive of the research produced by faculty, researchers, and students, from published articles in peer-reviewed journals to presentations, theses, dissertations, and unpublished papers. IRO is administered by the UI Libraries, with the goal of organizing, preserving, and increasing the impact of scholarly and creative work at the University of Iowa.
Editors may not have solid ideas up front regarding the design, but they know what they don’t like.
Learn what special pages of content may be needed for the individual needs of the journal.

Information for Reviewers

Unsolicited reviews are not accepted. Reviews (1,000-1,200 words, single monographs; 1,500-1,600, two monographs) should be submitted in electronic format and follow the specified submission style guidelines.

Reviewers should be faculty or qualified independent scholars who are SMFS, members, but advisors, mentors, or faculty members of SMFS may also suggest graduate students as reviewers of specific works that, in their judgment, the student is qualified to review. Upon assignment and publication of a review, SMFS membership must be in current standing. Qualified persons interested in reviewing books should contact the Book Review Editor, Helene Scheck, Department of English, University at Albany, State University of New York, Albany, NY 12222, hschek@albany.edu.

Information for Publishers and Authors

Publishers or authors interested in having a monograph reviewed in MFF should send a copy to: Helene Scheck, Department of English, University at Albany, State University of New York, Albany, NY 12222, hschek@albany.edu.

Books submitted are not returned, and become the property of MFF.

You should do all the general set up for editor and ask them for input—don’t expect them to do anything but respond (and do the actual editing of the journal).
Make sure information needed to assess quality and authority of the title is on the site (e.g. identify editors by name and institution and clearly state it is peer reviewed).
