LISA GUINN is assistant professor of history at Bethany College in Lindsborg, Kansas. She received her Ph.D. from Oklahoma State University in 2003, specializing in nineteenth-century U.S. history. Her research focuses on nineteenth-century women's reform and the concept of usefulness as it pertains to nineteenth-century women's self-identity.

CHRISTOPHER HOMMERDING is a doctoral candidate in history at the University of Wisconsin–Madison. His research interests include LGBT and Queer history, with a focus on midwestern rural and small-town spaces. His dissertation is titled "The 'Faeries' of Mineral Point: History, Performance, and Queerness in Twentieth-Century Small-Town Wisconsin." A forthcoming article based on that research will appear on the history of sexuality blog Notches.
