

1972

Going through the Moon

Stephen Dunn

Follow this and additional works at: <https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview>

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation

Dunn, Stephen. "Going through the Moon." The Iowa Review 3.2 (1972): 10-10. Web.
Available at: <https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.1330>

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.

GOING THROUGH THE MOON

We go for a walk. It is autumn.
It is half past our lives.
Old tires lie about. The country is flat as yesterday, as the day before that. Here is my body,
I say, take it.

No thanks, you say, you already have one. It is a clear afternoon.
The moon is in China.
I go home, and wait.

The moon comes. I put my head in its lap, not as a child.
You are somewhere else at the time.
You will never know why
you suddenly rise out of yourself,
and call my name.

Stephen Dunn

THE OTHER SIDE

I come to the great noose of water;
Like stone gods, the succorers wait,
Dressed in their tiny garments. All day
They stare from the opposite shore.

The boughs of the Manchineel
Let fall their blindness and black apples.
Gratefully I undress. The first stone
Rises like light to my hand.

10 Charles Wright