

1973

Leaving Bhit Shah

William Stafford

Follow this and additional works at: <https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview>

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

This work has been identified with a <http://rightsstatements.org/vocab/InC/1.0/>>Rights Statement In Copyright.

Recommended Citation

Stafford, William. "Leaving Bhit Shah." The Iowa Review 4.2 (1973): 24-24. Web.
Available at: <https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.1509>

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.

LEAVING BHIT SHAH

Under the willows a strange light comes,
maybe religion—water deciding, leaves that prophesy. Is it the wind, or is it more than the wind? These devotees that murmur are only larger leaves: holy sounds come from farther than the wind.

Outside the mosque, God limps forward to bring my shoes, while back there in the shrine
the blue keeps on, reflecting in mirrors.
Fans of the faithful wave. Above, in the sky, in the cold, where the first things come, no touching of a stone or bowing will mean anything, but here
the sounds that happen, the heavy feet, the way we trudge forward—these have some clear, still meaning.