The Heavenly Hunger

Russell Edson

1974

Follow this and additional works at: https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation
Available at: https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.1643

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.
THE HEAVENLY HUNGER

He fights with his hat. It's a mouth attempting to swallow him.
The hat suffers, but that's all right, it has no nerve endings.
When the hat is entirely ruined he says, don't try that again.
Again he is ready to leave. He puts on another hat, but sees it is also a mouth trying to get funny with him. This hat gets a good knocking about, and like the first hat, is without nerve endings.
Oh, hell, who needs a hat?
But then he discovers that his shoes are two mouths trying to eat him feet-first; some kind of a two headed creature, a tuning fork which will consume and vibrate him to death with road rhythms and footfalls . . .
Even the rooms of the house are discovered to be the several stomachs of a monster cow digesting him . . .
How long does the final appetite of heaven hold its hunger . . .?