

1975

River

John Ashbery

Follow this and additional works at: <https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview>

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

---

Recommended Citation

Ashbery, John. "River." The Iowa Review 6.1 (1975): 64-64. Web.
Available at: <https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.1800>

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.

share his life like an old friend and in the process had given me my first gray hairs, a slightly stronger prescription for my left lens, more pleasure than I could ever tell him. And the book? It immediately became the center of a furious controversy among the handful of Americans to whom the name Malaterre means anything. Which didn't surprise me in the least, its thesis having been so totally original, unexpected, difficult to digest. Curiously, it was Pearlmutter himself who helped to settle the matter. In the review that he did for the Yale Studies in French, he wrote, "This extraordinary portrait of the poet as sexual deviate would seem absurd if not for the new material the author presents. His evidence from the poet's hitherto largely unpublished correspondence with the painter Blaise appears to be incontrovertible. It leaves us no choice. Professor Blum has made a significant contribution in helping to unravel the mystery of Malaterre."

It pleased me enormously. Euphoric, I considered sending an autographed copy of the book to Madame Blaise but finally decided against it. After all, she herself had told me of the countless evenings on which she had visited the poet's fifth floor apartment on the Boulevard St. Jacques. Why upset an old lady with scholarship?

---

FOUR POEMS / JOHN ASHBERY

---

River

It thinks itself too good for
These generalizations and is
Moved on by them. The opposite side
Is plunged in shade, this one
In self-esteem. But the center
Keeps collapsing and re-forming.
The couple at a picnic table (but It's too early in the season for picnics)
Are traipsed across by the river's
Unknowing knowledge of its workings.
To avoid possible boredom and the stain
Of too much intuition the whole scene
Is walled behind glass. "Too early,"
She says, "in the season." A hawk drifts by.
"Send everybody back to the city."