1975

Ungod at the Font of the Blues

Anthony McNeill

Follow this and additional works at: http://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation

Available at: https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.1834 and lined her own womb with cement to make a graveyard for our children.

I have not been able to touch the destruction within me but unless I learn to use the difference between poetry and rhetoric my power too will run corrupt as poisonous mold or lie limp and useless as an unconnected wire and one day I will take my teenaged plug and connect it to the nearest socket raping some 85 year old white woman and as I beat her senseless and set a torch to her bed a Greek chorus will be singing in % time "Poor thing. She never hurt a soul. What beasts they are."

Ungod at the Font of the Blues /
Anthony McNeill

Poetry is a case of the loser winning. And the genuine poet chooses to lose, even if he has to go so far as to die, in order to win . . . . He is certain of the total defeat of the human enterprise and arranges to fail in his own life in order to bear witness, by his individual defeat, to human defeat in general.

—Jean-Paul Sartre

ungod who endure in the desert lift the lush way to taste listen smell touch see the shape of this One bird through the garden, its acute, tinnient cry.
The adamant know clear methods of tracking, then lay the grief down raggedly singing.
One rises announces the sky
has burst into flames;
another—
my spirit becomes a sack full of ashes.
I open the window
see the bird blind alone in such fine sorrow so long

Words / Raymond R. Patterson

Each night with words to wall out prison walls brick by word brick by word from darkness lifting into wordless space words from syllables of rage to rise through caged tiers towards the clear speech of stars Can you see now in the dark in the top of the makeshift scaffolding the prisoner lifting the final words into place some jailer below shaking his keys and shouting?

To All Brothers: From All Sisters / Sonia Sanchez

each nite without you.
and I give birth to myself.
who am i to be touched at random?