

1975

A Nest in the Wind

Gwen Head

Follow this and additional works at: <https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview>

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation

Head, Gwen. "A Nest in the Wind." The Iowa Review 6.3 (1975): 31-31. Web.
Available at: <https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.1887>

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.

A Nest in the Wind / Gwen Head

Stuck up under the eaves, shiny and black as a barn swallow, her muggy room smelling of Florida water and crumbling linoleum, Marie lolls in a mess of chenille and sweaty newsprint.
She wears tattered rayon panties. They are pink and slick as an open gullet. Her haunches are solemn and ravenous. In her telephone voice she reads out loud from her dream book. The bed is a nest in the wind.

—Champagne and caviar. A man with a mustache—
Listening is black and banal as a cave.
The girl likes caves. It is hot. She would like to swim in the cold underground.

—Oh, but Isabelle, adored—

A Voice / Michael Cuddihy

It is late and no moon's out.
I'm alone here, in this metal chair, listening:
My car, a few yards away
With the lights off. Stars.
The river's empty.

Trees face me on the far bank
With a darkness older than myself.
Here. This ground I pretended
Was home. Like an arm I don't Use, never noticing
How it waits. If I cross here
I can rest. In the foliage
The sky looks big enough for a man
To walk through, discover
Himself, his own star.

Huge trees I can almost Touch, lean out at me. Fear.
My legs rooted in it. The self
I won't let go of, ever.