The earth out here doesn’t bear us up so much as it keeps us out, an old trick of the beautiful. Remember what Chief Left Hand said? Never mind. Everything else was taken from him, let’s leave his grief alone. My eastern friends ask me how I like it in the west, or God’s country, as it’s sometimes called, though God, like a slumlord, lives in the suburbs: Heaven. And I don’t live “in the west”; I live in this canyon among a few other houses and abandoned mines, vaccinations that didn’t take.

Where Wylie Ends / Richard Hugo

Our road ends near stars. The stream flows counter to our road. Dogs howl at the end of the road in the woods where people howl. Beyond the woods other roads end. Not our road. Our road ends near stars and howling dogs, near water going the other way. Their roads end going the same way as water, going away from stars. Dogs howl at the end of their roads in the woods where people howl. Same dogs, Same people. Same howls. The howling people have no road. They howl in the woods with dogs. The woods has roads. The howls find trails that lead to roads. The howling people have joined us. on the road, moving with, moving counter to water. Stars pale like dog howls in dawn.
Where our road ends, people from the woods ask the way home.
Our road moves with the water.
Both carry stars to our lawn.

I go into the back yard and arrange some twigs and a few flowers. I go alone and speak to you as I never could when you lived, when you smiled back at me shyly.
Now I can talk to you as I talked to a star when I was a boy, expecting no answer, as I talked to my father who had become the wind, particles of rain and fire, these few twigs and flowers that have no name.

Last night they said a rosary and my boys went, awkward in slacks and sport shirts, and later sitting under the hidden stars they were attacked and beaten.
You are dead, and a nameless rage is loose. It is 105, the young and the old burn in the fields, and though they cry enough the sun hangs on bloodying the dust above the aisles of cotton and grape.
