

1979

In Medias Res

E. Grosholz

E. Grosholz

Follow this and additional works at: <https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview>

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation

Grosholz, E. and E. Grosholz. "In Medias Res." The Iowa Review 10.4 (1979): 39-39. Web.
Available at: <https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.2529>

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.

In Medias Res · E. Grosholz

The whip of pleasure sends us all,
our sensitivities bright red,
delighted, lightly nipped, to some extreme.
Herodotus observed that at the edge of the recorded world, things grow more strange.
Hot spices and monstrosities
are carried in by camel to the center where civil, solid folk are pleased to pay a lot for something from the corners.

Thus we who cannot travel very far but in imagination, sometimes fall deeper into the boundaries
than tourists like Herodotus who saw,
made notes, and came away
all the more Greek for what they thought they knew.

Hard at the center, we undo
the casks of Scythia and the serpent Nile, plunging through crimson, musk and wine to find what we are dying to,
our secret folded there among the spoils.