

1980

As If

Lawrence Raab

Follow this and additional works at: <https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview>

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation

Raab, Lawrence. "As If." The Iowa Review 11.2 (1980): 93-93. Web.
Available at: <https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.2584>

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.

As If · Lawrence Raab

It isn't as if you had to sit there in the grass, watching whatever it is you would say you are watching.

Some flowers. The daisies, the others whose names you never learned.
Or the birds, the bluejay and robin.

It isn't as if you had to feel this way.
The stem of the daisy is slender and pale,
furred with jagged little leaves.

The frill of petals, of course,
is white, and reminds us
of who loves us, and who does not.

We'd all rather be happy,
wouldn't we? You just aren't sure if remembering the names would help.

The oak and the elm and the willow.
And the other people you can see
who are so busy with their lives,

it isn't as if you could be certain
they are happy, it isn't
as if you could ask them, mentioning

only the weather, how it is likely to change by evening, how it is likely to remain the same.