

1981

Philosophy in Warm Weather

Jane Kenyon

Follow this and additional works at: <https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview>

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation

Kenyon, Jane. "Philosophy in Warm Weather." The Iowa Review 12.2 (1981): 203-203. Web.
Available at: <https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.2725>

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.

Philosophy in Warm Weather · Jane Kenyon

Now all the doors and windows are open, and we move so easily through the rooms. Cats roll on the sunny rugs, and a clumsy wasp
climbs the pane, pausing
to rub a leg over her head.

All around us physical life reconvenes.
The molecules of our bodies must love
to exist — they whirl in circles
and seem to begrudge us nothing.
Heat, Horatio, heat makes them put this antic disposition on!

This year's brown spider sways over the door as I come and go. A single poppy shouts
from the far field, and the crow, beyond alarm, goes right on pulling up the corn.