
Volume 14

Issue 2 *Spring-Summer: Writing From the World:
Selections from the International Writing Program
1977-1983*

Article 35

1984

Dedicatory Entry

Anton Shammas

Follow this and additional works at: <https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview>

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation

Shammas, Anton. "Dedicatory Entry." The Iowa Review 14.2 (1984): 114-114. Web.
Available at: <https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.3028>

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.

Anton Shammas · Israel

DEDICATORY ENTRY

My father died in the summer, and the barrier
Between us has been crumbling ever since.

Now, in the fall, he stands like a door
At the edge of the no-man's-land of my life—
The border before him.

This is what I tell the child
Trampled inside me,
This is what I tell the child
Standing before me.

My father stands like a door,
And of the three of us one goes in.

translated from the Hebrew by Judy Levy

GOODBOY

I
I am here according to the logic
of city and stones
And stones are my lips.
My hands are limp—
according to a logic of mine.
I hear the night she overlaid it.
Yes, I do hear the night,
and write drafts for the dead child.