
Volume 14

Issue 2 *Spring-Summer: Writing From the World:
Selections from the International Writing Program
1977-1983*

Article 37

1984

Self-Portrait

Abdul-Latif Akel

Follow this and additional works at: <https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview>

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation

Akel, Abdul-Latif. "Self-Portrait." The Iowa Review 14.2 (1984): 118-118. Web.
Available at: <https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.3030>

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.

Abdul-Latif Akel · Palestine

SELF-PORTRAIT

What's here?
Empty eyes cleansing themselves in the lakes of death.
Misery jumps out of them.
Night wraps them up while they speak about light,
light, my frozen hope.
Is this my face or the face of an ancient sculpture?
Mapped with lines,
damned by the goddess.
Destiny has sucked it dry
like an abandoned well
where the moon does not appear.
A face like a dark cave,
like a stretch of desert with curving roads and ditches.
What's here
a man coiled in himself like a snake.
Damned by the god of the wind.
A man like an unharvested grove
whose ideas are bread for the flies.
Ink and paper do not nourish him
so torture is necessary.
He cannot repent.
What's here:
Two empty eyes embracing a face of grief.
Everything I see here resembles me.
This is what I am.

translated by the author