The Earth's a Little Lighter

Robin Behn
The Earth’s a Little Lighter

Florence Behn 1894–1984

what shall we do with the ashes says my father what shall we do with the part of her that mattered that unburnable mother-thing the air won’t swallow back what if it’s the soul

or is the soul the space of air she once displaced

It’s for him to decide —but—

what if we brushed her over him lovingly he’d look like he’s standing in the rain that rains just after the end of the world

If she were my mother I’d want to add a little water offer her small planet back to the sky and I’d want the stars to know her as she went on her way