

1990

The Hands

Ray Ronci

Follow this and additional works at: <https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview>

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

---

Recommended Citation

Ronci, Ray. "The Hands." The Iowa Review 20.3 (1990): 124-124. Web.
Available at: <https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.3945>

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.

The Hands · Ray Ronci

At night, the hands come to the face and push it together again. The hands know the terrain, have always known how the years leave behind fragments of the face. The fingers push the layers, rub and spread the skin around, find their place closest to the skull. Skin and bones of my spirit, crawl space, temple, cave, waiting room and cathedral for many other spirits, at night the hands come to the face and push it together again.

* * *

It's the cold that puts one hand inside the other, like prayer. And the trains go by. And the cold stays.
And it's the cold that puts one hand inside the other,
as in waiting for a train, as in waiting, waiting,
one hand, for the other.

* * *

The cold pushes the blood aside, howls through veins to heart, and from heart throughout the limbs. Hands and feet frantic. Old hands stretching from the dark,
to the flames.

* * *

It's been a long time since this wind, bright sun,
a trace of old snow, squirrel on a fence holding on,
swirling papers and leaves, walking, my hands unfisted
in my pockets.