Demeter's Lament for Her Coré: The Search; The Finding

Vuyelwa Carlin

1993

Follow this and additional works at: http://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.
a warmth,
insistent, this earth, this rind poor of nerve pierces, almost.

3.
She was born on the street; her mother,
gleaner of dust,
has put away for always her ash-baby: but her father comes some evenings, walks with her in the courtyard
under a lazuli,
a cornflower sky. —There are small dust-
filmy sons,
rustheads: —but for his girl, still, God-
filled, say the nuns,
he has bought tiny silvers, fits them to the fragile bones.

Demeter’s Lament for Her Coré

The Search

Still a young bulge-brow, a bundle of bone, with hare-velvets of eyes; sealed, a paleness: — and how it piped, field-singing, your thin voice! — blue tremoring thread blue-rending, infantine.

Moaner, a madwoman, grey thing straw-grown
I am wandering: that pearl, your milk of face, where I light-touched, doted, seek, startle-eyes,— hope joyless, with each wind-riff; shadow-glean, dream of pale sightings in these muttered nights.
—The flowers are crisping through the long fields where my dry hateful winds crumble and roar:

—you empty ears on your spillikin colds,
rattle,—snap, sapless boughs, for all I care:
all wail! —for her, for me, you hollows, blights.

THE FINDING

Little ivory, you have sucked a dark fruit, have chewed a fierce juice, a shackle of seed.
I see shapes, subtle, of him—the jet brood,
his gloomy stones, have printed your blue white.

You have trod old cold, gabbly with ghost-prate,
by garden fleshes nourished of sunless food:
the incarnadine love-pips, that deathly bread,
you ate! —what of him, witheredness, unlight?

The field where he embraced you, coal-blackly, is softening once again to greenness;
these flowers, as I promised, burgeon, fat.

You have new other voices, you, seized fineness,— far searchless murmurings, a stranger eye, knowing of torch-gleam, tender of darkweight.