

1997

Under the Cupola of Snow

Eugenius Ališanka

H. L. Hix

Follow this and additional works at: <https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview>

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation

Ališanka, Eugenius and H. L. Hix. "Under the Cupola of Snow." The Iowa Review 27.2 (1997): 88-88. Web.
Available at: <https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.4898>

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.

UNDER THE CUPOLA OF SNOW

under the cupola of snow memory spreading

wider

you live without years: from the pupil, from the burning amphora wine is poured into your joints, the walls of blind alleys, restlessly white the facade of a cafe, night

keeps falling:

shorter and shorter lines straggle in just before dawn

ATLANTIS

that's all I see: the splintered relic of autumn, in a narrow slit of sight the continent shows white, ready to vanish, the sun slides slowly over black enamel, when I raise a full glass, and the shadows of the earth suddenly match: unexpected equilibrium before falling from a four-dimensional world into a two-dimensional leaf, the moment when a dizzy hand draws the outline of the ocean and the water submits to the art of cartography, while seagulls call harshly, crying in zenith