

1998

At the Museum, 1938

Ruth Stone

Follow this and additional works at: <https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview>

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

---

Recommended Citation

Stone, Ruth. "At the Museum, 1938." The Iowa Review 28.3 (1998): 130-130. Web.
Available at: <https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.S061>

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.

This obsession with invisible things.

But the concrete with its gray crumbling smile is like a factual male.

Drive your car into me, it suggests;
I'm no bloody vagina.

The concrete stretches for miles;
the turrets with guns in position.

AT THE MUSEUM, 1938

In the native bird exhibit, the whip-poor-will, stuffed with sawdust and arsenic, hides among arranged dried leaves in order to instruct you.
Nearby, a Navajo rug, the design a complex ideograph, a sacred message; a man-spirit in mirror image. However, it is without annotation, the legend meaningless; reduced to artifact. Now I am looking at a photograph; Kill Spotted Horses' ceremonial face in a cheap frame.
In a matching frame, Blue Wing, her dark eyes set toward the mountains.
Ropes of significant beads hang from her. Gently the round cheeks turn away. On the winding stairs, the old oak railing was crafted into ornate spools. Every newel post is carved. And here in a glass case, as if in a logical progression, is the tiny skeleton of a kiwi. Outside, the great elms along the streets in Urbana, their green arched cathedral canopies; the continuous singing of birds among their breathing branches.

SPECULATION

A girl we didn't actually know won a contest we never heard of and fifty pairs of new shoes.
We each had one pair of shoes and two skirts and two blouses.
We were in high school, my sister and I.
We washed and ironed our clothes