

2000

As It Were En Route to "Unknowable"

Robert Lee

Follow this and additional works at: <https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview>

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

---

Recommended Citation

Lee, Robert. "As It Were En Route to "Unknowable"." The Iowa Review 30.2 (2000): 147-147. Web.
Available at: <https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.5289>

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.

Robert Lee

AS IT WERE EN ROUTE TO “UNKNOWABLE”

Rain, prophetic rain, bitch rain of the apocalypse, rain of goats and of the tedious trout, rain polluted by my perilous odging—I know, I should have slept in, so in that in is night, or at least the beak of night, nudging its hook into the periphery like a pizzle, right at the edge there, the wetness occurring before the guilty leap to thought, and isn't this,
friends, how we might love, all of us, suddenly, with a hushed alarm, not simply wishing we were out in the red car or barn masturbating to the latest beat, not somewhere eating berries of a blue renown, not sitting here sketching the prettiest flowers, the small ones out there, whatever they're called—those with the brown eyes and yellowy necks—not thinking, hey, you know, those are eyes, right there on the flowers, no, not thinking at all, but just standing here in the flagellate rain, as mildly as possible, without any curse, not even calling it rain.