

2001

Healer: Remembering the Exxon Valdez Oil Spill

Ann-Marie Oskolkoff

Follow this and additional works at: <https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview>

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation

Oskolkoff, Ann-Marie. "Healer: Remembering the Exxon Valdez Oil Spill." The Iowa Review 31.1 (2001): 89-89. Web.
Available at: <https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.5372>

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.

Ann-Marie Oskolkoff

HEALER: REMEMBERING THE EXXON VALDEZ OIL SPILL

(After Jamaica Kincaid)

Think of glaciers scraping across grass; think that sometimes the lady in the lake takes people for offerings in place of quarters; listen to the noise of worn cartilage, it's like writing with chalk on sandpaper; place both hands over her knees—see that mountain goat? standing on two legs, it is offering you its horn; grind a penny to fine dust; smile when Mrs. Allen tells you, “your weather didn't work”; think Mrs. Allen has 12 kids, and is always washing clothes anyway; wonder why the railroad tracks when viewed from the air look like stitches as they pass along the Chugach Mountains; check the sky often, if you can't look at the sky look at the ceiling; look into people's eyes; look at the Northern Lights, you might see Uppa's outline; acknowledge him; wave; sometimes when spirits come back they sound like they are dancing with clogs on top the roof; Why aren't they barefoot?; they'll get slivers; if you put your shoes next to your bed you will travel far away; if you go far away the land will miss you, I will miss you; sometimes on the inside people look like the lead of a pencil, sometimes they look like the sun glinting on a stream; remember the old people predict that the waters will be still one day, black and still; think of the sea becoming filled with the lead from pencils, when I was a little girl that was where I'd hide my school supplies; if a teacher hits your child on the hands with a ruler yell at him in front of that child, let the child see him go paler; wear black paint on your face, so that the enemy won't see you go pale with fear; pray hard if you see the inside of a seal's belly filled with black ink; don't drink and drive; use otter fur for your hats and mittens because it stays warm when it gets wet; listen to Uncle George when he says today there was a thick coated otter dying of hypothermia; don't drink and let anybody else drive; don't bother trying to gather herring eggs, they are all gone; don't try to cure things like radiation sickness; use Old Nick's Stick to cure cancer, but not radiation sickness; think of the sound that the tissue makes when you pry open a razor clam; watch as your shoes turn the color of bruises just from walking on the beach; remember the tsunami of 1964 that ripped those children from their parent's arms; scrape the bottom of your shoes with your fingers; cover your face; granddaughter— this is how you sop up oil with your hair. This is how you sop up oil with your hair.

Uppa-Grandpa