AFTER EVE

The newspaper ad reads, “Will clean out Eves,” mostly goes unnoticed, after all only so much to be made of a mishap.

Between misgivings and amusement, there’s birth and degradation. The Garden is found in the unruly rosebushes and voices in the well-trimmed juniper hedges all along Gladstone and Aldeah Avenues.

Behind the gutter, the downspouts, the spiders web
and brittle leaves wedge.
Spread around each house’s hidden inattentions, is the long past where residents second guess their nakedness, only to mention the blistered and peeling paint on southern exposures.

It’s obviously a man’s job, only a man could conceive of correcting love.
