

2002

Today Is the Kamakura Period

Michael Carlson

Follow this and additional works at: <https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview>

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

---

Recommended Citation

Carlson, Michael. "Today Is the Kamakura Period." The Iowa Review 32.2 (2002): 110-110. Web.
Available at: <https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.5549>

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.

Today Is the Kamakura Period

On the map of last steps,
I am fifty weeks distracted,
a stray to the necessity of miscellaneous stones.

Seeking carbon from marshmallow,
convinced of the billowy,
I stand for a Buick surrounded by crabgrass,
the desire for pets, tattoos.

Long or pine, I can't discern which fisherfolk establish better lore.
The clamsmen make an iffy sound,
disciples of lank and ovary.

Umbra and sun on the shingles,
sea birds drowned in inky teal,
such is life, the spokespeople say,
no epigraph, no dedication.

A spaniel swims, a stalk stands still,
today is the Kamakura period,
the umpire of forky plants destroyed,
a thing at long last infinitely.