2003

My Husband Was a Spokesman for the President

Elizabeth Skurnick

Follow this and additional works at: http://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview
Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.
My Husband Was a Spokesman for the President

Who are you to be always speaking? is not what I want
   To ask mine, but to ask the other, the President.
Each time I look up, he is squared on the monitor,
   Hemming and hawing. Now this one wanders
The house, nothing escaping his conference.
   Partly thawed artichokes are given the thumbs-up.
Windex versus vinegar on the French doors
   Is weighed. Somber, hesitant steps are taken
In the case of the three-cheese macaroni.
   Before, he lived in a room of black phones.
He carried a briefcase of press releases.
   His only backdrop was the wine velvet curtain.
Now, it is as if he has been thrust underwater,
   And cannot undo even his tie. Even asleep
He is full fathom five, grating against coral
   Sheetimg. He foams in a swell of beurre blanc,
The yawn of the sea flooring him deeper
   And deeper, like a fish, his mouth closing and opening.