

2004

The Fly

Meredith Cole

Follow this and additional works at: <https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview>

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation

Cole, Meredith. "The Fly." The Iowa Review 34.3 (2004): 105-105. Web.
Available at: <https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.S903>

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.

MEREDITH COLE

The Fly

Cherry blossoms loom large on a dark tree. Girls are largely made of cherry blossoms,
each of their dark eyes
is a weird, fully-formed cherry.
Dark fly, you are part vegetable,
part mineral, part animal.
Sift vaguely in your invisible pot,
swirling atoms with your front limbs.
Your eye is like a million eyes
seeing every girl and every angle,
your eye which could be the eye of God,
your strange little eye is the eye of this poem.
Please don't fly away, don't flee,
leaving us stranded with one girl,
one angle, and no cherry tree!