

2004

The Whistler's Map

Ruth Foxe Blader

Follow this and additional works at: <https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview>

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

---

Recommended Citation

Blader, Ruth Foxe. "The Whistler's Map." The Iowa Review 34.3 (2004): 110-110. Web.
Available at: <https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.S906>

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.

RUTH FOXE BLADER

The Whistler's Map

It is where the boy just went down in.
It is the wire cribbing
drawn back in wet conceit.
It is the nothing's something,
ice fixed over puddles
closed and frozen gravel.
It is the plus or minus some eerie doubt-eye and the leaves
rippled in their frost pile.
Difficult of color.
Cribbled, plunked of ice,
the undrained swimming pool is leafed-over.
Ice threatens to crack the concrete back.
It's down the hill from that.
Drain skeleton. A mustard smell.
A smoke hole, cement pipe,
highway laid over.
It leads to the river.
It is where we are always going,
we cannot cut around.
Here, fate is like ice, like purple, like hair. It is there,
where the boys plunder, wall-less, under water.
It is the ripple currently wasting.
Drained, diked, dammed.
The winter-shards. The wire roll. The host.
There is this fixed and unfixed lack.
The lock. The gravel under.