

2004

Hummingbird of Ur

Katherine Soniat

Follow this and additional works at: <https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview>

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

---

Recommended Citation

Soniat, Katherine. "Hummingbird of Ur." The Iowa Review 34.3 (2004): 170-170. Web.
Available at: <https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.S928>

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.

KATHERINE SONIAT

Hummingbird of Ur

Wings fresh from the realm of wild horses. Fast and faster, a little bird zips through the fushcia, through the occasional shade of a palm.

Who keeps track of speed in this great world
of spin and fledgling sadness?

Bullets all night, bombings by day:
Buildings from the sky must look like hummingbird eggs
to war's shiney pilots.

Grids of city blocks,
the immaculate dead carried as dolls on the faraway stretchers.
A new-born's skull closes to such mad fluttering.

The heavy human heart.
Baby and bird turn to ashes, and the sun goes down in its broken-flesh colors.

Exotic, the red gashes halt us. We linger,
second glance at a second world.

Any which garden should be okay for a bird with less than an ounce of meaning,
with a breast not meant for consumption.

"Filet of hummingbird,"
one poet said over the night grill, her mind watering.
Touch a ghost lightly, and dust purples the dirt where the frail things are laid.