

2005

The Transmutation of Objects When Terminally Ill

Alexandra Budny

Follow this and additional works at: <https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview>

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation

Budny, Alexandra. "The Transmutation of Objects When Terminally Ill." The Iowa Review 35.3 (2005): 55-55. Web.
Available at: <https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.6034>

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.

ALEXANDRA BUDNY

The Transmutation of Objects When Terminally Ill

My mother's one wooden ring and one of coconut, vaulted on their faces, have become to her the basket-arched skulls of finches. Her two grayish paintings of unshaped black pearls and chamber instruments are now of eggplants

and insects. Her chained Greek coin with Queen and King and the word CONSTANINA, herself and my father with a bridge between them. The immigrant on the scaffolding wiping the glass is the red sequined trapeze artist

whom she watched when she was five or six swinging over a small gypsy circus in the interior of Bahia.