

George Heineman

B. L. Wick

ISSN 0003-4827

No known copyright restrictions.

Recommended Citation

Wick, B. L. "George Heineman." The Annals of Iowa 24 (1942), 87-88.

Available at: <https://doi.org/10.17077/0003-4827.6172>

Hosted by Iowa Research Online

Notable Deaths

GLENN C. HAYNES, war veteran and state official, died June 6, 1942, in the warden's quarters at Fort Madison, Iowa. Born August 25, 1876, in Centerville, Iowa, he attended the public schools of that town. Assistant Postmaster of Centerville and Mount Vernon, he entered upon his military career in 1892 when he joined the Iowa National Guard, beginning an almost continuous period of forty-five years with state and federal services. A veteran of the Spanish American War, although he failed to see foreign service, Mr. Haynes went to France with the 168th Infantry of the Iowa National Guard, rising to the rank of Major before returning from Europe in 1919 with a Distinguished Service Cross and the Croix de Guerre with gilt star. Active in veterans affairs, he served as commander of the Iowa Department of the American Legion, 1929-1930. At the time he was placed on the retired list in 1936 he was promoted to the rank of Brigadier General of the Line, Iowa National Guard.

Upon his return from France Mr. Haynes engaged in private business until his election as state auditor in 1921 and again in 1923. An unsuccessful candidate for Republican nomination for Governor in 1924, he shortly became Secretary of the Iowa Good Roads Association, which position he held until 1933. In 1933 he was appointed warden of the Iowa State Penitentiary at Fort Madison, which position he held at the time of his death.

GEORGE HEINEMAN, for many years the leader and outstanding member of the Communistic Society know as the Amana society, died March 16th, 1942, in South Amana the last of a large family. He was born in Marienburg near Stuttgart, Germany, January 1, 1844. The family emigrated to America in the spring of 1846 locating in the newly established colony known as Ebenezer near Buffalo, New York. He obtained a good English education and learned the trade of a jeweler as a young man. His family removed to the newly established colony in Iowa County in the Fifties but he did not come to join them until 1864 when he entered the store at South Amana as an assistant to his father who was the manager. On the death of his father, he became sole manager and very active in the interests of the financial affairs of the organization and frequently went to Chicago and made large purchases and became an intimate friend of Marshall Field. Mr. Heineman was president of the organization from 1911 to 1931 and was an adviser in all financial matters and a real active and outstanding director of most of its affairs. He was also one of the trustees in charge of the religious matters and frequently spoke in their meetings for worship.

He opposed the reorganization but submitted without complaint to the majority vote as cast and after the reorganization withdrew from any active duties and devoted himself largely to the religious affairs of the community. He was a very far-seeing, fair and conservative person who had read much and understood the Communistic theories of Communism better than most any other of its members and his suggestions and views were generally followed. He was a friend of many of the early settlers and sold merchandise to them on time and helped them with advances of money and used to tell that he never had his judgment misplaced and that they all paid up in time. His memory will be long remembered by the members and others who learned to know his kindness, his helpfulness and good-will towards everyone with whom he came in contact.

B. L. Wick

CHARLES ROLLIN KEYES, geologist, died in Tucson, Arizona, May 18, 1942. The son of Calvin W. and Julia Davis Keyes, pioneer family of Des Moines, Charles R. was educated in the Des Moines public schools, and was graduated from the State University of Iowa. His doctor of philosophy degree was received from John Hopkins University, Baltimore, Maryland.

A prolific writer on geological subjects, Dr. Keyes had a long and distinguished record in his chosen field. Prior to 1900 he was successively assistant in the United States Geological Survey, Missouri palaeontologist, assistant Iowa State Geologist, then Director of the Missouri Geological Survey. From 1902-1906 he was President of the New Mexico School of Mines. He also established and organized the geological survey of Iowa, of which 30 volumes have been published to date describing the natural resources of this state. He was a member of the American Institute of Mining Engineers, the Mining and Metallurgical Society of America, the Iowa Academy of Science, and the St. Louis Academy of Science as well as others. Dr. Keyes was editor of the Pan-American Geologist since 1922.

A member of the Democratic Party, Dr. Keyes was his party's nominee for the United States Senate in 1918. He was familiar with most of the personalities, state and national, of his party.

DR. CHARLES LEMUEL MARSTON, physician, died at his home in Mason City, June 25, 1942. Dr. Marston was born February 6, 1870, at Seward, Illinois, of old American stock. His first American ancestor came to this country in 1832, his father, George W. Marston, a pioneer in the middle-west, came from Vermont before the Civil War and served with Illinois troops in that war. His mother, Sarah Scott Marston, was a Pennsylvanian.

Educated in the high school of Rockford, Illinois, Dr. Marston received his medical education at Rush Medical College, from which he was graduated in 1893. He came of a family of doctors. A grandfather, Dr. Amos Scott, was a surgeon in the Civil War, and Copyright of Annals of Iowa is the property of State of Iowa, by & through the State Historical Society of Iowa and its content may not be copied or emailed to multiple sites or posted to a listserv without the copyright holder's express written permission. However, users may print, download, or email articles for individual use.