2007

If a Poet Could Talk We Could Not Understand Him

Gerald Bruns

Follow this and additional works at: http://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation

Available at: https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.6373
If a Poet Could Talk We Could Not Understand Him

for Charles Bernstein

This is a found text
useless words
talking sounds
a stone taking shape by itself unlike the divine clock clicking your cobblestones _hosteron proteron_
contradictions interdicted silent intentions
bestial thoughts
a gravity of stones
filling your pockets
so many groans
applying their pleasure lidless eyes impinging as if to see better not to look rattle (pause) rattle old bones cluster
and start their run
ten toes steadfast
faster still if possible a stone’s throw alone
trips the trope
musters your mustard
one pebble two two pebbles three failing to pass

a lonely aesthete
sounding his symbols
category mistakes
versified fakes
a transcendental appetite forging its experience
lines of dead argument
dissymmetrical forms
chance operations _Geistesgeschichte_ biting its tail sarcophagia
encyclopedic memories
housed in small letters insufficiency of reasons Leibniz his alphabet
seeing the goddess naked freezes fingers
sounds the key
speedy metricals
early terminals (panacolouthoniclone)
just call him Charles
_magister ars inveniendi_ accidentally unearthing a large loose location
whose grammar
held us captive