

2008

Heckfire

Dennis Schmitz

Follow this and additional works at: <https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview>

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation

Schmitz, Dennis. "Heckfire." The Iowa Review 38.2 (2008): 44-45. Web.
Available at: <https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.6446>

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.

Heckfire

Though the nuns forgave us, we taught ourselves guilt—Farney & I only tardy but sent to the school's furnace-room, sentenced to Heckfire, to look at our souls somehow burned visible but gassy in the coals as our janitor swung the furnace-

door with his shovel, pin-holes of red going out on his big hands. He was wronged king or Luther to the Catholic 3rd grade, though he stank of pee or his lunch beer

Farney dared sip a few grades later.

• • •

Is there a kind of higher janitor for killers, a holiest pope or mahatma to pick up barehanded the soul's splintery blue acetylene flame that cuts or mends metal

when the alloy for God-ness is beaten thin & digressive to make evil?

• • •

The CNN reporter is groomed but rigid by the wheelchair. 25 years after his crime, the latest California killer is legally blind & dying, but his reprieve is denied.

• • •

Vengeance is a lazy kind of grieving the translator says later in the HBO movie

(she's relaxed now & earnest)— the victim's family in this tribe takes the killer far out in a boat & leaves him in the water—they can choose to let him

drown or begin the hard work of forgiving him by bringing him up wet & afraid.