the sixth night alone with Frank a black truck pulled up to the house—there were two men in the cab and one in the bed they drove off once I turned the porch light off the man in the back had spread a bag of rock salt over the plot Frank had tilled

Frank said the men were piano notes—lost notes from down south—ghosts in a boarded-up music hall the eighth night alone with Frank

Frank said there is no truth but in converse symbols sometimes Frank walks in his sleep taking pictures of the walls with a camera he holds at his chest and I wonder if this too is how God makes known
