

2009

A Dictionary of What Can Be Learned in the Voice of the Sociopath's Lover

Jennifer Militello

Follow this and additional works at: <https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview>

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation

Militello, Jennifer. "A Dictionary of What Can Be Learned in the Voice of the Sociopath's Lover." The Iowa Review 39.3 (2009): 60-60. Web.

Available at: <https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.6743>

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.

A Dictionary of What Can Be Learned in the Voice of the Sociopath's Lover

Recklessness spurred by our limited time, that they could take nothing from you if all you had was the wild. To like too much speed between the trees after dark.
To survive while passing on the narrow bridge, while kissing without caring less, while laughing when the cruelty hit. To climb even though the high was made to collapse, to bite so deep the seasons bled, to make enemies who loved me and make criminals my friends. To wreck whatever touched my hand to prove I still exist. To not feel guilt.
That nothing matters and nothing will.
To break glass and not get cut, to lie in a field and not look up. Not to want.
To cut my knee deep and pack sand
into the wound if I was drunk and loved the sound of the ocean. To haggle with summer. That nouns were fickle.
That the best note was wrong done,
that when sung it would crash like an engine.
That age was merely come what may.
To race my own incessant heart. To race the marred world with a quick wit and a passive face. To bark up its tree. To fight and spit. To let it go. To earn my keep.