RAINY SEASON

Shall we go to Suta-sa temple on Mount Gongjak to see the water celery shall we go to see the wild pinks on a day when rain is pouring down shall we go to dry our wet feet on a hot floor in the living quarters of Suta-sa shall we go to view the distant hills through the window on a rainy day after a rainy day after a rainy day after beholding a peony for a good while beside a drooping ash offering old Buddha a couple of bows then if we're bored if we are nonetheless bored shall we call for the young daughter-in-law who's not here and play cards or, damn it, shall we go and beg a handful of rice crusts to munch from the temple cook this long long rainy season
