

Winter 2013

Forensics

Kenzie Allen

Follow this and additional works at: <https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview>

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation

Allen, Kenzie. "Forensics." The Iowa Review 43.3 (2013): 101-102. Web.
Available at: <https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.7332>

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.

KENZIE ALLEN

FORENSICS

The burial matters.
Fetal and twisted
fear their gods and there may be red ocher among their possessions. Arms
over arms of the pious,
and the multitudes
heaped like netted fish,
and the whole house,
the kings, and the fan-bearers,
and the hunting dogs,
and the boats, and the rowers,
and his first wife, and his astronomer, and his favorite horse in the ground splinters with the weight of an eleventh snowfall.
You tell me there is meaning hidden in their best clothes.

101

Everyone in those days fell to consumption, and died indeterminate of pathology.

When you examine me, years from now postmortem, find the bone spur jutting from my knee. Write “possible limp” and do not be precise with more than measurement.
Do not weep
for my childless ischium.

Put numbers in my name, do not imagine a face where there is none.