Unofficial Confessions

D. A. Powell

Follow this and additional works at: https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.
I shared a rig with a cowboy at the junkyard. We sat on a freezer door. He was a jagged can and I got ripped.

Some creatures grow in darkness. Some flowers bloom at night. I am willing to be inappropriate. But not when it’s light.

Across the way, a man held Jupiter and his twelve moons up in a single glass. One was a boy moon. Oh, that astronomy.

I stood by the throne and gave that thirsty man my cup. He lifted it with one hand and tied off with the other.

Later, he come at me with a knife. I had to keep my sharp eye out. I did not sleep.

They asked me why didn’t you leave. Why didn’t I leave? In a word: his horse was the last horse in town. He put me up.