2014

All in the High Branches (Devotional)

Carol Ann Davis

Follow this and additional works at: http://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation
Available at: https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.7532

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.
All in the High Branches (Devotional)

The eye can’t but keep its hopping grief nor the ear its screeching child who won’t listen to reason all in the high branches hops a lyric complaint and can’t but be such a one by whom my sugar water my fake nectar in solo cup’s long neglected while in canopy someone worries tch-tch someone answers back blue-it blue-it nowhere but outward to chaos from here out little hopping grief all around catching in trees such grief in trees a thick privacy thickness into which the tch-tch of worry flies year that began in silence ending in this leftover racket and how could it not of its anniversary come singing blue-it blue-it we can’t but answer what can’t us back to whom we call O my sugar water my fake nectar in thinning effacement of the body can’t we but sleep inside the ruination of the present no Luke says from high in his chalk lighthouse no no no with dusty fingers he calls raging against all he’s yet to be told I won’t hear of it high up blue-it blue-it into the tch-tch and can’t but in highest branches make out the reciprocal’s thump-thump O thee of wings and smallest muscle give us one loud sound give us a high alarm that says back to normal calls the all clear though nothing’s normal and nothing will blue-it the heart beats blue-it the eye blue-it ear and blue moment’s nectar moment’s pretend