

2016

The Albatross

Charles Baudelaire

Follow this and additional works at: <https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview>

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

---

Recommended Citation

Baudelaire, Charles. "The Albatross." The Iowa Review 46.3 (2016): 73 Web.
Available at: <https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.7779>

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.

CHARLES BAUDELAIRE

The Albatross

Translated from the French by Sandra Simonds

A lot of times, I think things are really funny, Felix.
Take, for example, the albatross, that vast bird of the ocean.
Every time he goes on a trip, his native land
glistens and I ride far on surfaces of his love.

You can't dispose of that bird, nor can you compose the haunted rose light around his brutal white tongue.
Leave me alone, Felix. Leave me to my place on this coast of crystals and sea foam.

Bad, bad trip. I'm talking about these drugs and that beautiful bird, so comic and light in the gay air. I want to drink with him all night until he engulfs every coast in his distant clouds.

Poets are the princesses of the nude and the dark.
I hate my temper and all I seem to have left in my exile is this dumb laughter bouncing inside a sun of a million hues—
Oh how the crowd beats down on giants.