that churned the waters of the Colorado River from the Gulf of California to Wyoming between 1852 and 1916. The lifeline of many areas was the steamboat bringing supplies and carrying back millions of dollars in precious metals. It is ironic that steamboats aided railroad construction which helped speed their own demise. This book, lavishly illustrated, documents a colorful and important segment of the history of the American Southwest.

Riding in a motorhome furnished by the Winnebago, Inc. of Forest City, Iowa, the author and his family traveled the route of the Lewis & Clark trail. While civilization has altered most of the route, much of the beauty remains undisturbed. Using the journals of Lewis & Clark, the author combines their observations of 1804-06 with his own personal ones. Iowans are especially interested in the fact that the only casualty of the expedition, Sergeant Floyd, died on the Missouri River and was buried in what is now Sioux City. Today the Sergeant Floyd monument (a sandstone obelisk resembling the Washington Monument) stands as Iowa’s tribute to this expedition. Complementing the narrative are the drawings of flora, fauna, and scenery. Lewis & Clark would have enjoyed this book with its useful maps and listing of the sites and facilities available along the trail to the modern adventurer.
