CALL FOR STORE HOURS.
For the third annual Little Village Art Issue, the featured artists have decided to approach 2015 with an “anything goes” attitude toward predictive analysis. We may see potential connections, waxing and waning opportunities, new pathways through old growth, relationships between nature, space and humanity, lean on ancient patterns of prediction or leave things to chance. However it happens, we must proceed with confidence into an unforeseeable year. Welcome 2015! —Candida Pagan

Jarrett Mitchell is the manager of Wake Up Iowa City and the Cobra Verde Club Corporation. His work has appeared in publications by Art Forum, Frieze and Phaidon Press. His predictions for 2015 are his personal opinion and do not reflect the views of any of the brands or corporations under his management. Page 4

Sayuri Sasaki Hemann is a humble bumble human being who loves to make. Tactility is engrained in her hands and she is learning to coexist harmoniously with the digital world. She often considers herself a potted plant who has found a nice sunny spot in Iowa City. Page 10

Zoë Brown studied art at Maine College of Art and the University of Iowa. She enjoys painting, drawing, embroidery and mark-making. Zoë currently lives in Cedar Rapids. Check out her blog shitmydadwears.wordpress.com. Page 14

Candida Pagan is completing her MFA in Book Arts at the University of Iowa Center for the Book. She runs Digraph Press, a collaborative fine press endeavor, and frequently uses text and image in her own art. Her current body of work draws on developments in early cosmology and astronomy as well as contemporary astrology. Page 18

Donnie Bandy lives in Iowa City. You can usually catch him cruising somewhere around town on his bike. He prefers to be outside, but when he’s stuck inside he enjoys passing time scribbling at his desk. Page 22

Electronic Dance Music (EDM) has become one of the most vital scenes in American music today. Easy access to the entire recorded history of music has opened up new possibilities in this genre, and the rising artists of today can find inspiration in basically anything.

The Cold Flex Zone Tour makes its way to the Blue Moose on Jan. 16, featuring three talented, up-and-coming DJs and producers who represent an internet-driven renaissance that’s taken place in electronic music. All three of the co-headliners—The Hi-Yahs, BeazyTymes and SwaggleRock—are pushing electronic music in a new and exciting direction.

Hailing from Dallas, Texas, the Hi-Yahs describe themselves as, “a music duo that has traveled through space and time and descended from the heavens to make everyone dance.” Fans of trap have likely come upon the Hi-Yahs’ work in the past, but their music spans a much wider range of genres, including moombahton, electro and deep house.

2014 was a huge year for the Hi-Yahs. Starting with “So Much,” a collaborative track with producer Alex Young that was featured on the influential BBC Radio 1’s Diplo and Friends, the group blew up and began playing at festivals worldwide. The Hi-Yahs have since capitalized on that notoriety, producing a constant stream of noteworthy new tracks and remixes.

Chicago’s BeazyTymes also had a breakout year. The group gained wider exposure among music press and fans with a series of remixes of the indie-pop band The xx. “Unsound Mind”—a collaboration with Woolymammoth and released last month by record label Mad Decent—has also received a great deal of well-deserved attention. SwaggleRock from Buffalo, N.Y. is comprised of producers Buzz Trillington and Shooter McNappin and is also an act to watch in 2015.

It should come as no surprise that all three of these artists are either influenced by or directly born from hip hop just as much as they are dance music, a trend that can be seen throughout the North American EDM scene. While, over the past decade or so, EDM and hip hop have primarily existed as separate entities (with notable exceptions, of course), in recent years the two styles have begun to find new influence in one another—the influx of new ideas revitalizing and reinventing both genres as the boundaries are redrawn.

WINNERS

HAPPY NEW YEARS FROM THE DEERY BROTHERS IOWA CITY TEAM!
When Iowa Public Radio asked Peas and Carrot lead singer and guitarist Audrey Robinson who her vocal influences were during a recent in-studio interview, she snapped back, “NOT Janis Joplin!”

“Janis Joplin” is too often used as shorthand for any female singer who has a raw, bluesy edge, but Robinson’s sound is less hoarse belting and more dynamic rock and soul reminiscent of vocalists like Linda Perry, PJ Harvey and Brittany Howard of Alabama Shakes.

Drummer Nathan Lantz and Bassist Walt Goodknight deliver wave after wave of crashing cymbals and pulsing bass, perfectly capturing the relentless energy and emotion of Robinson’s song to an anonymous someone.

Big Girl Shoes is Peas and Carrot’s first EP release, and it has a loose, live, in-studio vibe that absolutely suits the exposed-nerve delivery of Robinson’s songs. Drummer Nathan Lantz and bassist Walt Goodknight deliver wave after wave of crashing cymbals and pulsing bass, perfectly capturing the relentless energy and emotion of Robinson’s song to an anonymous someone.

In the solo acoustic centerpiece “Jackson Soul,” Robinson sings about a disagreement gone on too long.

“Left my dishes in the sink, yeah, now it’s time to breathe / Looks like it’s my turn to concede / With my boots all laced up tight, I think I’ll just stay in tonight, howlin’ at the moon just like a dog.”

Her lyrics convey a last-minute change of heart, or at least holding on for a while before succumbing to the need to extend an olive branch.

On Big Girl Shoes, the unadorned and unadulterated testimony of the trials and tribulations of Robinson are laid bare before the listener. No evidence is left for the listener to figure out the exact stories behind the songs, but, damn—the aching, passionate emotions are riveting and compel repeat listens.

and soul. Here’s my prediction: This will be a year of renewal. A lot of other action happens without your awareness. For example, your tastebuds replace themselves every two weeks. You produce 200 billion red blood cells and 10 billion white blood cells every day. Every month the epidermis of your skin is completely replaced, and every 12 months your lungs are composed of a fresh set of cells. In 2015, you will continue to revitalize yourself in all these ways, but will also undergo a comparable regeneration of your mind and soul. Here’s my prediction: This will be a year of renaissance, rejuvenation and reinvention.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Even in normal times, you are a font of regeneration. Your ever-growing hair and fingernails are visible signs of your nonstop renewal. A lot of other action happens without your conscious awareness. For example, your tastebuds replace themselves every two weeks. You produce 200 billion red blood cells and 10 billion white blood cells every day. Every month the epidermis of your skin is completely replaced, and every 12 months your lungs are composed of a fresh set of cells. In 2015, you will continue to revitalize yourself in all these ways, but will also undergo a comparable regeneration of your mind and soul. Here’s my prediction: This will be a year of renaissance, rejuvenation and reinvention.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): “Sometimes I can feel my bones straining under the weight of all the lives I’m not living,” says a character in Jonathan Safran Foer’s novel Extremely Loud and Incredibly Close. If you have ever felt that way, Aquarius, I predict that you will get some relief in 2015. Your bones won’t be straining as much as they have in the past because you will be living at least one of the lives you have wanted to live but haven’t been able to before. How will you handle all the new lightness that will be available?

PISSCES (Feb. 19-March 20): “Erotomania” is a word for the erroneous fantasies people entertain when they imagine that a celebrity is in love with them. Laughable, right? Just because I have dreams of Game of Thrones actress Lena Headey texting me seductive notes doesn’t mean that she genuinely yearns for my companionship. And yet most of us, including you and me, harbor almost equally outlandish beliefs and misconceptions about all kinds of things. They may not be as far-fetched as those that arise from erotomania, but they are still out of sync with reality. The good news, Pisces, is that in 2015 you will have the best chance ever to become aware of and shed your delusions—even the long-running, deeply-rooted kinds.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Most salamanders reproduce by laying eggs, but the alpine salamander doesn’t. Females of that species give birth to live young after long pregnancies that may last three years. What does this have to do with you? Well, I expect you to experience a metaphorical pregnancy in the coming months. Even if you’re male, you will be gestating a project or creation or inspiration. And it’s important that you don’t let your incubation period drag on and on and on, as the alpine salamanders do. I suggest you give birth no later than July.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Maybe you have had a dream like this: You’re wandering around a house you live in, and at the end of a long hallway you come to a door you’ve never seen before. How could you have missed it in the past? It must have been there the whole time. You turn the knob, open the door, and slip inside. Amazing! The room is full of interesting things that excite your imagination. What’s more, on the opposite wall there’s another door that leads to further rooms. In fact, you realize there’s an additional section of the house you have never known about or explored. Whether or not you have had a dream like that, Taurus, I’m betting that in 2015, you will experience a symbolically similar series of events in your waking life.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Deathwatch beetles have a peculiar approach to the mating game. Their seduction technique consists of smacking their heads against a hard object over and over again. This generates a tapping sound that is apparently sexy to potential partners. I discourage you from similar behaviors as you seek the kind of love you want in 2015. The first rule of romantic engagement is this: Sacrificing or diminishing yourself may seem to work in the short run, but it can’t possibly lead to lasting good. If you want to stir up the best results, treat yourself with tenderness and respect.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Dieterich Buxtehude (1637-1707) was a German composer whose organ music is still played today. He was a major influence on a far more famous German composer, Johann Sebastian Bach (1685-1750). When Bach was a young man, he decided it was crucial for him to experience Buxtehude’s music first-hand. He took a leave of absence from his job and walked over 250 miles to the town where Buxtehude lived. There he received the guidance and inspiration he sought. In 2015, Sagittarius, I’d love to see you summon Bach’s determination as you go in quest of the teaching you want and need.
