1972

Pilgrims

Ray Amorosi

Follow this and additional works at: https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation
Available at: https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.1376

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.
AUGUST AFTERNOONS

One is led, in a darkness of oak through the virgin small ears of wheat to the bottom of a stone ladder

Kali known as the devourer is braced above with obsidian knives peeling the smaller feathers off her arms and legs this is the arrangement, prisoners and those born in the first harvest are allowed to sustain everything, hear the rain now more furious than her dry explosion of milkweed one wants the seeds of the great Babylonian grain god to come swelling out her eyes to discover the purple curls of her bright finger beads becoming more purple Kali refills the land the prophecy is lopped into a long bowl

PILGRIMS

The cripple wears a bell a step behind his mother her eyes shut on the snow she walks only on the toes of her left foot because it is bare he is staring at something about to crash through the window above them It is a window with five stars hooked on an anchor his hands slide down the soaked wood she is determined there will be no sound that whatever it is pass unnoticed

12 Ray Amorosi