1972

Dr. Soft on Marriage

Robert Sward

Follow this and additional works at: https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation
Available at: https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.1412

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.
DR. SOFT ON MARRIAGE

Your life depends on it.

It troubles the doctor less that women he knows and loves and is married to have been married before than that
priority
they put on marriage
where, for the doctor, maintenance is the most immediate fact in his life
that it's an institution he feels in his bones
that any incapacity
for marriage
to anything
is cause for concern for the doctor
is Dr. Soft
Dr. Soft on marriage.

The man the doctor is thinking of is Paul Blackburn and the city is New York and the gentleness
of someone
the gentleness
how, what there was, was shared that it was manly that there were no lies that the first writer he knew capable of love in this way was this man.

Robert Sward
Drano in the kitchen sink that lye never works to unclear anything
but is of use
solely as a precaution

that if it’s a confession the doctor is reading and a piece of literature that purports or pretends or appears to come out of that confessional the doctor’s choice is for the former and to hell with the other.

Similarly, regarding epigraphs quotes “from my sister’s dentist” and elsewhere
how nothing published in the last 75 years has been equal to its own epigraph.

More marvelous than anything I can imagine: being read. Anyone reading
any one word of this.