1973

A Child's Death

Jean Valentine

Follow this and additional works at: https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation
Available at: https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.1507

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.
A CHILD'S DEATH
for C., 1967

I remember the dark spaces, black sand islands rising on the x-rays: what I couldn’t touch!

Not like this world,
our old solid,
where we multiply;

not this blurred body merely her history.

REVOLUTION

Here is a man.
Behind him
dark, in front of him dark. The fuse the world lit races up his spine. Blows up his son who holds by him, his love of women,
his learning his wanting late now to be touched to touch.
An ordinary man. Thou red black white slight scattered ing o women’s animal-song o slant blown up drift arch dead white song white powder women rocking rocking nowhere to lay your head fox bird woman and man o come and out of nothing whiteness they come, tearing their shirts off, alone, together, touching, not touching, friends, who are the living who were the dead

Jean Valentine