The Perspiculum Worm

Robert Bly

Follow this and additional works at: https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.
TWO POEMS / ROBERT BLY

The Perspiculum Worm

And the shoots wildly stabbed in the barley, the tears that fall down my face, the reeds bending inside the river's veins, water that drops to the knees, the rooster boxed in his cage of pain, what comes forth without saying goodbye, the perspiculum worm curling and uncurling woven into his reedy universe of time, snow that pours down out of the mountain, the stiff anther that rises to meet the sun, the peony—rose and pink—opens in the mist, and only the hermit wandering alone sees it.