Turning Back

Michael Sheridan

Follow this and additional works at: http://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation
Available at: https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.2284

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.
Like a starfish like many tunnels
Which go on infinitely
In these several directions
Embracing the damp
The drunk
Holding on
To the waves
To the earth

Turning Back / Michael Sheridan

for my brother

We were born in a town no one famous came from.
The planet just dragged us around.

Often there was a deadness in the air—the stench of mayflies rising from the Mississippi, smoke from the paper mill riding any wind that strayed near shore.

Children grew older, married & multiplied.
No one said anything new.

We’ve left that town a hundred times for good.
Anywhere we go the sun comes up the same and in the same old place, like a woman used for years unfairly; the wind

still runs from leaf to leaf; we’ve seen other rivers turning in their beds & other lives going on routinely.

Sometimes we stop & touch each other, then reflect.