1977

Not Working

Debora Greger

Follow this and additional works at: https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview
Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation
Available at: https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.2294

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.
Not Working / Debora Greger

Father trained us to get up at seven o'clock. Now Irina wakes at seven and lies in bed at least till nine thinking. And she looks so serious!

Olga, in Three Sisters

In bed at noon, thinking hard about the pure life of meaning and the easy sleep of workmen, how sound it must be,

I am stopped by a whistling.
Could the wolf be at my door?

Or trampling the flowers under my window? No, it is much more familiar, the voice that calls,

“Irina, lazy one, put on your white dress.
This afternoon is no more beautiful than any other and I'm getting older.”

His face above the perennial bouquet blushes, matching the petals.
Feeling the weight of the future,

like an ox sunk in a muddy field,
I am slow to rise. Yesterday the man at my window took a common warbler for a wild canary.

That much I suspect. Do I want to spend days in the shade, nights under false sun?

Is being watched a kind of love?
Once I saw a field so dry it burst into flame. But that is another story.